PREFACE.

SINCE the publication of the cighth edition of the following Work, several acts of parliament have expired, or been repealed, and others passed, which have occasioned considerable alterations in the practice of the different courts. Some new rules of court have also been made, during that period, and upwards of eight hundred cases published, on practical subjects.

The restrictions on cash payments under the Bank acts having finally ceased, it is no longer necessary to negative a tender of the debt in bank notes, in an affidavit to hold to bail. The alien acts having expired, aliens are now no longer privileged from arrest. The statute 51 Geo. III. c. 124. having also been suffered to expire, an act was made in the last session of parliament , to prevent arrests upon mesne process, where the debt or cause of action is under twenty pounds; and to regulate the practice of arrests. By this act, no person can, in general, be arrested or held to special bail, where the cause of action is less than twenty pounds; nor, in Wales or the counties palatine, unless the process be duly marked and indorsed for bail in a sum not less than fifty pounds: And where the writ or process is issued by a plaintiff in his own person, the sheriff shall not execute the same, unless it be delivered to him by some attorney of one of the courts of record at Westminster, &c. and indorsed with the name and place of abode of such attorney. The defendant is allowed, by this statute, to deposit and pay into court the sum indorsed upon the writ, together with an additional sum for costs, to abide the event of the suit, in lieu of putting in and perfecting special bail: And where the plaintiff does not proceed by capias against the person, but by original or other writ, and summons or attachment, or by subpæna and attachment thereupon, against any person not having privilege of parliament, the same mode of proceeding is given by this statute, as was before provided by the 51 Geo. III. c. 124.

The strong duties on law proceedings were repealed, by the statute 5 Geo. IV. c. 41. And the statutes relating to bankrupts and insolvent debtors having been repealed, except in certain cases, the laws respecting the former, and for the relief of the latter, were amended and consolidated, by the statutes 6 Geo. IV. c. 16 and 7 Geo. IV. c. 57. The laws relating to the customs having also been repealed, by the statute 6 Geo. IV. c. 105. an act was made for the prevention of smuggling 2; in which there are clauses relative to the limitation of actions against officers of the army, navy, or marines, customs or excise, or any person acting under the directions of the commissioners of the customs, for any thing done in the execution or by reason of their offices; and requiring notice in writing to be given to such officers, one calendar month before the writ sued out, and enabling them to tender amends, plead the general issue, and bring money into court, &c. The statutes of hue and cry, &c. having also been repealed, by the statute 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 27. an act was made b, for consolidating and amending the laws in England, relative to remedies against the hundred, for the damage done by persons riotously and tumultuously assembled, (for which alone the hundred is now liable): and a summary mode of proceedPREFACE. iii ing is provided by that act, before two justices of the peace, in cases where the damage does not exceed thirty pounds.

Other acts have been made, affecting the jurisdiction and practice of the courts, of which the following are instances: First, the act to enlarge and extend the power of the judges of the several courts of Great Sessions in Wales, and to amend the laws relating to the same *: Secondly, Mr. Peel's act, for consolidating and amending the laws relative to jurors, and juries b: Thirdly, the acts to abolish the sale of offices, in the courts of King's Bench and Common Pleas, and to make provision for the chief justices; for augmenting the salaries of the Master of the Rolls, and Vice Chancellor, the Chief Baron of the court of Exchequer, and the puisne judges and barons of the courts in Westminster Hall d, &c.; and to authorize the purchase of the office of receiver and comptroller of the seal of the courts of King's Bench and Common Pleas, and of custos brevium of the latter court : Fourthly, the act for preventing frivolous writs of * error ; by requiring that upon any judgment to be given in any of the courts at Westminster, or in the counties palatine and great sessions in Wales, in any personal action, execution shall not be stayed or delayed by writ of error or supersedeas thereupon, without the special order of the court, or some judge thereof, unless a recognizance, with condition according to the statute 3 Jac. I. c. 8. be first acknowledged in the same court: And lastly, Lord Tenterden's acts, for rendering a written memorandum necessary to the validity of certain promises and engagements <sup>8</sup>; and to prevent a failure of justice, by reason of variances between records, and writings produced in evidence in support thereof b.

iv PREFACE.

In preparing the present edition, it has been the Author's endeavour to render his work less unworthy of the very favourable reception it has met with from the profession. The whole has been carefully revised, and such corrections made as appeared to be necessary, as well in the text, as in the notes and references. The several acts of parliament and rules of court, which have been made since the publication of the last edition, are introduced in the present; together with such of the practical decisions of the courts, as were published before the work went to press, or could be inserted while it was printing off: The rest are given at the end, by way of Addenda, together with some other matters which were inadvertently omitted, with directions for incorporating them; and are for the most part referred to in the Index. These decisions are brought down to the end of Michaelmas term last, in the King's Bench, and Exchequer; and to the end of Hilary term, in the Common Pleas. References are also made to the second volume of the reports of the late Lord Kenyon; and the references to text writers, and books of practice, &c. have been altered throughout to the latest editions.

The general arrangement of the work is pretty much the same in this edition as the last, except that the twentieth chapter of the last edition, which treated of motions and rules peculiar to the action of ejectment, and affidavits in support of them, and of such motions and rules as were not necessarily connected with any suit, has been divided; and its contents transferred to the twentieth and last chapters in the present edition. The thirty-fifth and thirty-sixth chapters also, of the last edition, have been divided, and now constitute three chapters, being the thirty-fourth, thirty-fifth, and thirty-sixth, in the present edition; one of which treats of the record of nisi prius, jury process, common and special juries, and views; another, of the brief, evidence, and witnesses; and the third, of entering the cause for trial, and references to arbitration.

The insertion of the new statutes, rules of court and cases, has necessarily occasioned considerable alterations throughout the work; and particularly in the first, second, sixth, tenth, twelfth, fifteenth, twentieth, twenty-third, and thirty-fourth chapters. In the first chapter, several new statutes have been referred to, respecting the mode of bringing actions by parish officers, and by or against trustees, and public companies, &c. the limitation of actions for wrongs, and notices of action, &c.; and the cases decided on the statutes of limitations have been newly arranged. In the second chapter, a full account is given of the offices and officers of the courts of King's Bench and Common Pleas, with their appointment and duties, as regulated by the statutes 6 Geo. IV. c. 82, 3. & 89. And, in the sixth chapter, the mode of proceeding against traders having privilege of parliament, by the statute 6 Geo. IV. c. 16. is pointed out; and also the remedy by action against hundredors, on the statute 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 31. for damages occasioned by persons riotously and tumultuously assembled, with the summary mode of proceeding on that statute, before two justices, where the damage does not exceed thirty pounds.

The law of arrest is fully treated of in the tenth chapter, as depending on the statute 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 71.; and in this chapter the several cases are considered, in which bankrupts and insolvent debtors are privileged from arrest, by the statutes 6 Geo. IV. c. 16. and 7 Geo. IV. c. 57. With regard to the former, their privilege from arrest is considered in a three-fold point of view:

vi PREFACE.

First, in coming to surrender, and during the time allowed for finishing their examination; secondly, after the time allowed them for these purposes is expired, and before they have obtained their certificates; and thirdly, after their certificates have been signed and allowed by the Lord Chancellor: And the bankrupt being discharged from all debts proveable under the commission, it was thought that it might not be deemed an improper digression, to consider what debts may or may not be proved under it. The privilege of insolvent debtors from arrest is also considered in this chapter, first, under occasional insolvent acts; secondly, under the earlier permanent acts; and thirdly, under the last general insolvent acts. Geo. IV. c. 57.

The twelfth chapter, on the subject of bail, has been carefully revised, and corrected; and a new arrangement is made therein, of the cases relative to the means of discharging them from liability on their recognizance. In the fifteenth chapter, a view is taken of the several acts of parliament for the relief of insolvent debtors; and particularly of that to which they are entitled under the last general insolvent act, with the mode of proceeding thereon: In the twentieth chapter, the annuity acts and the decisions thereon are introduced, under the head of staying proceedings; and, in the twenty-third chapter, some material alterations have been made in the arrangement of the cases respecting the inspection and copies of written instruments, books, court rolls, &c.

In the thirty-fourth chapter, the qualifications, disqualifications, and exemptions of jurors are considered; with the mode of returning and impanelling common juries, and of striking special juries, as it existed before, and is now regulated by the statute 6 Geo. IV.

c. 50. and also the time and mode of summoning jurors in general, and obtaining a view; and, in the thirty-seventh chapter, the method of balloting for and swearing common jurors, at the trial, is pointed out, and the adding of talesmen. &c.

Besides the additions and alterations that have been noticed, and which were occasioned by the new statutes, rules and cases, there are others, in the thirty-seventh, fortieth, and last chapters, which depend on former statutes and decisions. In the thirtyseventh chapter, the author has carefully collected and arranged all the cases which have been determined on the measure of damages, in actions upon contracts, and for wrongs, immediate and consequential; and, as incident to the consideration of damages, in actions upon contracts for the non-payment of money, there is a collection of the cases in which interest is or is not recoverable. fortieth chapter, the principal court of requests acts have been referred to, and the acts by which their jurisdiction is extended to sums not exceeding five pounds, or to sums of larger amount, with the decisions thereon: and, in a previous chapter, there are references to the acts by which the decree or judgment may be removed from courts of requests, to obtain execution thereon, in the superior courts.

In the last chapter, a practical view is taken of the action of ejectment, which is treated of under the following heads: First, the general nature and object of the action: Secondly, by and against whom it may be brought: Thirdly, for what things an ejectment will lie, and how they should be described: Fourthly, the title necessary to support it, and herein of the legal estate, and right of entry: Fifthly, within what time an ejectment must be brought: Sixthly, the remedy by entry, without suit; and in what cases an actual entry, and demand of rent, were formerly necessary, and must now be made: Seventhly, the ancient mode of proceeding in ejectment, and in what cases it is still necessary; with the method of proceeding in the case of a vacant possession: Eighthly, the present mode of proceeding against the casual ejector, to judgment by default and execution, when the tenant, or his landlord, does not appear: Ninthly, the appearance of the tenant, or his landlord; and the subsequent proceedings thereon, to trial, final judgment, and execution: And lastly, the mode of reviving the judgment by scire facias, or of reversing it by writ of error.

But that which chiefly distinguishes the present from all former editions, is the marginal notes, or abstracts of the contents of the work. The making of these notes has been attended with considerable trouble; but it is hoped they will be found useful, in facilitating research.

Amid such a variety of new and important matter, making altogether more than a tenth part of the whole work, some errors must necessarily have occurred: These the author trusts will be viewed by a liberal profession with their accustomed candour; especially when the difficulty is considered, of altering the text of a work already composed, and that a great part of his time has been necessarily occupied with the business of his clients.

The whole work has been re-paged, and references made throughout to the proposed new edition of the Practical Forms, which is in a state of considerable forwardness, so as to make them correspond with the present edition of the Practice, to which they are intended as an Appendix. The tables of statutes, and general rules of court, orders and notices, prefixed to the work, have been carefully revised, corrected, and re-paged; with the tables of the principal reports of printed cases referred to therein. By these tables it will appear, that there are nearly five hundred statutes referred to in the following work, and more than that number of general rules of court, orders and notices. The whole number of printed cases amounts to upwards of ten thousand, besides those which have been published since the last edition; and the original or MSS. cases are nearly five hundred. The Index also, in which the new matter has been introduced, has been carefully revised, altered, and re-paged; and some of the principal titles have been new modelled and enlarged, particularly those relating to Affidavits of the cause of Action, Bail, Bankrupt, Court of Requests Acts, Damages, Ejectment, Evidence, Great Sessions, Hundredors, Insolvent Debtors, Interest, Jury, Limitation of Actions, Officers, Offices, and Staying Proceedings, &c.

Upon the whole, no pains have been spared, to improve the present edition; and it is now submitted to the profession, as exhibiting in a connected point of view, the Practice of the courts of King's Bench and Common Pleas, in personal actions, and ejectment; with the rules, and modern decisions, on the plea side of the court of Exchequer; particularly noticing the changes it has undergone during the reigns of his late and present Majesty: of which it may with truth be affirmed, that in no period of our history has the law been better administered, or the courts of justice filled with more able and upright judges.

INTRODUCTION.

BY way of introduction to the following work, it may not be improper to take a cursory view of the proceedings in personal actions, in the courts of King's Bench and Common Pleas; and the practice by which they are regulated, from the commencement of the suit, to the obtaining of final judgment and execution; and to give some account of the origin and progress of the work, and the changes it has undergone in the different editions.

The general nature of an action is thus given by an elegant writer on the law and constitution of England*. "A person, (let us suppose,) who has a cause of action, either in a right detained, or an injury done, is determined to bring his action; and, by his attorney, takes out process against the party complained of; in consequence of which, the party complained of (whom we call the defendant,) either puts in common or special bail, as the case requires. The defendant being thus secured, the plaintiff declares, in proper form, the nature of his case. The defendant answers this declaration; and the charge and defence, by due course of pleading, are brought to one or more plain simple facts. These facts, arising out of the pleadings, and thence called issues, come next to be tried by a jury. The jury having heard the evi"dence upon the issue before them, find (we will suppose,) a ver"dict for the plaintiff: On that verdict, judgment is afterwards "entered. The plaintiff's costs of suit are then taxed, by the "officer of the court; and the judgment is put in execution, by le"vying on the defendant's effects, the damages given by the jury, "and the costs allowed by the court; which being done, there is an

"end of the suit, and both parties are once more out of court."

The principal proceedings in an action are first, the warrant of attorney, to prosecute or defend; secondly, the process used for bringing the delandant into court; thirdly, his appearance and bail; fourthly, the pleadings, beginning with the declaration; fifthly, the issue; sixthly, the trial, or determination of the issue; seventhly, the judgment; and eighthly, the execution: To which may be added, the proceedings in scire facias to revive the judgment, or in error to reverse it; though these are rather to be considered as distinct actions, or proceedings, arising out of, than as parts of the original suit. The above proceedings are from time to time entered on the rolls of the court; which thence take their denomination of the warrant of attorney roll, the process roll, the recognizance roll, the imparlance, plea, or issue roll, the nisi prius roll or record, the judgment roll, (on which latter is entered the award of execution,) the scire facias roll, and the roll of proceedings on writs of error, and false judgment.

Subordinate to these principal proceedings, there are others of an auxiliary nature, which occur in the course of a suit; such as, in bailable actions, the arrest and bail-bond, with the proceedings thereon, or against the sheriff, to compel him to return the writ, and bring in the body. These happen before the plaintiff has declared absolutely. After declaration and before plea, the defendant, in order to prepare for his defence, is, under circumstances, allowed to crave oyer of deeds, &c. or copies of written instruments, call for the particulars of the plaintiff's demand, or claim inspection of public books, court rolls, &c.; or he may move the court to change the venue, consolidate actions, strike out superfluous counts, or bring money into court. After issue and before trial, the plaintiff should give notice of trial, sue out the jury process, and make up and pass the record of nisi prius: and each party should prepare a brief for counsel, and subpæna his witnesses. After trial and before judgment, the unsuccessful party may move the court for a new trial, or in arrest of judgment; or for judgment non obstante veredicto, a repleader, or venire facias de novo.

The variations in the proceedings are occasioned, first, by the nature of the action, and the parties by or against whom it is brought; as whether it be founded in contract or tort, or be brought by or against one or more plaintiffs or defendants, by the assignees of a bankrupt or insolvent debtor, or by or against baron and feme, surviving partners, executors or administrators, heirs or devisees, &c.: Secondly, by the mode of commencing the action; as whether it be commenced originally in the King's Bench or Common Pleas, or removed thither from an inferior court: and, in the former case, whether it be commenced by original writ, bill of Middlesex or lutitat, capias quare clausum fregit, or attachment of privilege, or by bill exhibited to the court, and brought against common persons, or peers of the realm, members of the House of Commons, corporations, hundredors, attornies, officers of the court, or prisoners in the actual custody of the sheriff or marshal: Thirdly, by the nature of the process used for bringing the defendant into court; which is either a mere summons, an attachment or distringus against his property, or a capies against his person; which latter process, in point of form, is common or special, and in effect is bailable or not bailable; and upon a bailable capias, the defendant is either taken, or stands out to process of outlawry: Fourthly, by the appearance of the parties; and whether they prosecute or defend the action in person or by attorney, or, in case of infancy, by prochein amy or guardian: Fifthly, by the course which the proceedings take; and whether the action be prosecuted, or abate by the death of the parties; or the plaintiff voluntarily abandon it by a discontinuance, nolle prosequi, stet processus, or cassetur billa vel breve; or make default, and suffer judgment of non pros for not declaring, replying, or entering the issue. It judgment as in case of a nonsuit for not proceeding to trial; or the defendant compromise or compound the action, confess it, or let judgment go by default.

If the action be prosecuted, the variations in the proceedings are occasioned, Sixthly, by the nature of the declaration, and subsequent pleadings; as whether the declaration be common or special, and consist of one or more counts, and whether it be in chief or by the bye, and delivered or filed absolutely or de bene esse, and whether the defendant plead or demur thereto; and, if he plead, whether it be to the jurisdiction of the court, in abatement, or in bar; and if the latter, whether he plead one or more pleas, and whether they be general or special; and if special, whether the replication thereto be in denial, or confession and avoidance, or by way of estoppel, or new assign the injury complained of; and whether there be any rejoinder, surrejoinder, rebutter, or surrebutter, and of what it consists: Seventhly, by the nature of the issue, joined upon the pleadings; as whether it be an issue in fact or in law; and if in fact, whether it be triable by the court, upon nul tiel record; by a jury, upon pleadings concluding to the country; or by the bishop's certificate, upon a plea of ne unques accouple, &c.: Eighthly, by the mode of trial, and the proceedings in the course of it; as whether it be at bar or nisi prius, or by a common or special jury, or the defendant at the trial plead puis darrein continuance, or the parties agree to withdraw a juror, or refer the cause to arbitration, or there be a nonsuit or verdict, and if a verdict, whether it be general or special, or there be a special case, bill of exceptions, or demurrer to evidence: Ninthly, by the nature of the judgment; which is either for the plaintiff or defendant; for the former by confession, non sum informatus, or nihil dicit, for the latter on a non pros, discontinuance, nolle prosequi, cassetur billa vel breve, retraxit, nonsuit, or as in case of a nonsuit, and for either party upon demurrer, nul tiel record, verdict, or the bishop's certificate: Lastly, by the species of execution; as whether it be by fieri facias against the defendant's goods, by capias ad satisfaciendum against his person, by elegit against his goods and a moiety of his lands, or by extendi facias, or extent, against his body, lands and goods, or in some cases against his lands and goods, or lands only.

The practice of the court, by which the proceedings in an action are governed, is founded on ancient and immemorial usage, (which may not improperly be termed the common law of practice,) regulated from time to time by rules and orders, acts of parliament, and judicial decisions. The practice is the law of the court, and as such is a part of the law of the land*; and it has been so strictly adhered to, that in the case of Bewdley†, a practice of seven years only was allowed to prevail against the express words of an act of parliament‡. The rules and orders of the court are either such as are made for the regulation of its general practice, or such as apply only to the proceedings in particular causes. The general rules are confined in their operation to the court in which they are made; and for the most part respect the mode of conducting the proceedings. Hence we find, that acts of parliament are sometimes necessary, to introduce regulations extending to all the courts, or creating some change or alteration in the proceedings themselves. And as questions arise respecting the regularity of the proceedings, the courts are called upon to settle, by judicial decisions, the course of their own practice, or to fix the construction of the rules or acts of parliament which have been made respecting it.

Such is the nature of practice: upon which it is observable, that as the actions and proceedings in general are the same, in all the superior courts of common law, there must necessarily be a great uniformity in the practice of each; and especially when it is considered, that the courts have in many instances adopted the same general rules, and are governed by the same acts of parliament, in the construction of which their decisions are for the most part similar. The principal differences arise from the original constitution of each particular court, its jurisdiction and officers, and the peculiar rules laid down for regulating its proceedings; and they consist for the most part in the nature of the process used for bringing in the defendant, &c. and the manner in which it is returnable, the times prescribed or allowed for particular purposes, and the modes of transacting business by the court or its officers*.

In the following work, it is the author's intention to treat of personal actions, and the various means of commencing, prosecuting, and defending them, in the courts of King's Bench and Common Pleas, and occasionally in the court of Exchequer of Pleas: And with that view, he has considered the proceedings, in the order in which they present themselves, and follow one another, in the course of the suit; and has endeavoured to explain, not only the principal proceedings, but also such as are of a subordinate nature, with all the variations attendant upon each, by a methodical arrangement of the several acts of parliament, rules of court, and judicial decisions respecting them. In stating the mode of commencing the suit, he has attended to the jurisdiction of the courts, as it is exercised by original writ, bill, or attachment of privilege. The proceedings against peers of the realm, corporations and hundredors, are classed under the head of proceedings by original writ, to which outlawry is considered as an incident; and the proceedings against members of the House of Commons, on the statute 12 & 13 W. III. c. 3. as well as against attornies and officers of the court, and, in the King's Bench, against prisoners in the actual custody of the sheriff or marshal, under that of proceedings by bill.

The doctrine of pleas and pleading, and of demurrers, amendments and jeofails, is considered, with reference to the different actions, so far as appeared to be necessary for understanding the practice of the courts: And the reader will here find a full account of the practice on motions, and the cases in which the courts will set aside or stay the proceedings, the subject of arbitration, and the law of damages and costs, the doctrine of extents, in chief and in aid, with the proceedings in scire facias, and error. The proceedings in criminal cases in general, and in real and mixed actions, being foreign to the purpose of this work, are only incidentally mentioned in the course of it. The doctrine of attachments, however, is considered, as it arises out of, and is connected with, the proceedings in civil suits: A collection will be found, towards the end of the first volume, of all the cases determined by the court of Common Pleas, on the amendment of fines and recoveries: And the practice in the action of ejectment is fully treated of in the last chapter.

This work was originally published in three parts: The first part made its appearance in November 1790; and was received by the profession, in a manner highly flattering to its author. This part contained the whole of the proceedings in personal actions, in the court of King's Bench, previous to the plea; together with all that was peculiar to the proceedings by and against attornies and officers of the court, against peers of the realm, and members of the house of commons, upon the writ of habeas corpus, and against prisoners in the actual custody of the sheriff, or marshal, &c. In the second part, which was published in November 1794, the proceedings at large were continued, from the demand of plea, to final judgment and execution; and the third part, which treated of the proceedings in scire facias and error, was published in November 1798.

In the following year, a second edition of the whole work was called for: in which some parts of it were considerably enlarged, particularly those which treated of actions and declarations; of the doctrine of arrest; of the proceedings against the sheriff, to compel him to return the writ, and bring in the body; of attornies, and the mode of their admission, with their duties, privileges, and disabilities; of the practice on motions; and the judgment and execution against heirs and tertenants.

In the third edition, which was published in October 1803, a new .Chapter was inserted, on the removal of causes from inferior courts; by writ of certiorari and habeas corpus, from such as were of record, and by writ of pone, recordari facias loquelam, or accedas ad curiam, from such as were not of record: And this edition was not confined altogether to the practice of the court of King's Bench; but contained an account of the means of commencing actions in the court of Common Pleas: and references were occasionally made to the rules of that court, and more frequently to the cases of practice determined therein, as reported by Lord Chief Justice Willes, and other subsequent reporters.

The fourth edition was published in January 1808. In this was comprised the substance of all the rules and orders of the court of King's Bench, on the subject of practice, from the beginning of the reign of James the 1st, down to that period; and in addition to those of the Common Pleas, which were before referred to, from the printed collection, ending in 1743, it contained all the subsequent rules of that court, many of which were never before published.

Still, however, the publication related principally to the practice of the court of King's Bench. The Author had originally intended to treat of the practice of both courts: but was deterred from the execution of his design, by the difficulty of the undertaking, and a fear of failure from attempting too much. Encouraged, however, by the success he met with, he afterwards inserted some of the more recent rules and decisions of the court of Common Pleas; and in the fifth edition, published in November 1812, he endeavoured to incorporate the whole of its practice with that of the King's Bench. For this purpose, and with a view to the differences between the practice of the two courts, which will be noticed hereafter, particular attention was paid to the constitution of the court of Common Pleas, its jurisdiction and officers, and the process used for bringing in the defendant, &c. And besides some of the earlier cases of practice, most of those reported by Sir George Cooke, the author of the Practical Register, and Mr. Secondary Barnes, were referred to; and all that were to be found in the reports of Lord Chief Justice Willes, Mr. Serjeant Wilson, Mr. Justice Blackstone, Mr. Henry Blackstone, Messrs. Bosanquet & Puller, and Mr. William Pyle Taunton: And lastly, so much of the official practice was added, as the Author could collect from the books upon the subject, or was suggested by his own experience and observation.

In the sixth edition, which appeared in January 1817, the proceedings in actions by and against attornies, and against prisoners in custody of the sheriff, &c. and for the removal of causes from inferior courts, were placed before the declaration, and time for pleading in ordinary cases; and some other transpositions were made, for the sake of perspicuity, and in order more clearly to connect the different parts of the subject. The law and practice of arrest were treated of altogether, in the ninth Chapter; and the motions and rules of the courts were newly arranged, in the cighteenth; which also included the doctrine of attachments, with the mode of proceeding thereon, and some addition to the practice by summons and order. In a subsequent Chapter, a general view was taken of the rolls of the courts, on which issues and other matters of record are entered, with the entries thereon, and by whom, and in what manner they are made, and the time and mode of bringing in and docketing them; and, in the Chapter on executions, the writ of retorno habendo in replevin was treated of, as well as the writ of habere facias possessionem in ejectment. The stamp duties on legal proceedings, which have been since abolished, were also carefully stated in that edition, from the last general stamp act.

In the seventh edition, which was published in January 1821,

But skip to fight but the state of

besides other important alterations and additions, which are particularly noticed in the preface thereto, the execution by levari facias, and the law and practice of extents, in chief and in aid, with the proceedings thereon, for the crown or its debtor to obtain execution, or for the defendant or a third person to resist them, were made the subject of a separate Chapter; and, in the following one, the writ of scire facias for the king was treated of, with the proceedings thereon, for the recovery of his debts, or obtaining a repeal of letters patent.

In the eighth edition, which was published in June 1824, besides bringing down the acts of parliament, rules of court, and practical decisions, to the end of Michaelmas term preceding, some further important alterations and additions were made. The third Chapter was divided, and confined, in that edition, to the admission, enrolment, certificates, and re-admission of attornies; their privileges, disabilities, and duties, with the consequences of their misbehaviour. The remainder of that Chapter, consisting of the proceedings in actions by and against attornies, &c. and for the recovery and taxation of their costs, was made the subject of a separate one, being the fourteenth. The numerous decisions respecting attornies and bail, occasioned considerable alterations and additions in the third and twelfth Chapters; and in the nineteenth, there was a new and copious arrangement of the cases in which attachments for contempt might be moved for. The Chapter in the former editions, on " motions and rules, &c. and the practice by summons and order, &c." was also divided; and an additional one formed out of it, being the twentieth in the eighth edition, on "motions and rules, &c. peculiar to the action of ejectment, and affidavits in support of them, and such motions and rules as were not necessarily connected with any suit;" in which Chapter was included a full account of the motion and rule for setting aside an annuity, and delivering up the securities to be cancelled, &c. with the decisions of the courts, on the statutes 17 Geo. III. c. 26. 53 Geo. III. c. 141. and 3 Geo. IV. c. 92. And, in the thirty-fifth Chapter, an outline was given of written evidence, referring to the different books in which the subject was more fully treated of. That edition too was greatly improved by the insertion of some very valuable notes, and references to MSS. cases of practice, never before published, which were kindly communicated to the Author by Mr. Justice Holroyd. Some references were also made therein to the reports of Sir Orlando Bridgman, and to the first volume of those of the late Lord Kenyon. Of the alterations and improvements in the present edition, a full account is given in the Preface.

The general order of the proceedings is the same in the courts of King's Bench and Common Pleas: and the reader will observe, that, without breaking in upon that order, the author has first of all treated of the practice that is common to both, and then of what is peculiar to each, or different in one from the other of them. When the practice is the same in both courts, it is in general so stated, by using the word "courts" in the plural number; and where the peculiarity or difference between them is considerable, it is commonly made the subject of a distinct paragraph; but otherwise it is noticed in the same paragraph, and most frequently at the end of it. In referring to the rules, they are marked with the initials of the courts to which they belong; and in citing the cases, the court in which they were decided is in general mentioned. It should still be remembered however, that the practice was originally written for, and confined to the court of King's Bench: and hence, where the " court" is mentioned in the singular number, it must be understood to mean that court, unless the subject matter appear by the context, or reference to the notes, to relate to the practice of both courts, or be confined to that of the court of Common Pleas. Whenever the practice of the Exchequer of Pleas is introduced, that court is always particularly mentioned.

For the original cases referred to in the course of the work, the profession are chiefly indebted to Mr. Justice Holroyd, the late Mr. Serjeant Runnington, the late Mr. George Wilson, one of his majesty's learned counsel, Mr. Abbot, (now Lord Colchester,) when at the bar, Mr. William Elias Taunton, and Messrs. Maule & Selwyn; whose initials are added in the Table, to the names of the cases they respectively furnished*. The few which are not marked, were communicated singly, by other friends, at different times.

* The cases of Mr. Justice Holroyd are from M. 16 to E. 37 Geo. III.; those of Mr. Serjeant Runnington, from E. 18 to M. 27 Geo. III.; those of Mr. Wilson, from M. 22 to T. 31 Geo. III.; those of Mr. Abbot, from E. 32 to E. 39 Geo. III.; those of Mr. Taunton, from H. 40 to M. 49 Geo. III.; and those of Messrs. Maule and Selwyn, from E. 56 to T. 57 Geo. III. inclusive.

CHAP. I.

Of Actions, and the Time limited for their Commence 1 MENT; and of Notices of Action, &c.

ACTIONS are commonly divided into criminal, or such as concern pleas of the crown, and civil, or such as concern common pleas. And these latter are again divided into real, personal, and mixed actions. In a real action, the proceedings are in rem, for the recovery of real property only; in a personal action, they are in personam, for the recovery of specific chattels, or of some pecuniary satisfaction or recompence; and in a mixed action, they are in rem et personam, for the recovery of real property, and damages for withholding it. Again, in real actions, there is a distinction between those founded on the possession, and those founded on the absolute property or rightb.

Account lies, at common law, against a guardian in socage, bailiff, or Account. receiver, to compel an account of profits, or monies received by the defendantd; and by the statute 4 & 5 Anne, c. 16. § 27. it may be maintained against the executors and administrators of every guardian, bailiff, and receiver, and also by one joint-tenant and tenant in common, his executors and administrators, against the other, as bailiff, for receiving more than comes to his just share or proportion, and against his executors and administrators. The proceedings in this action being difficult, diletter, and expensive, it is now seldom used, especially as the party in general a more beneficial remedy, by action for money had and extend. &c.; or, if the matter be of a complicated nature, by resorting court of equity. It has been ruled at Nisi Prius, that an action of assumpsit cannot be maintained on a running account between merchants, or a merchant and his broker; the proper remedy being by action of account<sup>2</sup>: but, in a subsequent case, it was holden, that whatever doubt might have existed on the subject a century back, the action of assumpsit, for the balance due on the result of numerous transactions, had been so long maintained, that it was now much too late to make any objection to it<sup>5</sup>; and it seems to be now settled, that assumpsit will lie for the balance of an account, however voluminous it may be, and that the plaintiff is not obliged to bring an action of account.

Assumpsit.

To pay money.

Assumpsit, which is now become the most common action of any upon contracts<sup>d</sup>, lies for the recovery of damages, upon promises, express or implied, without deed. These promises are various, according to the subject matter of them, and the considerations upon which they are founded. In general, they are to pay or repay money, or to do or forbear some other act. Promises to pay money are by far the most numerous of any, and may be classed in the following order: First, the indebitatus assumpsit, on a promise to pay a precedent debt, for the sale, exchange or hire of cattle or goods, necessaries, works and services, or monies; or for the sale, assignment, or use of lands, &c.: Secondly, the quantum meruit, or valebant, on a promise to pay the plaintiff, for the like considerations, as much money as he deserved to have, or, for goods, &c. as much as they were reasonably worth: Thirdly, the insimul computassent, on a promise to pay the sum due on an account stated between the parties. The above are usually denominated common assumpsits: Fourthly, the assumpsit on a promise to pay money, in consideration of a legal liability to pay it, which may be termed the liability assumpsite; as upon a bill of exchange, (inland or foreign,) banker's draft, promissory note, bye-law, or foreign judgment; or for a fine on admission to copyhold premises, legacy charged on land, toll, port-duty, contribution to party-walls, &c. : Fifthly, mutual promises, which are either to pay money, as on wagers or feigned issues, or to do some other act, as to marry, &c. or to perform special agreements, charter-parties, policies of assurance, or awards; the breach of which may consist either in the non-payment of money, or the non-

The difference between the indebitatus and liability assumpsit is, that in the former, the promise is founded on a pre-existing debt, the consideration for which is stated generally; but in the latter, the circumstances which induce the defendant's liability, are set forth specially in the declaration.

The promises that have been hitherto mentioned, are for the most part implied: those which follow are generally express.

performance of some other act: Sixthly, special assumpsits, on promises to pay money, founded on some consideration executed or executory; as in consideration of marriage, the sale, exchange or hire of cattle or goods, necessaries, forbearance, works and services, or indemnity; or for the sale, assignment, or use of lands, &c.: which promises may be made either by the party benefited, or by third persons. COVENANT lies for the recovery of damages, upon contracts by deed. Covenant. This action is founded upon articles of agreement, awards, charter-parties of affreightment, policies of assurance, indentures of apprenticeship, leases, mortgages, &c.; and is either for the non-payment of money, or for not doing or forbearing some other act.

And lastly, on promises of indemnity.

Annuity is an action which lies for the recovery of an annuity, or Annuity. - yearly payment of a certain sum of money, granted to another in fee, for life or years, charging the person of the grantor only; and it may be brought by the grantee or his heirs, or his or their grantee, against the grantor or his heirs *. This action is at present out of use, being superseded by the action of debt or covenant. But debt does not lie at common law, nor by stat. 8 Anne, c. 14. § 4. for the arrears of an annuity or yearly rent, devised to A. payable out of lands, during the life of B., to whom the lands are devised for life, B. paying the same thereout, so long as the estate of freehold continues b. Actions for wrongs.

Case.

To persons.

Actions for wrongs are Case, Detinue, Replevin, and Trespass vi et armis.

Actions on the case are founded on the common law, or given by act of parliament; and lie to recover damages, for consequential wrongs or torts, to persons individually or relatively; or to real or personal property, or some right or privilege incident thereto. These actions are either ex delicto, or quasi ex contractu: and they are said to arise from malfeazance, or doing what the defendant ought not to do; non-feazance, or not doing what he ought to do; and mis-feazance, or doing what he ought to do, improperly; and they are commonly for doing or omitting something contrary to the general obligation of law, the particular rights or duties of the parties, or some implied contract between them. persons individually, ex delicto, they are for some consequential hurt or damage, arising from public nuisances, or keeping mischievous animals; in nature of conspiracy; for malicious prosecutions, of civil suits or criminal charges; libels, scandalum magnatum, or defamation of common persons; against justices, or other officers, for refusing bail, &c.: or, quasi ex contractu, against surgeons, &c. for improper treatment. persons relatively, ex delicto, they are for seducing, enticing away, or harbouring wives or servants, per quod consortium vel serbitium amisit d.

- <sup>c</sup> This and some other of the wrongs here mentioned, as affecting persons, may and do frequently affect personal property. And on the other hand, some of the wrongs hereafter referred to, as affecting personal property, may and do sometimes affect persons, as negligence in riding horses, and driving carriages,
- In the former editions of this work, actions for criminal conversation, debauching daughters, and beating or imprisoning wives or servants, per quod consortium vel servitium aville, were classed under the head of actions on the case; and in principle they seem to be so, for the following reasons: First, that the warmers complained of therein are not in-mediate, but consequential: Secondly, that the plaintiff may declare for them by bill, with a auod cum, which is not allowed in trespass: 2 Salk. 636. 1 Str. 621. Thirdly, that in these actions, the plea of the statute of limitations is not guilty within six years; 2 Wils. 85. 2 Bur. 753. 2 Ken. 371. Bul. Ni. Pri. 28. S. C. 6 East, 387. S. But as these actions, in point of form, are laid vi et armis and contra pacem, it has been determined, that they are to be considered as actions of trespass: 2 New Rep. C. P. 476. And accordingly it is

And to real property incorporeal, ex delicto, they are for disturbance of common of pasture, &c. ways, offices, franchises, tolls, ferries, and seats in churches.

DETINUE lies upon a purchase, bailment, or finding, for the recovery Detinue. of goods in specie, or damages for detaining them. And in this action, when the goods are alleged to have come to the defendant by finding, it is sufficient for the plaintiff to prove that they came to him by wrong; at least, unless the finding be traversed a. REPLEVIN lies to recover Replevin. damages for an immediate wrong, without force, in taking and detaining cattle or goods, under a distress for rent, or damage feasant, &c.; and answers to the action of trespass de bonis asportatis. It seems, that a writ of replevin may be properly brought, not merely where there has been a distress, as is generally imagined, but in all cases where a person takes goods out of the possession of the party who applies for the writ, upon his giving security, until it shall appear whether the goods are rightfully taken: but if A. be in possession of goods, in which B. claims a property, replevin is not the proper writ to try that right b. TRESPASS vi et armis lies to recover damages for immediate wrongs, accompanied with force; to the person, by menaces, assault, battery, wounding, mayhem, or false imprisonment; to real property, as houses, lands, fisheries, or watercourses; and to personal property, by destroying, damaging, taking away, detaining, or converting cattle or goods.

or actions, de

Upon contracts, by and against whom brought.

Where there are several parties.

Thon contracts, the action should be brought by the party with whom the contract was made, if living; or, if dead, by his executors or administrators: And it should be brought against the party who made the contract, or, if he be dead, against his executors or administrators ": or, upon a bond, against his heirs and devisees. Where there are several parties to a contract, the action should be brought by or against all of them, if living b; or, if some are dead, by or against the survivors :: And an action may be brought by or against a surviving partner, for his own debt, as well as for that which was contracted in the life-time of the deceased d. If an action be brought upon a joint contract, by one of several partners, or assignces of a bankrupt, the plaintiff will be nonsuited, or have a verdiet against him: But if one of several plaintiffs be mis-named, this is the subject of a plea in abatement, and not in bar 8: And if an action be brought against one of several partners, or assignces, he can only plead in abatement; though the plaintiff knew, and even contracted with the other partners b. In assumpsit, by one of two surviving partners, the fact of the plaintiff's being a surviving partner, must be stated in the declaration; and therefore, a count for goods sold by the plaintiff to the defendant, is not supported by proof that the goods were sold by the plaintiff and his deceased partner i: But under a declaration containing only one set of counts, charging the defendant in his own right, the plaintiff may recover one demand due from the defendant individually, and another due from him as surviving partner k. It is also a rule, that, as a man cannot sue himself, an action cannot be maintained by several plaintiffs, on a joint contract, where one or more of them are liable, with the defendants, to the performance of it! A contract, being a chose in action, was not assignable at common law, so as to entitle the assignee to an action in his own name ": but there was an exception to this rule, in the case of foreign bills of exchange, upon which an action might have been maintained, in the name of the indorsee: And the same doctrine was afterwards applied to inland bills "; and extended to promissery notes, by the statute 3 & 4 Anne, c. 9: and, by other acts of parliament, actions may be maintained by the assignce of the reversion, or against the assignee of a lease, where the covenants run with the lando:

For wrongs, independently of contract, the action must be brought by For wrongs. the party to whom the injury is done, against the party doing its. And if either of the parties die, the action is gone; for it is a rule, that actio personalis moritur cum persona a. But there are some exceptions to this rule, chiefly arising from an equitable construction of the statute 4 Edw. III. c. 7. by which executors shall have an action of trespass, for a wrong done to their testator b. Where several parties are jointly concerned in interest, or have suffered a joint injury c, they may and ought to join in the same action; and if they do not, the defendant may plead in abatement, but cannot otherwise take advantage of the objection d. And as wrongs are of a joint and several nature, the plaintiff may proceed against all, or any of the parties who committed them; and it is no plca in abatemente, or ground of nonsuitf, that there are other partners not named. In bringing actions by or against husband and wife, the rule is, that wherever the cause of action would survive to or against the wife, they ought in general to sue or be sued jointly g; and this rule holds as well with regard to contracts as wrongs. But sometimes, and particularly where the cause of action arises during coverture, the husband is allowed to bring the action in his own name, or in the joint names of himself and his wife h.

The plaintiff has in some cases his election, to bring one species of ac- Election of action or another for the same cause; as in actions upon contracts, he may bring assumpsit or debt upon a simple contract, or debt or covenant upon a specialty, for the non-payment of money: Or, if the breach of a simple contract consist in missenses, he may declare in assumptit, or in case on the special circumstances; as for deceit on the sale of cattle or goods, or immoderate use of them, when lent or let to hire; and against atternies, carriers, wharfingers, innkeepers, &c. And where cattle or goods are wrongfully taken and detained, he may bring trespass vi et armis, replevia, traver, or detinue; or, if they are converted into money, he may waive the tert, and bring assumptif for money had and received. But the plaintiff having once made his election, cannot afterwards bring another species of action for the same cause, either whilst the former is depending, or after it has been determined. And it is a rule, that the party applying for an information shall be understood to have made his election, and waived his remedy by action, whatever may be the fate of the motion for the information, unless the court think fit to give him leave to bring an action.

Circuity of ac-

The law is said to abhor circuity of action: and therefore if the obligee of a bond covenant generally not to sue upon it, this shall operate as a release, and may be pleaded in bar of the action; for if it operated only as a covenant, it would produce two actionsd. So where, to debt on bond for 2001, the defendant pleaded, that after the making of the bond, the plaintiff by indenture covenanted, that if the defendant should at such a day pay 100% the obligation should be void, and alleged that he paid the money at the day; and upon demurrer, it was insisted for the plaintiff, that the indenture, being made after the bond, could not be pleaded in bar; but all the court held, that the defendant might well plead it in bar, without being put to the action of covenant, by circuity of action. But if A. and B. are jointly and severally bound to C., who covenants with A. only, that he will not sue him, this is not construed to be a release, for there is still a remedy on the bond against B.f: And so where a man becomes bound to another, who covenants not to put the bond in suit before Michaelmas, and the obligee nevertheless brings debt on the bond before that time, the defendant cannot plead the covenant in bar, but must have recourse to an action upon it s.

Thus, in actions upon contract, the plaintiff may join as many different counts as he has causes of action, in account; so likewise in assumpsil, or in covenant, debt, annuity, or scire facias: And there is a case where it was holden, that debt and detinue might be joined in the same action b. In like manner, in actions for wrongs independently of contract, the plaintiff may join as many different counts as he has causes of action in case, or in detinue, replevin, or trespass: And he may join trespass and battery of his servant, per quad servitium amisit a, or trespass and rescue d, in the same declaration. But, with the exceptions before mentioned, counts in actions upon contract cannot be joined with counts for wrongs independently of contract*; nor can counts in any one species of these actions, be joined with counts in another. In a declaration on the case, one count stated, that the plaintiff, at the request of the defendant, had caused to be delivered to him certain swine, to be taken care of, for reward, by defendant for plaintiff; and in consideration thereof, defendant undertook and agreed with plaintiff, to take care of the said swine, and re-deliver the same on request; and the court held, on motion in arrest of judgment, that this was a count in assumpsit, and could not be joined with counts in case f.

Wherever several counts may be joined in the same declaration, for different causes of action, there is always the same process by original writ, and in general the same plea or general issue, and the same judgment. And hence, rules have been framed, in order to determine what different counts may or may not be joined in the same declaration, from the similarity of the process, the plea, and the judgment. In one case, it was said by Lec, Ch. J. that the true way to judge of this matter is, that whenever the process and judgment are the same on two counts, they may be joined; otherwise they cannot. But it being found that the similarity of the process afforded but a very fallible criterion, there being the same process of summons, attachment and distress, in actions of account, covenant, debt, annuity, and detinue, and the same process of attachment and distress in actions of assumpsit, case, and trespass, none of which can be joined, it was said in a subsequent case, by Wilmot, Ch. J. that the true test to try whether two counts can be joined in the same declaration, is to consider and see whether there be the same judgment on both; and if there be, he thought they might be well joined h. But in a later case, the court of Common Pleas were of opinion, that the rule or test to try whether two counts can be joined, as laid down in the former one, was rather too large, and not universally true : and the reason for this opinion probably was, that there is the same judgment, for damages and costs, in actions of assumpsit, covenant, case and trespass, and the same entry of a misericordia in the three first of these actions, and yet no two of them can be joined. Therefore, in a still later case, a new criterion was substituted; and it was said by Buller, J. to be universally true, that wherever the same plea may be pleaded, and the same judgment given, on two counts, they may be joined in the same declaration b. But even this rule is not altogether unexceptionable; for it is clear that case and trespass cannot in general be joined, although the same plea of not guilty of the premises will serve for both, and there is the same judgment in each, for damages and costs: and though in general the judgment in trespass is quod capiatur, and in actions upon the case, quod sit in miscricordia c, yet sometimes there is an entry of a capitatur in case, as well as in trespass d. It should also be observed, that this rule is merely affirmative; and it does not hold è converso, that different counts cannot be joined, unless there be the same plea and judgment on all of them: for it is holden, that debt on record, specialty and simple contract, may be joined, although they require different please; and in debt and detinue, which may also be joined, not only the pleas, but the judgments are different. The nature of the causes of action therefore should be attended to, in order to determine whether different counts may or may not be joined in the same declaration: and, with the exceptions which have been noticed, it may safely be laid down as a general rule, that wherever the causes of action are of the same nature, and may properly be the subject of counts in the same species of action, they may be joined, otherwise they cannot.

Joinder in action, by or against executors, or administrators.

In order to join several counts however, in the same declaration, it is necessary that they should be all of them in the same right g; and upon that ground it is holden, that a plaintiff cannot join in the same declaration, a demand as executor, with another which accrued in his own right h: and such misjoinder of action is a defect in substance, and therefore bad on a general demurrer, or in arrest of judgment, or on a writ of error i. But a count for money had and received by the defendant to the use of an executor k, or for money paid by the plaintiff as such, to the use of the defendant 1, may be joined with a count on a promise to the testator. So, a count upon a promise to the plaintiff as administratrix, for goods sold and delivered by her after the death of the intestate, may be joined with a count upon an account stated with her as administratrix; for the damages and costs when recovered will be assets a: and it is a rule, that where the transaction has been entirely with executors or administrators in their representative character, and not in their personal character, or altogether in their personal character, the counts may be joined b. Three executors having ordered goods to be sold as the goods of their testator, afterwards sued for the amount, without styling themselves executors, and without joining a fourth executor, who was named in the will; and the court held they might recover c.

An executor or administrator may declare as such, on an account stated by the defendant, with the testator or intestate, or with the plaintiff, of monies due to him in his representative character d. And where a testator or intestate has stated an account, it is usual to declare for the balance, against his executor or administrator. Or, if an executor or administrator state an account of monies due from the testator or intestate c, or, as it seems, of monies due from himself in his representative character f, he may be declared against as such, for what appears to be due. And, in any of the above cases, other causes of action, in the same right, may be joined in the declaration. But a count upon an account stated with the plaintiffs, executors, &c. not saying as executors, &c. cannot be joined with counts on promises to the testator; for it is no allegation that the promises were made to the plaintiffs in their representative capacity; and, under such a count, proof might be given of an account stated with them individually g. And a count in assumpsit against husband and wife, who was administratrix with the will annexed, upon promises by the testator to pay rent, cannot be joined with counts upon promises by the husband and wife, as administratrix, for use and occupation by them after the death of the testator h.

was holden good, on a motion in arrest of judgment. The assignees under a joint commission against two partners, may recover, in the same action, debts due to the partners jointly, and debts due to them separately. But the assignees of A. a bankrupt, and also of B. a bankrupt, under separate commissions, cannot recover, in the same action, a joint debt due from the defendant to both the bankrupts, and also separate debts due to each; and if in such an action the jury have assessed the damages severally, on the separate counts, the court will arrest the judgment on those counts which demand the debts due to each bankrupt separately. And the assignees of A. and B. bankrupts, under a joint commission, cannot maintain an action for money had and received to the use of the bankrupts, or to their own use, if it be proved that one of them only had committed an act of bankruptcy; neither are they entitled to recover the separate moiety of one, under such commission d.

Limitation of personal actions. By stat. 31 Eliz. c. 5. § 5.

The limitation of personal actions is regulated by several statutes. By the 31 Eliz. c. 5. § 5. Provided, that where a shorter time is limited, the action shall " be brought within that time." This statute extends to all actions brought upon penal statutes, whereby the forfeiture is limited to the king, or to the king and the party, whether made before or since the SI Eliz. : But it does not extend to actions brought by the party And where the penalty is given to a common informer alone, different opinions have been entertained, whether it is within the statute. On the one hand it has been said, that this is not a case within the words of the act, which ought to be taken strictly, and not extended by an equitable construction. On the other hand, it has with more reason been contended, that as the informer is bound, when the king is joined with 1 1 th

And accordingly, where an action was brought after a year, by a common informer, on the statute 9 Anne, c. 14, the court of Common Pleas held this to be a case within the 31 Eliz. though the action was given in the first instance to the party grieved, and afterwards to a common informer; for such actions would have been within the 7 Hen. VIII. c. 3. and the 31 Eliz. was made to narrow the time given by that statute, and could never mean to leave any actions unrestrained in point of time: the latter part of the clause must therefore be construed to extend to them b.

By the statute 21 Jac. I. c. 16. § 3. it is enacted, that "all actions of By stat. 21 Jac. By Lords' Act.

When statute begins to run. In actions of assumpsit, if the plaintiff be in England, when the cause of action accrues, though he afterwards go abroad, the time of limitation begins to run, so that if he or his representatives do not sue within six years, the statute is a bar d. And if one plaintiff be abroad, and others in England, the action must be brought within six years after the cause of action arises c. It has also been determined, that the statute of limitations extends to persons in Scotland; so that if a plaintiff or defendant reside there, he must sue, or be sued, within the time limited by the statute f. But if the plaintiff be abroad, or beyond the sea, at the time when the cause of action accrues, the statute will not run against him, till his return to this country s. And if the plaintiff be a foreigner, and do not come to England for many years after the cause of action arises, he still has six years after his coming hither, to bring his action a: And if he never come to England himself, he has always a right of action while he lives abroad; and after his death, his executors or administrators are in the same situation.

The statute cannot be a bar in any case, unless the time of limitation In what cases it be expired after there hath been a complete cause of action; as if a man promise to pay ten pounds to J. S. when he comes from Rome, or when he marries, and ten years after J. S. marries, or comes from Rome, the right of action accrues from the happening of the contingency, from which time the statute will begin to run, and not from the time of the promise b. So in assumpsit, where the plaintiff declared that the defendant, in consideration that the plaintiff, at the defendant's request, would receive A. and B. into his house as guests, and diet them, promised, &c. the defendant pleaded non assumpsit infra sex annos, upon which the plaintiff demurred, and it was held no plea; for the defendant cannot in such case plead non assumpsit infra sex annos, but actio non accrevit infra sex annos; for it is not material when the promise was made, if the cause of action be within the six years, and the dieting might be long afterwards c. So if the captain of a ship insured, barratrously carry her out of the course of the voyage, procure her to be condemned in a Vice-Admiralty court, sell her, and deliver her up to the purchaser, it is only from this last event that the statute of limitations begins to run, as between the assured and the underwriter 4. And no debt accrues on a bill payable at sight, until it be presented for payment: Therefore, the statute of limitations is no bar to an action on such a bill, unless it has been presented for payment six years before the action commenced. So, the statute is no bar to an action on a promissory note, payable twenty four months after demand, if presented for payment within six years before the commencement of the action f. But a promissory note, payable on demand, is payable immediately; and the statute of limitations runs from the date of the note, and not from the time of demand s. And where the breach of a contract is attended with special damage, the statute runs from the time of the breach, which is the gist of the action, and not from the time when it was discovered h, or the damage arose i. In an action by an administrator, upon a bill of exchange payable to the intestate, but accepted after his death, it was holden, that the statute of limitations begins to run from Limitation of actions of debt on bond.

There is no statute of limitations in an action of debt on bond b. But where the bond has been given more than twenty years before the commencement of the action, and no interest has been paid upon it, nor any acknowledgment by the obligor of the existence of the debt, during that period, the law in general will presume it to be satisfied; particularly if the debt be large, and the obligor has been all along in good circumstances d. And the defendant shall have the benefit of this presumption on the plea of solvit ad diem, unless interest appears to have been paid upon the bond, after the time mentioned in the condition; in which case he must plead solvit post diem. So, where a bond has been given, or interest paid upon it, within twenty years, the law in some cases will presume it to be satisfied; as where it has been given eighteen or nineteen years, and in the mean-time an account has been settled between the parties, without taking any notice of the demand f: but in that case the presumption must be fortified by evidence of some auxiliary circumstances &; though, after a considerable length of time, slight evidence is said to be sufficient h. The doctrine of presumption is said to have been first taken up by Lord Hale i, who thought the lapse of time a circumstance whence a jury might presume payment. In this he was followed by Lord Holt, who held that if a bond be of twenty years standing, and no demand proved thereon, or good cause of so long forbearance shewn, on solvit ad diem, he should intend it paid t. This doctrine was afterwards adopted by Lord Raymond, in the case of Constable v. Somerset 1. And it is not confined to actions of debt on bond; but the like presumption has been made, after twenty years, in an action of debt m, or scire facias n, on a judgment: and in a modern case o, where it appeared that the bond was not satisfied, the jury, under particular circumstances, and after a great lapse of time, presumed it to have been released. So, in assumpsit, where the statute of limitations is not pleaded or replied, the jury may presume, from length of time and other circumstances, that the debt has been satisfied P.

The presumption of payment, newever, may in general be rebutted, by Presumption of shewing that interest has been paid on the bond within twenty years, or that the obligor has acknowledged the existence of the debt within that period , or that he was in bad circumstances , or the demand trifling , or that he has ever since his acknowledgment resided abroad d. But where there was no evidence of payment, or of any sort of acknowledgment, for more than thirty years, the presumption arising from lapse of time, of a judgment being satisfied, was holden not to be rebutted, by evidence of the defendant having been in embarrassed circumstances, and in the opinion of those who knew him, incapable of paying the debt secured by the judgment. In order to prove the payment of interest, or a part of the principal, an indorsement made by the obligee upon the bond, within twenty years, is allowed to be evidence f; but an indorsement made after the presumption had taken place, is not admissible s.

In actions for wrongs, particular times of limitation are frequently appointed by statute, different from those in common cases. Thus, by the statute 24 Geo. II. c. 44. § 8. it is provided, that "no action shall be " brought against any justice of the peace, for any thing done in the exe-" cution of his office, or against any constable, headborough, or other " officer, or person acting by his order and in his aid, unless commenced " within six calendar months after the act committed." In the construction of this statute, it seems that the months are to be reckoned inclusive of the day of committing the act. And where a constable, acting under a warrant commanding him to take the goods of A., takes the goods of B, believing them to belong to A, he is entitled to the protection of the statute; and an action therefore must be brought against him, within six calendar months i. And, in like manner, where constables, under a warrant to search a house for black cloth which had been stolen, finding no black cloth, took cloth of other colours, and carried it before a magistrate, refusing at the same time to tell the owner of the house searched, whether they had any warrant or no; the court of Common Pleas held, that they were within the protection of the statute, and that an action against them ought to have been commenced within six months after the grievance complained of k. So, where a constable, having a magistrate's warrant of distress, to levy a church rate, under the statute 53 Geo. III. c. 127. § 7. broke the door of, and entered the plaintiff's dwelling house; the court held, that although he thereby exceeded his authority, yet that no action could be maintained, after the expiration of three calendar months . But, in the case of a continued imprisonment, the magistrate is liable to answer in an action for such part of the imprisonment suffered under his warrant, as was within six calendar months before the action commenced against him b. And where an action of assault and false imprisonment was brought against a constable, who had exceeded his authority, it being objected that the plaintiff had not shewn the action commenced within six months, according to the above statute, Lord Kenyon over-ruled the objection, on this distinction; that the defendant acted colore officii, and not virtute officii; and said, that it had often been held, that a constable acting colore officii was not protected by the statute, where the act committed is of such a nature that the office gives him no authority to do it: in the doing of that act he is not to be considered as an officer: but where a man doing an act within the limits of his official authority, exercises that authority improperly, or abuses the discretion placed in him, to such cases the statute extends: The distinction is, between the extent and the abuse of the authority.

case, founded in tort, the defendant, in pleading the statute of limitations, should alledge that the cause of action did not accrue within six years next before the commencement of the suit; a plea of not guilty of the grievances mentioned in the declaration, within six years, being bad upon special demurrer. And a subsequent admission by the defendant, of having committed a trespass, will not take the case out of the statute of limitations b.

To take a case out of the statute, it is usual, in assumpsit, to prove a promise to pay, or acknowledgment of the debt, within six years before the commencement of the action. And a conditional promise has been holden sufficient for this purpose, as well as an absolute one; as where the defendant said to the plaintiff, prove your debt, and I will pay it . But if an executor bring assumpsit on a promise made to his testator, and the defendant plead that he made no promise to the testator within six years; if issue be joined thereon, a promise to the executor within six years will not maintain the action d. So, where an action was brought against A. and B. and C., his wife, upon a joint promissory note made by A. and C. before her marriage, and the promise was laid by A. and C. while the latter was sole, and the defendants pleaded the statute of limitations, whereupon issue was joined; the court held, that an acknowledgment of the note by A., within six years, but after the intermarriage of B. and C., was not evidence to support the issue e. And, upon a replication that the defendant did promise within six years, to a plea of the statute of limitations, fraud in the defendants cannot be set up as an answer to the plea f.

Acknowledgment of debt, It was formerly doubted, whether a bare acknowledgment of the debt, without a promise of payment, was sufficient to take the case out of the statute; such an acknowledgment being only considered as evidence of a promise: as in trover, where a demand and refusal are not holden to be a conversion, but only evidence of it. A bare acknowledgment however s, and that of the slightest nature h, is now deemed sufficient to prevent the operation of the statute. So, in an action brought by an administrator, an agreement for a compromise, executed between the intestate and the defendant, wherein the existence of the debt sued for was admitted, was deemed sufficient to take the case out of the statute of limitations. And where the defendant, having entered into a guarantee in writing, and become liable upon it, at a period of more than six years before the com-

If an agent has been employed to pay money for work done for the defendant, and the workmen are referred to him for payment, an acknowledgment or promise to pay by him, will take the case out of the statute of limitations b. the admission of the wife, who was accustomed to conduct her husband's business, is sufficient to take the case out of the statute of limitations, in an action against the husband. of the other drawers, in a separate action on the note against him . So, in a joint action against several drawers of a promissory note, an acknowledgment within sur years, by one of them, will revive the debt against another, although the latter has made no acknowledgment, and July signed the note as a surety f. And where one of two drawers of a joint and several promissory note having become a bankrupt, the payee received a dividend under the commission on account of the note, the court of Common Pleas held that this would prevent the other drawer from availing himself of the statute, in an action brought against him for the remainder of the money due on the note; the dividend having been received within six years before the action brought s. But, in a subsequent case, where one of two joint drawers of a bill of exchange became bankrupt, and the indorsees proved a debt under his commission, beyond the amount of the bill, for goods sold, &c., and exhibited the bill as a security they then held for their debt, and afterwards received a dividend; the court of King's Bench held, in an action by the indorsees of the bill against the solvent partner, that the statute of limitations was a good defence, although the dividend had been paid by the assignces of the bankrupt partner, within six years . In an action against A. on the joint and several promissory note of himself and B., to take the case out of the statute of limitations, it is enough to give in evidence a letter written by A. to B., within the six years, desiring him to settle the money. But it is not sufficient to shew a payment by a joint maker of the note to the payer, within six years, so as to throw it upon the defendant to show that the payment was not made on account of the note. And where A. and B. made a joint and several promissory note, and A. died, and ten years after his death, B. paid interest upon the note; it was holden, in an action brought thereon against the executors of A., that the payment of interest by B. did not take the case out of the statute, so as to make the executors liable b.

In other cases.

If a letter be written by a defendant to the plaintiff's attorney, on being served with a writ, couched in ambiguous terms, neither expressly admitting nor denying the debt, it should be left to the jury to consider whether it amounts to an acknowledgment of the debt c. And if there be a mutual account of any sort between the plaintiff and defendant, for any item of which credit has been given within six years, that is evidence of an acknowledgment of there being such an open account between the parties, and of a promise to pay the balance, as to take the case out of the statute d. So, if a defendant admit the existence of a debt, which would otherwise he barred by the statute of limitations, but claim to be discharged by a written instrument, which does not amount to a legal discharge, he shall be bound by his admission . And where the acceptor of a bill of exchange acknowledged his acceptance, and that he had been liable, but said that " he was not liable then, because it was out of date, " and that he would not pay it, and that it was not in his power to pay "it," this was deemed sufficient to take the case out of the statute f. So it is sufficient to prove, that a demand being made by a seaman on the owner of a ship, for wages which had accrued during an embargo, he said, " if others paid, he should do the same g." So where A., by means of a misrepresentation, received of B. and several other persons, his tenants, various sums of money, to which he was not entitled; and B. having applied to him to have the money which he had so paid returned, saying, that he and the other tenants had been induced to pay more than was due, A. replied, that " if there was any mistake, it should be rectified;" it was holden, that this obviated the statute of limitations, as to payments made by the other tenants, as well as by Bh. So where, in a deed between the defendants and a third person, defendants acknowledged, within six years, the existence of a debt, and the plaintiffs were wholly strangers to the deed; the court held this was sufficient to take the case out of the statute of limitations i. And a promise by a defendant, in embarrassed circumstances, to pay a debt by instalments, if time were given him, is sufficient to take a case out of the statute k.

" the testator always promised sever to distress him for the debt," is not evidence of a promise to pay it, made to the testator within six years. And where the acknowledgment was, "I had the money, but the testa-" trix gave it to me;" the latter words were holden to qualify the generality of the first admission, and not to amount to a new promise or confession of the defendant, sufficient to take the case out of the statute b. So, where the defendant had said to the plaintiff, " I owe you not a farthing, " for it is more than six years since;" the court held, that this was not . to be left to the jury, as evidence of an admission, to take a debt out of the statute of limitations c. So, an acknowledgment by the acceptor of a bill of exchange, within six years, of his liability to the payee of the bill. there being no consideration for the acceptance, is not sufficient, in an action by the drawers against the acceptor, to take the case out of the statute of limitations<sup>d</sup>. So where, upon demand made of payment of two promissory notes over-due ten years, the defendant said, " I cannot afford " to pay my new debts, much less my old ones;" the court held, that the jury were warranted in negativing this as evidence of a subsisting debt, to take the case out of the statute. And where the defendant, on being arrested for a debt more than six years old, said, "I know that I " owe the money, but the bill I gave you is on a three-penny receipt " stamp, and I will never pay it;" the court of Common Pleas held, that this was not such an acknowledgment, as would revive the debt f.

In like manner, a qualified admission, by a party who relies on an objection, which would at any time have been a good defence to the action, does not take the case out of the statute g. So where a defendant, on being applied to by the plaintiff's attorney, for the payment of a debt, wrote in answer, that "he would wait on the plaintiff, when he should " be able to satisfy him respecting the misunderstanding which had oc-" curred between them;" this was holden not to be such an acknowledgment of a debt, as would bar a plea of the statute of limitations; and that such evidence ought not to be left to a jury, as a ground to infer a new promise to pay h. So, in assumpsit by an executrix, where the defendant, on being applied to by the plaintiff for payment of interest, stated that he would bring her some on the following Sunday; the court held, that although this was an admission that something was due, still as it did not appear what the nature of the debt was, or that it was due to the plaintiff as executrix, or in her own right, or that it was one for which assumpsit would lie, the plaintiff was not entitled to recover even nominal damages, and a nonsuit was entered i. And where, in an action against several executors, on a promise made by themselves, as well as by the testator, to which the defendants pleaded the general issue, and the statute of limitations; it was holden, that neither a mere acknowledgment of the debt by all the executors, nor an express promise by one of them, would take the case out of the statute; but there must be an express promise by all . So, in assumpsit by an attorney, to recover his charges relative to the grant of an annuity, evidence that the defendant said, "he " thought it had been settled, when the annuity was granted, but he had " been in so much trouble since, that he could not recollect any thing " about it," was holden not to be a sufficient acknowledgment of the debt, to take the case out of the statute of limitations, and ought not to be left to the jury, as evidence of an admission of such debt; although the plaintiff proved his bill was not paid at the time of granting the annuity b. So where, in assumpsit on a promissory note, it was proved that on the plaintiff's shewing the note to the defendant within six years, the latter said. "you owe me more money; I have a set-off against it;" this was holden, by two of the judges, not to be a sufficient acknowledgment within six years, to take the case out of the statute of limitations c. And where a party, on being saked for the payment of his attorney's bill, admitted that there had been such a bill, but stated that it had been paid to the deceased partner of the attorney, who had retained the amount out of a floating balance in his hands; it seems that, in order to take the case out of the statute of limitations, evidence is inadmissible to shew that the bill had never in fact been paid in this manner d.

Conditional promise.

In assumpsit for goods sold and delivered, and on the money counts, where the defendant had pleaded the general issue, with the statute of limitations, and paid money into court generally; the court held, that such payment did not take the case out of the statute. So, in an action by an executor, for the balance of an account, a warrant of attorney given by the defendant to the testator, to confess a judgment for such balance, was holden not to be sufficient to take the case out of the statute of limitations . And where the defendant, on being applied to for payment, said, "I think I am bound in honour to pay the money, and shall do it "when I am able;" Lord Kenyon ruled, that it was a conditional promiss only, and that the plaintiff was bound to shew that the defendant was then of sufficient ability to pay; adding, that it had been so ruled before, by Lord Chief Justice Eyres. In a late case h, the court of Common Pleas were divided in opinion, whether, on a promise to pay when of ability, made three years after the original cause of action accrued, and within six years before the commencement of the action, it was necessary for the plaintiff to prove the defendant's ability. But, in a subsequent case i, where it appeared that the defendant, being applied to to pay a debt barred by the statute of limitations, said "he should be happy to pay,

In order to shew that the action was commenced in due time, a bill of Commencement Middlesex or latitat in the King's Bench b, or a capias quare clausum fregit in the Common Pleasc, is as effectual as an original writ: and sning out a testatum capias ad respondendum is a good commencement of an action by original4. In proceeding against a peer of the realm, corporation, or hundredors on the statute 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 31. an original writ must, in both courts, be sued out for avoiding the statute: And where a member of the House of Commons is defendant, the plaintiff must proceed for that purpose, either by suing out an original writ, and getting it returned nihile, or by bill and summons, &c. on the statute 12 & 13 W. III. c. 3. § 2 f. An attachment of privilege is holden to be a good commencement of the suit s, at the suit of an attorney, even though it be informal h: But an attachment of privilege, in the King's Bench, is not a continuance of a bill of Middlesex, so as to avoid the statute 1. And, in the Common Pleas, an original writ of quare clausum fregit, upon which no proceedings were had, cannot be connected with another writ of the same nature, subsequently issued 4. As against an attorney or officer of the court of King's Bench, or a prisoner in the actual custody of the marshal of that court, the statute can only be avoided, by filing a bill with the clerk of the declarations, in the King's Bench office; which bill may be filed in vacation, as well as in term-time! In the Common Pleas, the bill against an attorney is filed in the Prothonotaries' office; and to avoid the statute of limitations, it may, it seems, be filed in vacation m. If a plaint be levied in an inferior court, in due time, and then it be removed into the King's Bench by habeas corpus, and the plaintiff declare there de novo, and the defendant plead the statute of limitations, the plaintiff may reply, and shew the plaint in the inferior court, and that will be sufficient to which the statement. In the Enchequer, the ening out of process is coueligible as the commencement of proceedings by information, within the Statute of limitations b.

Time allowed to executors, &c.

If an executor take out proper process in assumpsit, within a year after the death of his testator, the six years not being clapsed before, though they expire within that period, yet it will be sufficient to take the case out of the statute c. So, if assumpsit be brought in proper time, but the plaintiff or defendant die before judgment, and the six years run, his executor or administrator may notwithstanding bring a fresh action d; provided he does it recently, or within a reasonable time. What shall be deemed a reasonable time, in this case, is a matter of considerable doubt, and there are various opinions in the books upon the subject. In Spencer's case, it is said to be entirely in the discretion of the court. In another case it is said, that heretofore they used to allow half a year, but that was held to be too long, and therefore they allowed but thirty days f. third case 1 year was said to be a reasonable time : And this opinion was adhere! to in a subsequent case h, in analogy to that part of the statute, which authorizes the party to bring a new action, within a year after the reversal of the judgment, by writ of error 1, &c. But whatever may be the precise rule upon this subject, it seems that if a new action be brought within half a year after the abatement of the former, it would be sufficient to avoid the statute k.

Things required to be done before action brought. Previous to the commencement of an action, it is sometimes necessary for the intended plaintiff to make a request or demand, or to give notice to the opposite party, for completing the cause of action; and after it is completed, some things are required to be done, before the action is brought. A formal demand is necessary, before an action can be maintained against overseers, for the surplus arising from a distress for poor's rates, under the statute 27 Geo. II. c. 20. § 2!. And, in order to maintain an action for the recovery of an attorney's bill for fees and disbursements, at law or in equity, it is in general necessary, by the statute 2 Geo. II. c. 23. § 23. that it should be signed by the attorney, and delivered to the party to be charged therewith, a month at least before the action is commenced.

Notice of action, to justices.

A notice of action is also in some cases required to be given, to the party or parties against whom it is intended to be brought, in order to give them an opportunity of tendering amends. Thus, by the statute 24 Geo. FL. c. 44. it is enacted, that "no writ shall be sued out against, nor any copy " of any process at the suit of a subject shall be served on, any justice of " the peace, for any thing by him done in the execution of his office, until " notice in writing of such intended writ or process shall have been de-" livered to him, or left at the usual place of his abode, by the attorney or " agent for the party who intends to sue or cause the same to be sued out " or served, at least one calendar month before the suing out or serving "the same; in which notice shall be clearly and explicitly contained the " cause of action, which such party hath or claimeth to have against " such justice of the peace: on the back of which notice shall be indorsed " the name of such attorney or agent, together with the place of his abode; " who shall be entitled to have the fee of twenty shillings for the pre-" paring and serving such notice, and no more b. And no evidence shall be " permitted to be given by the plaintiff, on the trial, of any cause of " action, except such as is contained in the notice".

It has been deemed sufficient, to entitle a justice to the benefit of this Whennecessary, statute, that he conceived himself to be acting as a justice, though what he did was not in the regular execution of his office d. And accordingly, the lord of the manor, who was also a justice of the peace, was held to be entitled to a month's notice of action against him, for taking away a gun in the house of an unqualified person. So, one magistrate who had committed the mother of a bastard to prison, for not filiating the child, was holden to be entitled to the notice of action required by the statute, though by the 18 Eliz. c. 3. § 2. jurisdiction over the subject matter is given to two magistrates f. And where a justice of the peace does an act under colour of his office, though he exceed his jurisdiction, he is entitled to notice, before an action can be brought against himg: but where he does not act colore officii, a notice is unnecessary h. And no notice is necessary, to support an action against a person, for the penalty given by the statute 18 Geo. II. c. 20. for acting as a justice, without a proper qualification. The notice to a justice of the peace must express the nature of the writ Form of notice. or process intended to be sued out, as well as of the cause of action k: And where the notice was not indorsed with the place of abode of the attorney, but concluded thus—"Given under my hand at Durham, this — day of " ----," &c. it was deemed insufficient!. But a notice to a magistrate

An extra man, not appointed by the board of excise, is holden to be Decisions on entitled to the benefit of the statute 28 Geo. And an excise officer is entitled to notice, before an action is brought against him, for an act not warranted by his official capacity, if done bond fide, in the supposed execution of his duty; such as the assaulting of an innocent person, whom he suspects to be a smuggler employed in running goodsc: for otherwise, he would never be entitled to notice, except in cases where he did not need it d. But a constable detaining a person by direction of a customhouse officer, who had himself no power to detain him, is not within the protection of the act, there being no pretence that he was acting within the scope of his authority . For things done in pursuance of building act.

Of acts relating to taxes.

It is not necessary to give a notice of action on this statute, where assumpsit is intended to be brought, for money had and received, to recover the amount of an excessive charge made by the defendants as collectors, on a distress for arrears of taxes d. And a sheriff, who levies arrears of taxes, under 48 Gco. III. c. 141 e. is not entitled to notice of an action to be brought against him, for any thing done under the provisions of that act f.

Intent of these provisions, and cases decided thereon.

The intent of these provisions was to prevent the constable or other officer, when acting in obedience to his warrant b, from being answerable, on account of any defect of jurisdiction in the justice: Therefore, if an officer seize goods, in obedience to the warrant of a magistrate, whether that warrant be legal or not, he cannot be sued, until a previous demand has been made of a copy of it. And a constable, executing the warrant of a justice of peace, if sued in trespass without the magistrate, is within the protection of the statute, and entitled to a verdict, on proof of such warrant; having first complied with the plaintiff's demand of a perusal and copy of it, before the action brought, though not within six days after such demand, as the act directs d. But where a constable of one hundred took upon him to execute a warrant out of his own hundred, directed to the constable of another hundred by name, "and to all other peace of ficers in the county of Kent;" this was holden not to be a case within the protection of the statute. So, where goods were taken under a warrant of distress, granted by a justice of peace for the county of Kent, directed to the constables of the lower half-hundred of C. and G. in the county of Kent, if it turn out, that the warrant was executed within the jurisdiction of the cinque ports, and not in the county of Kent, the constables who executed it are not entitled to the benefit of the statute, but may be sued in trespuse, without the magistrate being made a defendant . And where the defendants, in order to levy a poor's rate under a warrant of distress granted by two magistrates, broke and entered the plaintiff's house, and broke the windows, &c. the court held that they might be sued in trespute, without a previous demand of the perusal and copy of the warrant b.

It has been determined, that a churchwarden or overseer of the poor, Demand on taking a distress for a poor's rate c, or a gaqler, receiving and detaining a churchwardens, prisoner d, under a warrant of magistrates, is entitled to the protection of &c. the statute, in having the magistrates made defendants with him, in an action of trespuse. And a constable, who merely acts in aid of a parish officer, in levying a distress for poor rates, under a warrant of magistrates directed to such officer, is not liable to an action of trespass, although a demand was duly made on such constable, in pursuance of the statute . But an action of replevin is holden not to be an action, within the meaning of the statute f. And the act extends only to actions of trespass, or tort: Therefore, where an action for money had and received was brought against an officer, who had levied money on a conviction by a justice of the peace, the conviction having been quashed, it was holden that a demand of a copy of the warrant was not necessary s. In cases to which the act applies, if Evidence of the plaintiff's attorney make out two papers precisely similar, purporting to be demands of a copy of the warrant, pursuant to the statute, and sign both for his client, and then deliver one to the defendant, the other will be sufficient evidence at the trial h.

Tender of debt,

Having thus stated what is necessary to be done by the plaintiff, before the commencement of the action, it may be proper to add, that where it is meant to be defended on the ground of a tender of the debt, such tender should be made before the action is brought: And a tender of sufficient amends may be made, by the statute 21 Jac. I. c. 16. § 5. in an action for an involuntary trespass to real property.

CHAP. II.

Of the Jurisdiction of the Courts of King's Bench, COMMON PLEAS, and Exchequer of Pleas, in per-SONAL ACTIONS; and of the Judges, Advocates, and Officers of the Courts.

THE Court of King's Bench has an original jurisdiction in actions for Jurisdiction of trespasses vi et armis, committed in Middlesex, or other county where the court sits a: and it has by degrees acquired a jurisdiction, which it exercises by original writ, against peers of the realm, and members of the house of commons: and against corporations, and hundredors on the statute 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 31.; and in all personal actions, brought against any person not being a prisoner in the actual custody of the marshal, nor privileged as an attorney or officer of the court. It has likewise jurisdiction by bill, in all personal actions, brought against prisoners in the actual custody of the marshal, or persons who have put in bail upon a cepi corpus, or habeas corpus, and who are still for this purpose supposed to be in custody b. On which latter ground, the court is enabled, by a fiction, to hold plea by bill, in all personal actions whatever; for, by feigning a complaint of trespass, over which the court has an inherent jurisdiction, the plaintiff is allowed, when the defendant is brought in on such complaint, to waive or abandon it, and to exhibit his bill and declare against him as a prisoner, for any other species of injury c. This court has also jurisdiction in all personal actions, brought by or against its attornies and officers d; who are entitled to sue therein by attachment of privilege, and must be sued by bill: And members of the house of commons may be sued therein by bill and summons, &c. in consequence of the statute 12 & 13 W. III. c. 3. § 2.

The court of Common Pleas has a concurrent jurisdiction with the court Jurisdiction of of King's Bench, in all personal actions. This jurisdiction is exercised, sonal actions. first, by original writ, issuing out of Chancery; which however is seldom issued, except where it is necessary in consequence of a writ of error, after a judgment by default: Secondly, by writ of capies quare clausum fregit, which supposes an original to have issued, and is the ordinary mode of commencing actions in this court: Thirdly, by attachment of privilege, at the suit of attornies and officers of the court: and fourthly, by bill against attornies and officers, or members of the house of commons. This court has also jurisdiction, exclusive of the King's Beach, in all real, and the greater part of mixed actions: and writs of habeas corpus, and prohibition, may be moved for therein, as well as in the King's Beach; though it is more usual to move for the writ of habeas corpus in the latter court.

In real and mixed actions, &c.

Jurisdiction of K. B. & C. P. in removing actions from inferior courts.

By attachment.

Jurisdiction of Exchequer of Pleas. It should also be observed, that personal actions are either commenced originally, by the means which have been stated, in the courts of King's Bench and Common Pleas; or are removed thither from inferior courts, by writ of certiorari or habeas corpus before judgment, or by writ of error after judgment, from such as are of record; or by writ of pone, recordari facias loquelam, or accedas ad curiam, before judgment, or by writ of false judgment afterwards, from such as are not of record: and both courts have the power of punishing their own officers, or other persons, for a contempt, by attachment.

The court of Pleas, in the Exchequer, is holden before the barons b; and has jurisdiction of all causes which concern the king's profit or revenue c, as of debts or duties to the king d; and of matters which relate to tenures of the king in capite, as of an honour or manor c, &c. or which concern the lands, rents, franchises, hereditaments, goods and chattels of the king c. So, one who is indebted to the king, may sue his debtor in the court of Pleas in the Exchequer, upon a suggestion of quo minus, &c. or that he is thereby the less able to satisfy his majesty, the debts which he owes to him c. And the court of Pleas has jurisdiction in all personal actions, where the plaintiff or defendant has privilege as an officer or minister h, or the defendant is a prisoner i, of the court. But the plaintiff cannot proceed in this court by original writ; and therefore the defendant cannot be outlawed therein k.

Privileges in Exchequer. There are three sorts of privilege in this court: First, as debtor; secondly, as accountant; and thirdly, as officer of the court. Against the first of these, any man who hath a special privilege in another court, as an officer of the court or attorney, shall have his privilege. But if an accountant begin his suit here, no privilege shall be allowed elsewhere; because he has a special privilege, by reason of his attendance to pass his account, in which the king hath a particular concern. The same holds with regard to an officer of the court: If he commence a suit here, noprivilege in another court shall prevail against him; because his attendance here is requisite, and his privilege here is first attached by commencing his suit. But when the accountant has finished his account, and reduced it to a certainty, so that it is become a debt, then he is only privileged as a general debtor. So, a servant to an officer or minister of the court has no privilege against a privileged person elsewhere . And accordingly, where the plaintiff, as debtor to the king, and treasurer of the navy, exhibited his bill in this court, and the defendant pleaded his privilege, as one of the six clerks in Chancery, under the great seal; Hale, chief baron, and the court held, that a general privilege as debtor, will not hold against a special privilege; but against a general privilege it will: and a privilege as accountant will hold against a special privilege in another court, as officer of the court or otherwise; though it be not alleged, that he has entered upon his account: and in this case the plaintiff, being treasurer of the navy, is eo ipso an accountant in the Exchequer b: But it must be averred, that he is present in court on his account. c.

The judges of the courts of King's Bench and Common Pleas are, in Judges of K. B. each court, the Lord Chief Justice, created by writ, and three puisne judges, created by letters patent; who, by the statute 12 & 13 W. III. c. 2. hold their places quamdiu bene se gesserint, and not, as formerly, durante bene placito. In the court of Pleas in the Exchequer, the judges Barons of Exare the Chief Baron, and three puisne barons, who are created by letters patent<sup>d</sup>; and were formerly barons and peers of the realm. And, by the statute 1 Geo. III. c. 23. enacted at the earnest recommendation of the king himself from the throne, the judges are continued in their offices. during their good behaviour, notwithstanding any demise of the crown, (which was formerly holden immediately to vacate their seats,) his majesty having been pleased to declare, that he looked upon the independence and uprightness of the judges, as essential to the impartial administration of justice; as one of the best securities of the rights and liberties of his subjects; and as most conducive to the honour of the crown s.

This act of parliament is to be construed liberally, for the dispatch of business; and therefore it has been holden, that an affidavit sworn during term, is sufficient to bring the subject matter before the court, as " a " matter depending in the court," within the terms of the act, and the king's warrant founded thereon a.

The judges, upon their circuits, sit by virtue of five several authorities: Sittings of 1. the commission of the peace: 2. a commission of oyer and terminer: 3. a commission of general gaol delivery: 4. a commission of assize, directed to the justices and serjeants therein named, to take (together with their associates,) assizes in the several counties, that is, to take the verdict of a peculiar species of jury, called an assize, and summoned for the trial of landed disputes: 5. their authority at nisi prius is by the commission of assize b, being annexed to the office of justices of assize, by the statute of Westm. 2. (13 Edw. I.) c. 30. which empowers them to try all questions of fact, issuing out of the courts at Westminster, that are then ripe for trial And, by a late act of parliamentd, "whenever it shall happen " that the commissions, under which the judges sit upon their circuits, " shall not be opened and read, in the presence of one of the quorum com-" missioners, at any place specified for holding the assizes, on the very " day appointed for such purpose, it shall and may be lawful to open and " read the same, in the presence of one of the quorum commissioners " therein named, on the following day, or, if such following day shall be " a Sunday, or any other day of public rest, then on the succeeding day; " and such opening and reading thereof shall be as effectual, to all intents " and purposes, as if the same had been opened and read, in the presence " of one of the quorum commissioners, on the very day appointed for that " purpose, and shall be deemed and taken to be an opening and reading " thereof, on the day for that purpose appointed: and all records and " other proceedings, under or relating to any commission, which may be " opened and read by virtue of that act, shall and may be drawn up, en-" tered, and made out, under the same date, and in the same form, in all " respects, as if such commission had been opened and read on the day " originally appointed for that purpose: Provided, that the judges and " quorum commissioners are directed and required to have such commis-" sions opened and read, on the very days appointed for that purpose, un-" less the same shall be prevented by the pressure of business elsewhere, " or by some unforceen cause or accident."

Serjeants.

May be called in vacation.

King's counsel,

Serjeants at law are appointed, or called, at the pleasure of the king, by writ issning out of Chancery: And, by a late act of parliament b, his majesty may, in vucation, cause a writ to be issued, directed to any barrister, calling him to the degree of a serjeant at law; and such persons as his majesty may be pleased to call, are authorized to take upon themselves that office, in vacation. From both the above degrees, some are usually selected, to be his majesty's counsel learned in the law; the two principal of whom are called his attorney, and solicitor-general. And a custom has of late years prevailed, of granting letters patent of precedence, to such barristers as the crown thinks proper to honour with that mark of distinction; whereby they are intitled to such rank and pre-audience, as are assigned in their respective patents; sometimes next after the king's attorney-general, but usually next after his majesty's counsel then being. These (as well as the queen's attorney and solicitor-general c,) rank promiscuously with the king's counsel, and together with them sit within the bar of the respective courts. The king's counsel have a standing salary, and cannot be employed in any cause against the crown, without special licence; but those who have merely patents of precedence receive no salaries, and are not sworn; and therefore are at liberty to be retained in causes against the crown d.

Pre-audience of attorney and solicitor general. General order of precedence.

By a mandate of his late majesty, the king's attorney and solicitorgeneral are now to have place and audience, before the king's premier serjeant; and the following may be considered as the order of precedence, or pre-audience, which obtains among practisers: 1. The king's attorneygeneral: 2. The king's solicitor-general: 3. The king's premier serjeant, (so constituted by special patent): 4. The king's ancient serjeant, or the eldest among the king's serjeants: 5. The king's advocate-general: 6. The king's serjeants: 7. The king's counsel, or those who have patents of prepadence, with the queen's attorney and solicitor-general: 8. Serjeants at

The office of chief proclamator, in the court of Common Pleas, is an hereditary office, claimed by descent in fee. This officer has no personal duty attached to his office; but he appoints four criers, one of whom is also court-keeper, and another parter of the court: They hold their places for life; and their duty is to attend the court, and make proclamations, &c.

Sealer of writs.

The office of receiver general and comptroller of the seal of the courts of King's Bench and Common Pleas, (commonly called the seal office,) was granted by king Charles the second, by letters patent dated the 30th of April, in the 25th year of his reign, (after certain estates tail, since determined,) to Henry earl of Euston, afterwards duke of Grafton, in tail male. This office is now vested in the duke of Grafton, who exercises the same by deputy; and has the sealing of all process, except bills of Middlesex, issuing out of the King's Bench and Common Pleas, and the exemplification of recoveries and judgments. But, by a late act of parliament , the commissioners of his majesty's treasury are authorized "to treat, con-" tract, and agree with the several persons beneficially entitled to the fees, " receipts, and profits of the said office, and also of the office of custos " brevium of the court of Common Pleas, for the purchase of all the " rights, profits, privileges and advantages whatever belonging thereto, " for such annuity or annuities, to be charged upon the consolidated fund " of the united kingdom, as the said commissioners, or any three or more " of them, shall think fit; and from and after the confirmation of the " said agreement by parliament, the rights and interests of all persons " whatsoever, claiming or entitled to claim under the said letters patent, " shall cease and determine: And the said annuity or annuities so to be " granted, shall go and be paid from time to time to such person or persons, " as would have been entitled to the fees, profits, and advantages of the " said offices respectively, under the said letters patent, in case that act " had not been passed," able write are to be scaled, till they have been duly signed by the proper officer.

The scaler of writs however, and other law officers, are not bound to Holydays, when attend, or keep open their offices, on licensed holydays. It will therefore be proper to consider what these holydays are, and when they are commanded or allowed to be kept, in term time or vacation, with the remedies for not opening the offices on other days, or refusing to do business in office hours, without the payment of extra fees. Holydays, it appears, are of two kinds: first, such as were originally derived from the church; and secondly, state holydays. The former are of ecclesiastical institution; but when, upon the reformation, the liturgy was settled and established, such days were enjoined to be observed; as plainly appears by the statutes 2 & 3 Edw. VI. c. 1. & 19. and 5 & 6 Edw. VI. c. 3: And though these acts were abrogated by Queen Mary, yet they were revived and continued in the first years of Queen Elizabeth, and King James a.

stated in the preamble to the statute 5 & 6 Edw. VI. c. 3. by which it is enacted that "all the days hereafter mentioned shall be kept and com-" manded to be kept holydays, and none other, that is to say, all Sundays " in the year; the days of the feast of the Circumcision of our Lord, " (being the 1st of January); of the Epiphany, (6th of January); of " the Purification of the blessed virgin Mary, (2d of February); of St. " Matthias the apostle, (24th of February); of the Annunciation of the " blessed virgin, (25th of March); of St. Mark the evangelist, (25th of "April); of St. Philip and Jacob the apostles, (1st of May); of the " Ascension of our Lord, (which is a moveable feast, happening 40 days " after Easter, and 10 days before Whitsuntide); of the Nativity of St. " John the baptist, (24th of June); of St. Peter the apostle, (29th of " June); of St. James the apostle, (25th of July); of St. Bartholomew "the apostle, (24th of August); of St. Matthew the apostle, (21st of " September); of St. Michael the archangel, (29th of September); of St. " Luke the evangelist, (18th of October); of St. Simon and Jude the " apostles, (28th of October); of All Saints, (1st of November); of St. "Andrew the apostle, (30th of November); of St. Thomas the apostle, " (21st of December); of the Nativity of our Lord, (25th of December), " and the three following days, (being the feast days of St. Stephen the " martyr, St. John the evangelist, and the Holy Innocents): and Monday " and Tuesday in Easter and Whitsun weeks:" to which may be added Good Friday, though it is not mentioned in the statute. Hence it appears, there are twenty four licensed holydays in a year, besides those in Easter

The reasons for these holydays, being of a religious nature, are fully Of the church.

OF THE OPPOERS OF THE COURTS

When not allowed.

The statute being express, that " none other days shall be kept or " commanded to be kept holyday, or to abstain from lawful bodily labour," it has been determined, that the feast day of St. Barnabas, (11th of June,) not being mentioned in the statute, is not a legal holyday at the seal office a; and though it appeared by affidavit, in the case of Figgins v. Willie b, that this feast was kept at the excise, customs, &c. and that for 35 years together, and before the then officers came into the office, it had been kept at the scal office in this manner, that is, the outer door had been kept shut the whole day, if St. Barnabas fell on a Monday, Wednesday or Friday, but on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays, it was shut in the mornings only, those being post nights, yet from the opinion of Mr. Justice Blackstone in that case c, it seems that this practice crept in when St. Barnabas became a state holyday, by coinciding with the king's inauguration or accession, which it did for the first 25 years of the reign of George the second, till they were separated by the new style act, in 1752. It is also observable, that there is another feast day observed by the church, which is not mentioned in the statute 5 & 6 Edw. VI. namely, the conversion of St. Paul, which happens on the 25th of January; and the reason why this feast day, as well as that of St. Barnabas, are not mentioned in the statute, probably was, that one of these feasts always happens in Hilary term, and the other frequently in Trinity term; and, as there was already one holyday at least in each of these terms, it might have been thought that the business of the court would have been interrupted, if more had been allowed, and directed to be kept.

State holydays.

State holydays are either appointed by act of parliament, or founded on ancient usage. The former are the anniversary of the Gunpowder Treason, (November 5,) the martyrdom of Charles the First, (January 30,) and the restoration of Charles the Second, (May 29,) which are made state holydays by the statutes 3 Jac. I. c. 1. 12 Car. II. c. 14. (confirmed by 13 Car. II. stat. 1. c. 11.) and 12 Cur. II. c. 30. The latter are the birth day, accession, proclamation, and coronation of the reigning monarch; and the birth days of his consort, and the prince of Walcs. And it has been usual to keep half holydays on some other days; as, on Shrove Tuesday, Ash Wednesday, the feast of All Souls, (November 2,) and the birth day and landing of William the Third, (November 4); the offices being open only half the usual hours of attendance on those days. The 5th of November is a holyday at the office of signer of writs, in the King's Bench, during the time of morning service d. But it has been determined, by the court of Common Pleas, that Lord Mayor's day is not such an holyday, as entitles the sealer of write to an extraordinary fee for sealing a writ on that day e. In the Exchequer, the anniversary of the king's accession has been holden not to be an holyday : And, on the anniversary of the martyrdom of Charles the First, the junior baron of the court sits in the morning, to take motions of course. In that court also, the service of a rule to bring in the body, on the day of the purification, is deemed good service b.

The only licensed holydays in term time, are said to be the Purification Licensed holyin Hilary term, Ascension day in Easter term, and St. John the baptist , (being Midsummer day,) if it happen in Trinity term, unless it be on Friday next after Trinity Sunday, in which case it is dies juridicus, by the statute 32 Hen. VIII. c. 21. d These are considered as dies non juridici; but on all other days, the courts regularly sit for the dispatch of business in term time, though it has been usual on the 30th of January, (being the anniversary of the martyrdom of Charles the First,) for the courts to rise early, or as soon as the common business is over. And, as the courts sit themselves, they expect that the offices should be open on all other days in term time: For, as was observed by Mr. Justice Blackstone, in the case of Sparrow v. Cooper e, the officers are supposed to be every day in court, sitting at the feet of the chief justice, and (in the case of the sealer of writs,) affixing the seal of the court to all judicial writs, which are witnessed at Westminster, in the name of the lord chief justice: The suffering him to do this in a private chamber is a mere indulgence, convenient to the court, the suitor, and the officer, and therefore connived at; but the supposition of law is otherwise. Of course, upon all days when the courts sit at Westminster, he ought to be ready to execute his duty at all convenient hours. On these or similar grounds it has been determined, that the feast of St. Philip and Jacob, which happens on the 1st of May, is not a holyday f, nor the 20th of May, being the restoration of Charles the Second g, when these days fall in Easter term; nor the feast of St. Peter, being the 29th of June, when it falls in Trinity term'; and consequently, no officer can take an extraordinary fee for business done on these days.

It has been made a question, whether the officers are entitled to take Officers' right to extra fees, for business done on legal holydays in vacation: and upon this extra fees, in vacation. subject, Lord Ellenborough is reported to have said, in the case of Tweddale v. Fennelli, that the officers, though they may keep legal holydays, must not be allowed to sell or make a traffic of them. But it should be observed, that in this case an extra fee had been taken by the clerk of the declarations, on the feast of St. Peter; which, though mentioned in the statute 5 & 6 Edw. VI. is not considered as a legal holyday in term time. This question however, came directly before the court of Common Pleas, in the case of Martin v. Bold k, but was not decided. In that case, the deputy sealer of writs, being at his office on a legal holyday, (that of St. Time, which falls on the 18th of October,) a writ was offered him to seal, refusal to seal the writ was not an offence, for which they would grant an attachment: so that the question may be considered as still unsettled.

Remedies against, for not opening offices. The remedies against officers, for not opening their offices, on days which are not licensed holydays, is by special action on the case for consequential damages a, or by summary application to the court for an attachment b; or, if they have taken improper fees, an action assumpsite may be maintained for money had and received; or the court will order them to be refunded c. And, in the Common Pleas, when a complaint is made against an officer of the court, the judges will not refer it to the prothonotaries for examination, but will examine it themselves d.

Officers, and sworn clerks or attornies, &c. in Exchequer of Pleas.

The officers of the court of Exchequer of Pleas, are the clerk of the pleas, and his deputy, who is called the master. The clerk of the pleas is appointed by the chancellor of the Exchequer for life, or quamdiu se bene gesserit, and the deputy or master, by the clerk of the pleas; and the business of the master is to take minutes of what is done in court, draw up rules, make reports on matters referred to him, tax bills of costs, allow bails, and sign process, and judgments. The clerk of the pleas is also clerk of the errors in the Exchequer Chamber; and his duty in that character is to allow writs of error, certify transcripts, and attend the court of Exchequer Chamber, and draw up rules thereon. The general business of the office is the prosecution and defence of actions at common law, and the enrolment of deeds; which business is transacted by four sworn clerks or attornies, appointed by the clerk of the pleas for life, and sixteen side clerks, or clerks in court, four of whom are appointed by each of the attornies. In this court, the office of sealer of writs, &c. is executed by the under-secretary of the chancellor of the Exchequer f.

Sheriffs.

Sheriffs may also, to some purposes, be considered as officers of the courts; and it is their duty to have deputies therein, to receive and return writs and process g: which deputies are required to give their personal attendance in Westminster hall, daily in term time h. And, for the prevention and remedy of delays and abuses in sheriffs, under-sheriffs, bailiffs of liberties, and their deputies, and other bailiffs of sheriffs, &c. in the execution of process and writs, it is a rule h, that "if any such officer shall "wilfully delay the execution or return of any process or execution, or shall take or require any undue fees for the same, or shall give notice to "the defendant, thereby to frustrate the execution of any process or writ, "or, having levied money, shall detain it in his hands, after the return of

Of the Admission, Enrolment, Certificates, and Readmission of Attornies; their Privileges, Disabilities, and Duties, with the Consequences of their Misbehaviour.

Attorney, what, and how formerly appointed.

AN attorney is a person put in the place, stead, or turn of another, to manage his concerns; and may be either appointed to prosecute or defend an action a, or for other purposes b. Before the statute Westm. II. (13) Edw. !.) c. 10. the parties to a suit could not have appeared by attorney, without the king's special warrant, by writ or letters patent; but must have attended the court in person c. By the above and other ancient statutes, a general liberty was given to the parties, of appearing and prosecuting or defending their suits by attorney d; in consequence whereof the increase of attornies was so great, that several acts of parliament were made to regulate them, and limit their number e. And, by the statute 3 Jac. 1. c. 7. § 2. it was enacted, that "none should from thenceforth be admitted " attornies, in any of the king's courts of record at Westminster, but such " as had been brought up in the same courts, or otherwise well practised " in soliciting causes; and had been found by their dealings to be skilful, " and of honest dispositions." In confirmation of this statute, a rule was made in both courts, that none should be admitted an attorney therein, unless he should have served, by the space of five years, as a clerk to some judge, serjeant at law, practising counsel, attorney, clork, or officer of one of the courts at Westminster; and were also, on examination, found of good ability and honesty for such employments f. And it was then usual to nominate twelve or more able practisers of the courts yearly, whose business it was to examine such persons as should desire to be admitted attornies: which persons were first to attend the prothonotary, with their proof of service, and then to repair to the persons appointed to examine them, and on being approved, were to be presented to the court and sworn in, unless some just exception were made against them s. in some of these acts a, there is a clause allowing persons to make and file affidavits of the execution of articles of clerkship, within a limited time, although the persons whom they served, have neglected to take out their annual certificates. This clause, in the indemnity act of 4 Geo. Where the original articles of clerkship had been lost, the court of King's Bench, on motion, ordered that the master should be at liberty to enrol a copy of them. But where a clerk had been articled to an attorney in the country, and the indentures had been sent up to London, to be enrolled in the master's office, pursuant to the statute, and after the clerkship had been served, no trace of the indentures could be discovered in the master's office, the court refused to admit him; although it appeared from the books of the town agent, that a clerk of the latter had paid the fees payable in the master's office upon the enrolment, at the time when it was supposed to have taken place.

And where articles of clerkship appeared to have been entered into collucively, between an attorney and a person who was and continued to act as a turnkey of the King's Bench prison, for the purpose of securing the business of the prisoners to the attorney, the court ordered them to be can-

Service under articles, what sufficient, and what not. with respect to the service in general, under articles of clerkship, it is enacted, by the statute 22 Geo. were assigned to another master, an interval of ten months had clapsed, during which he was not serving under any articles, but, under the assignment, he served the remainder of the time specified, the court would not allow him to be admitted, until he had served out the ten months, under new articles. And it has been holden, that the requisite of the statute is not complied with, by the clerk's serving part of the time with another attorney, though with his master's consent, and the rest of the time with his master b. So, where a clerk to an attorney held, during the term for which he was bound, the office of surveyor of taxes under the crown, the court of King's Bench determined, that he could not be considered as having served his whole time and term in the proper business of an attorney; and upon that ground, ordered him, after he had been admitted, to be struck off the roll c. In this case, the clerk afterwards bound himself to another attorney; and served him for two years; at the expiration of which time he was again admitted an attorney, upon an affidavit stating that for more than three of the five years for which he was originally bound, his service had been given to the attorney to whom he was articled; and on moving to strike him off the roll, it was held, that his service under the first articles, could not be coupled with his service under the second, so as to entitle him to be admitted d. But the court of Common Pleas refused to strike an attorncy off the roll, on an affidavit which stated, that he had not served a regular clerkship; as he had been opposed by counsel before a judge, on the same ground, at the time he was admitted, and no misconduct or malpractice had been imputed to him, subsequently to such admission e.

There is a proviso however, in the statute 22 Geo. II. c. 46.f that "if Proviso in case " any attorney or solicitor, to or with whom any such person shall be so " bound, shall happen to die, before the expiration of such term, or shall tice, &c. The duty of one pound fifteen shillings however is payable, by the last general stamp act b, for any articles of clerkship or contract, whereby any person shall become bound, to serve as a clerk, in order to his admission as an attorney or solicitor, for the residue of the term for which he was originally bound, in consequence of the death of his former master or of the contract between them being vacated by consent, or by rule of court, or in any other event; and for any counterpart or duplicate thereof.

Cases of death, and bankruptey.

Disputes between attornies and their clerks.

Service to

An articled clerk, having served part of his clerkship with an attorney who died before the expiration of his term, is it seems at liberty, even after an interval of six years, to serve the remainder of his clerkship with another attorney, with a view to his admittance c: And the court of King's Bench granted a rule to discharge an articled clerk, where the attorney to whom he was bound had become bankrupt, and absconded; and directed the rule to be served at the last place of abode of the attorney, and on the clerk to the commission of bankruptcy, and also to be stuck up in the King's Bench office d. This court has also a summary jurisdiction over matters in difference between attornies and their clerks and therefore, where a clerk had misconducted himself, and left the service of the attorney to whom he was articled, at the end of a year and an half, and the latter refused to take him back in consequence of his previous misconduct, the court referred it to the master, who decided that a portion of the premium should be returned; and this decision was confirmed by the court, though the point in question had been decided otherwise in a suit in the Exchequer . But the court refused to compel an attorney to execute an assignment of articles of clerkship, where the clerk had been guilty of criminal conversation with the attorney's wife, even though the attorney had promised to assign him over f.

It is a rule, that "no person who shall enter into articles with an at"torney or attornies, shall be at liberty to serve the agent or agents of "such attorney or attornies, under such articles, for a longer time than

The record of admission is of so high an authority, that if an exemplification of it be annexed to a plea of privilege, the plaintiff must reply nul tiel record, and cannot otherwise try the fact of the defendant's being an attorney h.

being often very difficult to be found, whereby it was impracticable duly to serve them with notices, summonses, orders and rules, to the great delay of the proceedings, a rule was made in this court a, that the master should forthwith cause to be prepared a proper alphabetical book, for the purposes after mentioned; and that the same should be publicly kept at the master's office in the King's Bench walk, to be there inspected by any attorney or his clerk, without fee or reward; and that every attorney practising in this court, and residing in London and Westminster, or within ten miles of the same, should before the first day of the then next term, enter in such book, in alphabetical order, his name and place of abode, or some other proper place, within the cities of London and Westminster, where he might be served with such notices, summonses, orders and rules; and it is thereby required, that "every attorney afterwards to be admit-" ted, and practising and residing as aforesaid, shall, upon his admission, " make the like entry; and that as often as any such attorney shall change " his place of abode, or the place where he may be so served with notices, " summonses, orders and rules, he shall make the like entry thereof, in " the said book; and that all notices, summonses, orders and rules, which " do not require a personal service, shall be deemed sufficiently served on " such attorney, if a copy thereof shall be left at the place lastly entered " in such book, with any person resident at or belonging to such place; " and if any such attorney shall neglect to make such entry, that then the " fixing up of any notice, or the copy of any summons, order or rule, for " such attorney, in the said master's office, shall be deemed a sufficient " service, unless the matter be such as shall require a personal service." In conformity to this rule, it is usual for practitioners, who live remote from the inns of court or chancery, to add to the place of their abode, the name and place of abode of some other person, where and with whom notices, summonses, orders, rules and other proceedings that do not require personal service, may be left for them, near to such inns b: But when the name and place of abode of the attorney are entered, then service at that place is the proper service c.

Attorney may be admitted in different courts.

An attorney, sworn admitted and enrolled in any of the courts of law, mentioned in the statute 2 Geo. II. c. 23<sup>d</sup>. may be sworn admitted and enrolled a solicitor, in all or any of the courts of equity therein mentioned, without any fee for the oath, or stamp on the parchment whereon such admission shall be written f: And an attorney in any of his majesty's courts of record at Westminster, is capable of being admitted to practise as an attorney in any inferior court of record, provided he be in all other respects capable and qualified to be admitted an attorney, according to the usage and custom of such inferior courts. rolled an attorney of his majesty's court of King's Bench or Common Pleas at Westminster 2. And a solicitor in any of the courts of equity mentioned in the statute 2 Geo. II. c. 23. may be sworn admitted and enrolled a solicitor in all or any of the said other courts of equity, or in any inferior court of equity b. An admitted attorney of the court of King's Bench may sue out a commission of bankrupt, and maintain an action for his fees and disbursements thereon, although he be not a solicitor in Chancery. But a solicitor on the equity side of the court of Exchequer, is not entitled, as such, to practise in the court of Chancery; nor, if he do, can he maintain an action for the amount of his billd: And it seems, that a solicitor of the latter court cannot, by consent in writing, authorize a solicitor of the court of Exchequer to practise there in his name e.

It is also declared to be lawful, for any person who shall be sworn ad- Practising in mitted and enrolled to be an attorney, in any of his majesty's courts of record at Westminster, &c. by and with the consent and permission of any attorney, in any of the said other courts of record, &c. such consent being in writing, signed by such attorney, and in the name of such attorney, to sue out any writ or process, or to commence, carry on, prosecute or defend any action or actions, or any other proceedings in such court, notwithstanding such person is not sworn or admitted to be an attorney of such court f. And where an attorney acts in the name of another, a demand of costs by the acting attorney is good g. But where an attorney's name Proceedings, had been set to process, without his authority, the court ordered the proceedings to be set aside, and granted an attachment against the plaintiff's attorney<sup>h</sup>. So, where process in the Common Pleas appeared to have been sued out in the name of A. by B., neither of whom were attornies of this court, and B. had no authority from any other attorney to act in his name, the court set aside the proceedings, and ordered A. and B. to pay the costs i. And where judgment was entered up by an attorney's clerk, in the name, but without the knowledge or consent of a regular attorney, it was ordered to be set aside k.

Proceedings against attornies, on stat. 22 Geo. II. c. 46. § 11.

The courts, in several recent instances, have proceeded on this statute, by ordering attornies, who have acted as agents for, or suffered their names to be made use of, upon the account or for the profit of unqualified persons, to be struck off the roll; and the unqualified persons to be committed to prison b. And where a bailiff had written to an attorney for writs, which the latter sent, without knowing any thing of the parties or circumstances; but the bailiff had never represented himself, or been considered as an attorney, nor looked for any profit upon the law proceedings; the court of King's Bench held, that though this was not a case within the statute, yet that it was a most improper practice, which the court, in virtue of its general jurisdiction over attornies, would punish severely. But the court of Common Pleas refused to strike an attorney off the roll, on an affidavit which stated, that the person who had lately been his clerk, and who lived at a town eight miles distant from the residence of the attorney, and carried on business at an office, over the door of which was written the attorney's name, but that he only attended on market days, and then transacted all his business at an inn; on the ground that it should have been shewn, that such person either participated in the profits, or carried on business on his own account d. In proceeding against an unqualified person, for practising in the name of an attorney. contrary to the provisions of this statute, the party is not entitled to have the witnesses in support of the charge examined vive vove; but after the matter had been referred, by consent of counsel, to the master of the crown office, who reported the party in contempt, the court of King's Bench allowed him to bring the whole of the case under their own consideration, when brought up to be committed a. And, in the Common Pleas, after the court had ordered the parties to be attached, and give bail to answer interrogatories before the prothonotary, who reported them to be in contempt, for not having satisfactorily answered the interrogatories put to them; such report was holden not to be conclusive on the parties, but that they might take exceptions to any specific or material parts of it b. And where, after the prothonotary had made his report, it appeared that certain books of account had not been laid before him, which tended to support the answers given by one of the parties; the court ordered the prothonotary to inspect them, but would not allow a clerk who had made the entries therein, to be examined by the prothonotary, on an application made by the prosecutor for that purpose b.

It will next be proper to consider the certificates of attornies, which Certificates of were first required by the statute 25 Geo. III. c. 80. And, by a subsequent statute', "every person admitted sworn and enrolled a solicitor " or attorney, &c. in any of his majesty's courts at Westminster, &c. or in " any other court in England, holding pleas where the debt or damage " shall amount to forty shillings or more, shall annually, between the first " day of November and the end of Michaelmas term then next following, " during such time as he shall continue so to practise in any of the said " courts, or before such person shall commence, carry on or defend any " action or suit, or any proceedings whatsoever, in any of the said courts, " deliver in to the commissioners of the stamp duties, or to their officer " appointed for that purpose, at the head office of stamps in Middlesex, a " paper or note in writing, containing the name and usual place of resi-" dence of such person; and thereupon, and upon payment of the duties, " according to the place of his residence, every such person shall be en-" titled to a certificate, duly stamped, to denote the payment of the said "duties; which certificate the said commissioners shall cause to be im-" mediately issued, under the hand and name of the proper officer, in such " form as they shall devise." The period fixed for attornies, &c. to take out their annual certificates, and pay the stamp duty thereon, was altered by the statute 54 Geo. III. c. 144d. by which it is enacted, that "all " attornies, &c. who by the laws in force would be bound to take out " stamped certificates, and pay the duty thereon, at the head office of " stamps in Middlesex, annually, between the first day of November and " the end of Michaelmas term following, shall in future take out such " certificates, and pay the duty thereon, and do all other acts necessary " for that purpose, annually, between the fifteenth day of November and " the sixteenth day of December in each year; and in default thereof " shall be subject and liable to such and the same penalties, forfeitures

But an attorney may sue by attachment of privilege, though his certificate has expired, and not been renewed, if the writ be sued out within a year from the expiration of his certificate.

Stamp duties payable on.

The duties now payable for certificates, under the last general stamp act b, are twelve pounds yearly, by every person admitted as an attorney or solicitor, in any of his majesty's courts at Westminster, &c. if he shall reside in the city of London or Westminster, or within the limits of the two-penny post in England, or within the city or shire of Edinburgh, and shall have been admitted, or in possession of his office, for the space of three years or upwards; or if he shall not have been admitted or in possession so long, six pounds: and if he shall reside elsewhere, and have been admitted or in possession of his office, for the space of three years or upwards, eight pounds; or if he shall not have been admitted or in possession so long, four pounds.

Entry of.

And, by the 37 Geo. III. c. 90 °. "every certificate so to be obtained as therein mentioned, shall be entered in one of the courts in which the person described therein shall be admitted and enrolled, with the respective officer or officers of the said courts, appointed by the 25 Geo. III. c. 80. to grant certificates of enrolment or admission, within the time therein before prescribed, or before such person shall be permitted to practise as aforesaid; and the said respective officers shall from time to time, upon payment of the fee of one shilling, enter, in alphabetical order, the names of the persons described in such respective certificates, together with the places of such their residence as aforesaid, and the respective dates of such certificates, in books or rolls to be prepared for that purpose; to which books or rolls, in the said courts respectively, all persons shall and may at seasonable times have free access, without fee or reward."

Consequences of omission.

By the same statute d, "if any person shall, in his own name, or in the name of any other person or persons, sue out any writ or process, or commence, prosecute, carry on or defend any action or suit, or any proceedings, in any of the courts aforesaid, for or in expectation of any gain,

But it is no ground of objection to bail a, nor for cancelling a bail bond b, or setting aside proceedings, that the attorney by whom the bail was put in, or who sued out the writ, had neglected to take out his certificate: and the circumstance of the plaintiff's cause having been conducted by an attorney, who has not obtained his certificate, does not deprive the plaintiff of his right to full costs against the defendant c.

Also, by the statute 44 Geo. III. c. 98. § 14. "every person who shall, Certificates of " for or in expectation of any fee, gain or reward, directly or indirectly, " draw or prepare any conveyance of, or deed relating to, any real or per-" sonal estate, or any proceedings in law or equity, other than and except " serjeants at law, barristers, solicitors, attornics, notaries, proctors, agents " or procurators, having obtained regular certificates, and special pleaders, " draftsmen in equity, and conveyancers, being members of one of the four " inns of court, and having taken out the certificates mentioned in the " schedule to that act annexed, and other than and except persons solely " employed to engross any deed, instrument, or other proceedings, not " drawn or prepared by themselves, and for their own account respectively, " and other than and except public officers, drawing or preparing official " instruments, applicable to their respective offices, and in the course of " their duty, shall forfeit and pay for every such offence, the sum of fifty " pounds: Provided always, that nothing therein contained shall extend, " or be construed to extend, to prevent any person or persons drawing or " preparing any will or other testamentary papers, or any agreement not " under seal, or any letter of attorney." The certificates required by the Stamp duty on above statute are subject, by the last general stamp act d, to the duty of 121. if the party reside in the city of London or Westminster, or within the limits of the two-penny post in England, or 81. if he shall reside elsewhere: But, under the latter act, such persons only are qualified to practise, as are members of one of the four inns of court, &c e. ## OF THE RE-ADMISSION OF ATTORNIES.

HL c. 99. § 26.

III. E. 90. § 26. 30. though no power to sue is expressly given by that statute; for the 25 Geo. III. c. 80. § 29. which gives that power, and the 37 Geo. III. c. 90. are in pari materia a. And if an attorney be in partnership with another, and they carry on their business together, and their joint names are put on their papers in causes in their office, either of them is liable to the penalties of the last-mentioned act, for practising as an attorney, without entering his certificate; though it do not appear that one of them had any profit or advantage from the suit for which the qui tam action is brought b. The consequence is, and it has been accordingly determined, that two attornics or proctors cannot be sued together, as for one offence, in practising without having obtained and entered their certificate c. It has likewise been determined, that the certificate act does not extend to the county court, though an attorney prosecute a suit there, by virtue of a writ of justicies, for more than 40s. d. But, by the statute 44 Geo. III. c. 98. § 10. the penalties incurred by virtue of that or any other act of parliament, relating to the stamp duties, can only be recovered in the usine of the attorney general. And acts of indemnity are occasionally passed, to relieve attornies who have neglected to take out their certificates in due time .

As a further inducement for attornies to take out their certificates, it is

Admission of attornies void, for not taking out certificate.

III. c. 90 f. that "every person admitted, " sworn and enrolled in any of the courts therein mentioned, who shall " neglect to obtain his certificate thereof, in the manner before directed, " for the space of one whole year, shall from thenceforth be incapable of " practising in his own name, or in the name of any other person, in any " of the said courts, by virtue of such admission, entry and enrolment; " and the admission, entry and enrolment of such person, in any of the " said courts, shall from thenceforth be null and void. On the above statute, it has been holden, in the Common Pleas, that where a person is admitted an attorney, and omits to take out his certificate within the year, he must be re-admitted, before he can practise, though he should never have practised on his former admission h. And, in the King's Bench, where an attorney has discontinued practice, after the expiration of his certificate, though in consequence of pecuniary difficulties and illness, or of absence abroad, a term's notice must be stuck up, and entered at the judges' chambers, for the purpose of re-admitting him, in like manner as upon an original admission c. But where an attorney continued to practise, after the expiration of his certificate, through the inadvertence or misconduct of his agent or clerk, in neglecting to get it renewed, the court, on an affidavit of the circumstances, will re-admit him, without giving a term's notice d. And where the certificate of an attorney of the Common Pleas had been, through the mistake of his agent, filed in the* King's Bench, where he was not admitted, for four successive years, such certificate was allowed to be entered and filed in the Common Pleas, on notice of the application being given to the Stamp office e. Where a term's What deemed notice was necessary, and the party intending to apply to be re-admitted on the roll, affixed his notice outside the court of King's Bench, in the morning, before the sitting of the court, on the first day of the term of which the notice was intended to be given, this was holden to be a sufficient compliance with the rule f.

In the King's Bench, it is a rule, that where an agent employed to Payment of fine take out an attorney's annual certificate, has neglected to do so, and the duty. attorney has from ignorance of the fact continued to practise, the court will only allow him to be re-admitted, upon payment of a fine, with the arrears of duty 5. But attornies have been re-admitted, in that court, without paying any fine or arrears, on making it appear that they had never practised, or had discontinued practice after their last certificate expired, or that they were prevented from practising by illness, or by being reduced to the situation of a clerk!: and the distinction is said to be this; that when the party has been practising in the interval, he must pay the arrears of duty; but not so, when he has not practised m. So, in the Common Pleas, an attorney who had ceased to practise after the passing of the 25 Geo. III. c. 80. and before the operation of the 37 Geo. III. c. 90. § 31. had commenced, was re-admitted, without paying any penalty or arrears of duty n. And, in a late case o, an attorney who had ceased to practise for six years, was re-admitted in that court, on payment of a nominal fine, without the arrears of duty; on an affidavit, stating that he had discontinued to practise, on account of his affairs having become embarrassed, that he had not practised in the interval, and that no misconduct could be imputed to him in his character of an attorney.

Rule, and affidavit, for re-admitting attorney. The rule for re-admitting an attorney is a rule to shew cause; founded on an affidavit, stating the payment of the duty on the articles of clerk-ship, the admission under them, and up to what time the attorney obtained his certificate: It must also be sworn, that he has since discontinued to practise; for otherwise he might be criminally culpable a: and, where a considerable time has elapsed, the reason of his ceasing to take out his certificate must be stated, and how he has been since employed, in order to shew, that he has not been employed in any manner that may unfit him for the duties of his profession b. The affidavit then states, that a term's notice has been given, when necessary, of his intention to apply to the court; and that notice of his name and place of abode, &c. has been served on the solicitor to the commissioners of stamp duties c. An attorney may be re-admitted on the last day of term, when notice has been stuck up all the term d.

On last day of term.

Privileges of attornies, in K. B. or C. P.

An attorney, when duly admitted, enrolled and certificated, is supposed to be always present in court: and on that account, has many privileges belonging to him, in common with the other officers of the court. Where an attorney of the King's Bench or Common Pleas is plaintiff, he is entitled to sue in his own court, by attachment of privilege e; and may lay and retain the venue in Middlesex f. Where he is defendant, he must be sued in his own court by bill g, even as acceptor of a bill of exchange h; and cannot be arrested, or holden to special bail i. It is also said, that an attorney is entitled to have his cause tried at bark. And as an attorney is not subject to the jurisdiction of the courts of conscience, except where he is expressly made liable thereto, as in London', Westminster ", and the Tower Humlets, he may in all other cases sue, and be sued, in his own court, for debts under forty shillings. But an attorney defendant has not the privilege of changing the venue into Middlesex, when it is laid in another county q. In the Common Pleas, the attornics and officers of the court ought to be sued there by bill, because they are supposed to be always present in court; but the serjeants and their clerks, and the clerks of the judges and prothonotaries, are, it is said, privileged to be sued in the Common Pleas by original writ, and not by bill r.

Where an attorney is arrested upon process issuing out of an inferior How taken adcourt, he may sue out his writ of privilege a, which ought to be allowed instanter b: But if he be arrested upon process issuing out of a superior court, his remedy is by moving the court, to be discharged out of custody on common bail; or by finding special bail, and pleading his privilege in abatement. If an attorney or other officer of the King's Bench be arrested, by process issuing out of the same court, he may move to be discharged on common bail c. But an attorney or officer of a different court was formerly obliged to find special bail, and plead his privilege in abatement d. This distinction however seems to be now abolished: and, in a late case, the court of King's Bench stayed the proceedings, in an action brought in that court against an attorney of the Common Pleas, who gave notice of his privilege, but neglected to plead it, after the plaintiff had signed judgment for want of a plea e. where an attorney of the Common Pleas was arrested, on an attachment of privilege, at the suit of an attorney of the King's Bench, the latter court ordered the bail-bond to be delivered up to be cancelled, on his entering a common appearance f; and, in a subsequent case, the proceedings were ordered to be set aside for irregularity, with costs g. But where an attorney, having been arrested in the beginning of January, put in bail above, and did not apply to the court for his discharge until the 3d of February, the court held the application to be too late h. A defendant who is sued by bill, as an attorney of the court of King's Bench, not being such, may set aside the proceedings as irregular i. But where, in a similar case, a rule was obtained for setting aside the proceedings, on the ground that they were absolutely void, and not merely irregular; the court held, that they were not void, but irregular only; and that the defendant, not having applied in time, could not take advantage of the irregularity k.

In the Exchequer of Pleas, an attorney, side clerk or other officer, may In Exchequer. sue by venire facias, or capias of privilege 1, and must be sued by bill. A person suing there by process of privilege, is entitled to have his writ scaled, without paying fees m; and it is holden, that an attorney of the King's Bench or Common Pleas may be arrested and held to bail, upon a capias of privilege issuing out of this court n. It also seems, that an officer or accountant, suing with his wife, is entitled to privilege in the Exchequer o: but it is otherwise, when he is sued with her p; for a bill cannot be filed against the wife, as present in court. It should also be observed, that in the Exchequer, a member of either university cannot set up his privilege, against that of an officer or accountant, or against any person suing as a debtor; this court not being mentioned in their charter of exemption a. But an attorney, not being one of the sworn attornies of the court, is not entitled, as such, to the privilege of laying his venue in Middlesex b.

Exemption of attornies, from offices.

An attorney or officer is also, by reason of the supposed necessity of his attendance in court, exempt from all offices that require personal service, as sheriffe, constable d, overseer of the poor e, &c.; and formerly, he was not liable to serve in the militia f; but several acts of parliament that were passed in the course of the late reign, having allowed personal service in the militia to be commuted for a certain sum of money, to be laid out in providing a substitute, it has been holden that this exemption no longer exists s.

Privileges of, confined to practising attornies. These privileges are allowed, not so much for the benefit of attornies, as of their clients h; and are therefore confined to attornies who practise, or at least have practised within a year k; for it is a rule, that such attornies as have not been attending their employment in the King's Bench for the space of a year, unless hindered by sickness, be not allowed their privilege of attornies! And an attorney, not having practised for some time previous to the issuing of the plaintiff's writ against him, is not privileged from being arrested thereon, and held to bail, on the ground of having re-commenced his practice, and taken out his certificate, before he was actually arrested m. But an attorney, we have seen n, may sue by attachment of privilege, though his certificate has expired, and not been renewed, if the writ be sued out within a year from the expiration of his certificate.

When of different courts.

When the plaintiff and defendant are attornies of different courts, the plaintiff is allowed his privilege of suing the defendant by attachment of and in this case it is commonly said, that there is no privilege against privilege; or in other words, the privilege of the plaintiff takes away that of the defendant; for the attendance of the plaintiff is as necessary in his court, as that of the defendant in his, and therefore the cause is legally attached in the court where the plaintiff is an officer p. But where the plaintiff and defendant are both attornies of the same court, the defendant is entitled to his privilege of being sued by bill a; and if not so sued, he may plead his privilege in abatement, or the court on motion will stay the proceedings, but without costs b. In the King's Bench, where an action is brought by an attorney of that court, against an attorney of the Common Pleas, though the former is entitled to sue in his own court by attachment of privilege, yet he cannot arrest the defendant, and hold him to special bail c. But in the Exchequer, we have seen d, an attorney of the King's Bench, or Common Pleas, may be arrested and held to bail upon a capias of privilege, issuing out of the former court d. So, in Chancery, it has been determined, that an attorney of the King's Bench, and practising solicitor of the court of Chancery, may be arrested on an attachment of privilege, at the suit of a sworn clerk of the latter court. And it has even been holden, that an attorney of the King's Bench may be arrested on an attachment of privilege, issuing out of the court of Common Pleas at Lancaster, at the suit of an attorney of that court f.

An attorney may also waive his privilege, either, when plaintiff, by Waiver of prisuing as a common person s, or, when defendant, by not claiming it in due time, or in a proper manner h: And it seems that an attorney waives his privilege, by entering into a bail bond, on process issuing out of a different court; as he must be sued in the court out of which the process issued i. Where an attorney of the Common Pleas is in the actual custody of the marshal, he may be sued in the King's Bench as a prisoner, by third persons k: But where an attorney of the Common Pleas puts in bail, to an action depending in the King's Bench, he does not thereby lose his privilege; but may plead it in that action, or in any other brought against him by the bye: for it would be absurd, that he who founds his action on that of another, should be in a better condition than the origi-Yet where an attorney, after having put in bail, waives his privilege, by pleading in chief in one action, it is construed to be a waiver of privilege, in all other actions brought against him by the bye, during the same term 1. And if the defendant plead his privilege, after he has waived it, the plaintiff in his replication must shew the waiver, and rely upon the estoppel in. It is likewise settled, that an attorney shall not be allowed his privilege, as against the king "; or where he sues or

But an attorney sued by bill, jointly with a person having privilege of parliament, does not lose his privilege e.

Disabilities, and restrictions of.

As an attorney is entitled to many privileges, so he is subject to some disabilities and restrictions. By the statute 1 Hen. V. c. 4. "no under-sheriff, " sheriff's clerk, receiver, or sheriff's bailiff, shall be attorney in the king's " courts, during the time that he is in office: " which statute is enforced by rules of courtf, declaring that "no under-sheriff, or bailiff of sheriffs or " liberties, be admitted, during such their employment, to practise as at-" tornies, under pain of expulsion from the employment of an attorney, " and not to be re-admitted." And by the statute 22 Geo. II. c. 46. § 14. "no clerk of the peace or his deputy, nor any under-sheriff or his de-" puty, shall act as a solicitor, attorney or agent, or sue out any process, " at any general or quarter sessions of the peace, to be held for any place " where he shall execute his office, upon pain of forfeiting fifty pounds." By rule of Mich. 1654. § 1. "no attorney can be lessee in ejectment; or " bail for a defendant, in any action depending in either court g." statute 5 Geo. II. c. 18. § 2. " no attorney or solicitor shall be capable to " continue or be a justice of the peace in England or Wales, during such " time as he shall continue in the business or practice of an attorney or " solicitor h." By other acts of parliament i, "no attorney or solicitor, or " person practising as such, can be a commissioner of the land tax, without " possessing one hundred pounds a year." And it was usual to except attornies, who had embezzled their clients' money, out of the insolvent debtors' acts k.

When prisoners.

Also, by the statute 12 Geo. II. c. 13<sup>1</sup>. "no attorney or solicitor, who what shall be a prisoner in any gaol or prison, or within the limits, rules or liberties thereof, shall, during his confinement, in his own name, or in the name of any other attorney or solicitor, sue out any writ or process, or commence or prosecute any action or suit, in any courts of law or equity; and all proceedings in such actions or suits, shall be void and of none effect: And such attorney or solicitor, so commencing or prose-Provided never-" less, that nothing in the said act contained, shall extend, or be con-" strucd to extend, to prevent any attorney or solicitor so confined as " aforesaid, from carrying on or transacting any suit or suits, commenced " before the confinement of such attorney or solicitor as aforesaida." This statute has been held to relate only to the prosecuting, and not to the defending of suits b: And an attorney, when in prison, may sue by attachment of privilege, for a debt of his own c. So where, after an action commenced by an attorney, he became a prisoner, and then the bail-bond was assigned, and he being still a prisoner, commenced an action on the bailbond, this was holden to be a continuance of the original suit, commenced before the attorney became a prisoner d. But an attorney entering a plaint, and suing out process in the county court, whilst he is a prisoner in gaol, is within the meaning of the above statute, and liable to be struck off the roll e.

The principal duties of an attorney or agent are care, skill, and in- Duties of, in tegrity: And, if he be not deficient in any of these essential requisites, he is not responsible for any error or mistake, arising in the exercise of his profession. To use the words of Lord Mansfield, in the case of Pitt v. Yalden f, "that part of the profession which is carried on by attornies is liberal and reputable, as well as useful to the public, when they conduct themselves with honour and integrity; and they ought to be protected, where they act to the best of their skill and knowledge: but every man is liable to error:" and his lordship added, "he should be very sorry, that it should be taken for granted, that an attorney is answerable for every error or mistake, and liable to be punished for it, by being charged with the debt sued for. A counsel may mistake, as well as an attorney; yet no one will say that a counsel who has been mistaken, shall be charged with the debt. The advice of a counsel is indeed honorary, and he does not demand a fee for it; the attorney may demand a compensation; but neither of them ought to be charged with the debt for a mistake. Not only counsel, but judges may differ, or doubt, or take time to consider: therefore an attorney ought not to be liable, in cases of reasonable doubt." But in ordinary cases, if an attorney be deficient in skill or care, by which a loss arises to his client, he is liable to a special action on the case for damages s. And the court, in some instances, will order an attorney to pay costs to his own client, for neglect a; or to the opposite party, for vexatious and improper conduct b. So, if an attorney obtain a rule nisi, upon suggestions which turn out to be groundless, the court, in discharging the rule, will make him pay the costs of the application c. And if a rule be made upon an attorney, for the delivery of writings, or payment of costs, &c. and it be not obeyed, the courts will enforce it by attachment: which is also the regular mode of proceeding against an attorney, for the non-performance of his undertaking to put in bail d, &c. It is not usual, however, for the court to interfere in a summary way, for a mere breach of promise, where there is nothing criminal c; or on account of negligence or unskilfulness f, except it be very gross f; or for the misconduct of an attorney, independently of his profession h.

To appear in court, &c.

It was formerly the duty of attornies to appear personally, in the King's Bench, on or before the fourteenth day of Michaelmas term, and the seventh day of every other term i: and they are required, when called upon, to attend the court on motions k, the judges on summonses, and the master, on expointments l. And, on every appointment to be made by the master, the party on whom the same shall be served, shall attend such appointment, without waiting for a second; or in default thereof, the master shall proceed ex parte on the first appointment m.

After appearance.

When an attorney once appears, or undertakes to be attorney for another, he shall not be permitted to withdraw himself n; and it is said to be his duty to proceed in the suit, although his client neglect to bring him money: and therefore if, on that account, he neglect to proceed, according to the practice of the court, whereby judgment of nonpros is signed against the plaintiff, the court will make a rule upon the attorney to pay the costs of such judgment, together with the costs of the application o. It is even said to have been determined, in the Common Pleas, that an attorney having quitted his client before trial, could not bring an action for his bill r. So, in Chancery, it has been holden, that a solicitor proceeding to a certain length in a cause, shall not leave it there, but shall go

When writings come to an attorney's hands, in the way of his business When compellaas an attorney, the court on motion will make a rule upon him, to deliver them back to the party c, on payment of what is due to him d; and particularly, when he has given an undertaking to re-deliver them e: But when they come to his hands in any other manner, or on any other account, the party must resort to his action f. And accordingly, in a late case g, the court refused to proceed summarily against a steward, who was an attorney, to compel him to account before the master, for receipts and payments in respect of a mortgaged estate, and to pay the balance to his employer, and deliver up on oath all deeds, writings, &c. relative to the estate; this being the proper subject of a bill in equity, and not a case for a mandamus, to compel a steward of a manor to deliver up court rolls, &c. So the court would not compel an attorney, upon a summary application, to deliver up, on payment of his demand, a lease put into his hands, for the purpose of making an assignment of it; there being no cause in court, nor any criminal conduct imputed to him in respect of it h: Nor will they make an order on an attorney, to deliver up a deed, which he holds as party and trustee i. seen *, a summary jurisdiction over matters in difference between attornies and their clerks.

Jury of, and matters inquirable by. For the reformation and punishment of abuses in general, there is an old rule of court, which has however fallen into disuse, that a jury of able and credible officers, clerks, and attornies, shall be impanelled once in three years, and sworn to inquire; 1. Of the points usually inquirable by the writ, viz. falsities, contempts, misprisions, and offences: 2. Of such who have been admitted attornies or clerks, and are notoriously unfit; their names to be presented to the court, and they to be punished or removed, as the case shall require: 3. Of new or exacted fees, and of those that have taken them, under whatsoever pretence; and to prepare and present a table of the due and just fees, that the same may be fixed and continue in every office; and likewise for the Marshalsea and Fleet prisons: And that some persons be enjoined and sworn to give evidence, viz. some clerks of the court, and some attornies in every county, not excluding others.

Misbehaviour of, and its consequences.

When an attorney is charged by affidavit, with any fraud or malpractice in his profession, contrary to the obvious rules of justice and common honesty, the court, on motion, will order him to answer the matters of the affidavit; and in general, if he positively deny the malpractices imputed to him, they will dismiss the complaint; but otherwise they will grant an attachment d. And where an attorney, required to answer the matters of an affidavit, swore in his exculpation to an incredible story, the court of King's Bench granted an attachment against him, though he positively denied the malpractices with which he was charged e. And where an attorney had behaved himself in such a manner, as to afford reasonable ground for thinking that he had misconducted himself in his professional character, although it turned out, upon investigation, that there was no sufficient ground for imputing actual misconduct to him, the court would not give him his costs of the application f. But the court will not call upon an attorney summarily, to answer the matters of an affidavit, charging him with an indictable offence; but will leave the parties complaining to prosecute for the same s. It has been doubted, whether the affirmation of a Quaker is admissible, to call upon an attorney of this court, to answer the matters of an affidavit h: and the true distinction, to be collected from all the cases upon the subject, seems to be this; that if the object of the

If an attorney practise, after he has been convicted of forgery, perjury, subornation of perjury, or common barratry, he is liable to be transported i. And where an attorney had been struck off the roll of the court of King's Bench, on the report of the master, for misconduct, the court of Common Pleas on motion, supported by an affidavit of the master's report, struck him off the roll of the latter court k. But, in a subsequent case, the rule for striking him off the roll was refused; the contents of the affidavits, on which the court of King's Bench acted, not having been stated, and there being no proof or allegation, that the attorney had been struck off for a misdemeanour 1. And striking an attorney off the roll is not always understood to be a perpetual disability; for the court have in some instances permitted him to be restored, considering the punishment in the light of a suspension only m.

CHAP. IV.

Of the Means of commencing personal Actions, in the KING'S BENCH, COMMON PLEAS, and EXCHEQUER; and the Prosecution and Defence of them in Person, or by Attorney: and of Paupers, and Infants.

THE means of commencing personal actions, in the court of King's Personal ac-Bench, conformable to its jurisdiction a, are—tions, how commenced, in K. B.

- I. By ORIGINAL WRIT;
  - 1. Against common Persons.
  - 2. Against Pecrs of the Realm, and Members of the House of
  - 3. Against Corporations, and Hundredors.
- II. By BILL of MIDDLESEX, or LATITAT.
- III. By ATTACHMENT of PRIVILEGE, at the suit of Attornies, and Officers of the Court.
- IV. By BILL;
  - 1. Against Members of the House of Commons.
  - 2. Against Attornies, and Officers of the Court.
  - 3. Against Prisoners, in custody of the Marshal, or Sheriff, &c.

In the Common Pleas, the means of commencing personal actions, are In C. P. first, by original writ, issuing out of Chancery; which is either a special original, adapted to the nature of the action, or a common original, in trespass quare clausum fregit: The former, though it may be had in any case, is only necessary in the first instance against peers, corporations, and hundredors; the latter, not requiring personal service, is sometimes used, when the defendant keeps out of the way, so that he cannot be arrested, or personally served with process: Secondly, by capias quarc clausum fregit, founded on a supposed original, which is the common mode of commencing actions in this court, and answers to the bill of Middlesex or latitat in the King's Bench: Thirdly, by attachment of privilege, at the suit of attornies and officers of the court: Fourthly, by bill, which is twofold; first, against attornies and officers; and secondly, against members of the house of commons b. It has been said, that if a man be in the Fleet, a plaintiff may have a bill of debt against him, in the same manner as, in the King's Bench, against a man in custody of the marshal *; though Fitzherbert adds, that it was not usual. In practice, actions against prisoners in custody of the warden of the Fleet, are commenced in the same manner as those against other persons, by original writ.

In Exchequer.

In the Exchequer, the means of commencing personal actions are first, by venire facias ad respondendum b, which is in nature of an original writ; and was the process used at common law, against persons having privilege of parliament c: Secondly, by subpana ad respondendum d, which is a process directed to the defendant, analogous to the subpana in Chancery, or on the equity side of the Exchequer: Thirdly, by quo minus capiuse, which answers to the bill of Middlesex or latitat in the King's Bench, and capius quare clausum fregit in the Common Pleas: Fourthly, by venire facias f, or capias of privilege g, at the suit of attornies and officers of the court: And lastly, by bill, which is three-fold; first, against attornies and officers h; secondly, against members of the house of commons i, on the statute 12 & 13 W. III. c. 3. § 2.; and thirdly, against prisoners k, in custody of the sheriff, &c. or warden of the Fleet 1. In an inferior court, it is no ground of error, upon a judgment after verdict, that the plaint was levied before the cause of action accrued m: But it seems that a custom to issue a summons and attachment at the same time, is bad in law n.

In inferior court.

In the prosecution and defence of personal actions, the parties must appear in person, or by attorney; or, in case of infancy, by prochein amy, or guardian.

Appearance, in person, or by attorney.

. 2 . B.

At common law, the plaintiff and defendant must, in general, have appeared in person; and could not have appeared by attorney, without the king's special warrant, by writ or letters patent. But a corporation aggregate, not being capable of a personal appearance, could only have appeared by attorney, appointed under their common scal p. And now, by the statute of Westm. 2. (13 Edw. I.) c. 10. a general liberty is given to the parties, of appearing by attorney q. Yet there are certain persons, such as feme coverts, and idiois, who, for want of legal discretion, are incapable of appointing an attorney; and must therefore appear in person: And any one else, if he think proper, may still appear and prosecute or defend his suit, in the same manner c; which is usually done by attornies and prisoners. A plaintiff may sue, in the Common Pleas, upon a penal statute, in his own name, without an attorney; and putting "plaintiff's attorney" after his name, in the notice on the process, is no irregularity, being only in compliance with the 5 Geo. II. c. 27. § 4d.

Attornies were anciently appointed in court, when actually present e: Warrant of atbut they are now usually appointed out of court, by warrant of attorney f; which should regularly be in writing; but an authority by parol is said to be sufficient to support a judgment g; and even if an attorney appear without warrant, it is a good appearance as to the court, though he is liable to an action h. So, after an order of nisi prius had been made to refer a cause to arbitration, with the consent of the defendant's counsel and attorney, the court of Common Pleas would not set it aside, on an affidavit by the defendant, expressly denying his authority to refer i. And where an authority was given to an attorney, to protect the defendant from arrests, and before it was countermanded, the attorney gave an undertaking to put in bail for the defendant, the court would not set aside the proceedings, on behalf of the latter, although he disclaimed the authority of the attorney k. It seems however, that when an action is brought by an attorney, without proper authority, the court will set aside the proceedings; for otherwise the defendant might be twice charged !. And where an attorney appears without warrant, the court will set aside a judgment entered against the defendant, if the attorney be not responsible; for otherwise the defendant could have no remedy against him m.

The warrant of attorney continues in force until the judgment, and for How long in a year and a day afterwards, in order to have execution, &c. n unless it be sooner countermanded by the act of the principal, or determined by the death of the attorney. And a defendant, having appeared to the action by one attorney, cannot, in the same cause, make any application to the court by another, without having obtained an order for changing his attorney o. But a warrant of attorney for the plaintiff, in the action against the principal, cannot extend to a scire facias against the bails, or to revive the judgment b, but there must be a new warrant of attorney; because this is a new cause, and different record. And, as a scire facias is a new action, it may be sued out by a new attorney, without leave of the court for changing the attorney, or giving notice that the old attorney is changed c. So, the defendant in the original action need not obtain a judge's order to change his former attorney, upon bringing a writ of error d. And the plaintiff, in the Common Pleas, may sue out execution by a different attorney from the attorney in the cause, without obtaining an order of court for changing the attorney c.

Countermanding.

Changing attorney.

When an attorney, having been retained to defend a cause, has undertaken to appear, the defendant is not allowed to countermand the appearance, after his retainer f. But, after appearance, he may change his attorney by rule of court, or order of a judge, on payment of what is due to him g. For this purpose, a summons should be taken out, and judge's order obtained thereous is; a copy of which order should be served on the opposite attorney: and it is not necessary, on changing an attorney, to file a, new warrant i. When an attorney is thus changed, the attorney newly coming in is bound to take notice at his peril, of the rules to which the former attorney was liable k: And till an order is obtained, the opposite party and his attorney are justified in considering the former attorney as being still employed; and are not bound to take notice of any proceedings in the name of another attorney: Therefore, payment to the plaintiff's late attorney, changed without leave of the court, has been held to be good 1: and notice of justifying bail m, or a plea put in n, by a new attorney, without any order for changing the attorney in the cause, is irregular; and the plaintiff is not bound to accept such notice or plea. But the sheriff or his bail may put in and justify bail above, by their own attorney. And where the defendant is a prisoner, notice of justification may be given by a new attorney, without an order for changing the attorney before employed P. So, where a plea had been put in by a new attorney, without any order for changing the attorney, it was holden by the court of Common Pleas, that the plaintiff waived the irregularity, by taking the plea out of the office, and keeping it q. And a party called upon to shew cause, may oppose the rule in person, after an order has been obtained

At common law, the warrants of attorney might have been filed, and Filing, and enentered of record, at any time before judgment e: but there are several acts of parliament f, requiring it to be done sooner, under severe penalties. By the last of these acts it is provided, that "the attorney for the plaintiff " shall file his warrant of attorney, with the proper officer, the same term " he declares; and the attorney for the defendant, the same term he ap-" pears, under the penalties inflicted by former laws." Upon this act of parliament the court of King's Bench made a rule g, "that the defendant's " attorney, at the time of his appearance, shall give the plaintiff's attor-" ney, the warrant of attorney for the defendant; and at the time of de-" livering the copy of the declaration, or taking it out of the office, when

Notwithstanding these regulations however, it has been determined, that the warrants of attorney may be filed, so as to support the proceedings, at any time pendente lite, or before final judgment; though the attorney may be fined, for not filing them in due time h. And the plaintiff, in the King's Bench, cannot now sign judgment, for the defendant's refusing to pay four pence for the warrant of attorney, when a copy of the declaration is delivered

But the opinion of counsel, or a certificate under his hand, that he thinks the party has merits, is necessary, as well as an affidavit that he is not worth five pounds, before the court will permit a person to sue in forma pauperisc. Costs, &c.

A pumper is not liable to pay costs to the defendant, if he be nonsuited, or have a verdict against him: for, by the statute 23 Hen. VIII. c. 15.°, which gives costs to the defendant upon a nonsuit or verdict, it is provided that "every poor person, being plaintiff in any action of debt, &c. " who, at the commencement of his suit, shall be admitted, by the dis-" cretion of the judge or judges where the action is pursued, to have his " process and counsel of charity, without paying money or fee for the " same, shall not be compelled to pay any costs by virtue of that statute, " but shall suffer other punishment, as by the discretion of the justices " before whom the suit shall depend, shall be thought reasonable." It has been said, that if a pauper be nonsuited, he shall pay costs, or be whipped f; but this punishment does not appear to have been ever inflicted 5. If the pauper give notice of trial, and do not proceed, or be otherwise guilty of improper conduct, the court will order him to be dispaupered h; but until this be done, they will not make any rule about And unless the pauper's conduct appear to have been vexatious, the court will not stay the proceedings in a second action, until the costs are paid of a nonsuit in a prior one, for the same cause k; nor, if the pauper should succeed in the second action, will they deduct the costs of the first, out of those recovered in the second. And where an order was made pendente lite, admitting the plaintiff to prosecute his action in forma pauperis, and an application by the defendant for security for, and taxation of the costs previously incurred, was not made till nearly two years afterwards; the court of Exchequer refused the application, and allowed a retrospective operation to the order. If a pauper be admitted to defend a suit in Chancery, in forma pauperis, his solicitor can only recover of him money actually paid out of pocket, for the defence of the suit. And though a pauper be not liable to pay costs, yet he is entitled to receive them from his adversary d.

On being applied to in either of these ways, the judge will grant his fate; upon which a rule or order should be drawn up, with the clerk of the rules, in the King's Bench, for the admission of the prochein amy or guardiand. In the Common Pleas, the order for the admission is made by the judge, and entered by the prothonotaries on their remembrance roll: which admission is either special, to prosecute or defend a particular action, or general, to prosecute or defend all actions whatsoevere; though it is said, that, by the practice of the King's Bench, a special admission of a guardian, to appear in one cause, will serve for others f. In like manner, the rule or order for the admission of a guardian should be obtained before plea, and a copy of it annexed thereto; for if an infant defendant appear by attorney, though it be in consequence of common process, with a notice requiring him to appear in that manner, the plaintiff may obtain an order for striking out the appearance, and that the defendant appear by guardian within a certain time, being usually four or six days; or, in default thereof, that the plaintiff may be at liberty to name a guardian, to appear and defend for himk: And a similar order may be obtained, where the defendant neglects to appear at all!. ## CHAP. V.

Of the Original Writ; and Process thereon, previous to the Capias in the King's Bench and Common Pleas.

Original writ, what, and when it lies, in K. B. AN original writ is a mandatory letter from the king in Chancery, sealed with his great seals; and, in the King's Bench, may be the means of commencing all personal actions, against every person not being an attorney or officer of the court, or a prisoner in the actual custody of the marshal. Formerly indeed, it was not usual to proceed in the King's Bench, by original writ, in debt, detinue, or other action of a mere civil nature o: but the modern practice is different c; and, in Lord Mansfield's time, where the defendant pleaded to the jurisdiction, in an action of debt commenced by original writ, the court gave judgment on demurrer for the plaintiff; and declared, that if such a plea should come before them again, they would inquire by whom it was signed d. On the other hand, an original writ seems to have been formerly the only way of proceeding against peers, and members of the house of commons e; as it is still, against the former f, and also against corporations, or hundredors g, on the statute 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 31; or where, by reason of the defendant's being abroad, or keeping out of the way, he cannot be arrested or served with process.

When necessary.

Benefit of proceeding by. Another benefit attending this mode of proceeding in the King's Bench is, that after judgment in an action by original, a writ of error will not lie in the Exchequer chamber, where it is often brought for the mere purpose of delay, but only in Parliament h. The reason is, that at common law, no writ of error lay, except in Parliament, from the judgment of this court; and the statute which gave a writ of error in the Exchequer chamber, only extends to such actions as are first commenced in the King's Bench: therefore, though a writ of error will lie in the Exchequer chamber, on a judgment by bill, which originates in the King's Bench, yet it is otherwise where the judgment is upon an original writ, which issues out of Chancery, where the action in that case is first commenced k.

But, in order to save the great and unnecessary expence of suing forth special writs in small and trifling suits, it was enacted by the statute 5 Geo. II. c. 27. § 5. that "no special writ or process should be issued out " of any superior court, where the cause of action should not amount to the " sum of ten pounds or upwards "." It is also a rule of the court Costs, when alof King's Bench d, that "in all actions in which the plaintiff shall proceed against the defendant by special original writ, and shall recover less than the sum of fifty pounds, he shall not, on taxing costs, be allowed any more or other costs, than he would have been entitled to, in case he had proceeded by bill; except in such actions, in which he could not proceed by bill, or in which any defendant shall be actually outlawed." costs of a special original were allowed, in an action brought on a bond, the penalty of which was more than fifty pounds, though the sum found due was only twenty pounds e.

Præcipe, and si te fecerit securum. use it."

Form of.

In actions of account, covenant, debt, annuity, and detinue, the original writ is called a pracipe b; by which the defendant has an option given him, either to do what he is required, or shew cause to the contrary: but in assumpsit, and actions for wrongs, it is called a pone, or si te fecerit securum c; by which the defendant is peremptorily required to shew cause in the first instance. In point of form, the original writ is special or general, nominatum vel innominatum d: The former contains the time, place, and other circumstances of the demand, very particularly; the latter, only a general complaint, without expressing the particulars, as the writ of trespass quare clausum fregit, &c.

In C. P. special, or common.

In the Common Pleas, we have seen , an original writ is either a special original, adapted to the nature of the action, or a common original in trespuss quare clausum fregit f; and there is a rule in that court g, that " no attorney shall deliver or receive any declaration, without an original, proper to the cause of action, being first sucd forth to warrant the same:" which rule is now disused. A special original however is, in that court, seldom issued in the first instance, except in cases where it is absolutely necessary, as in proceeding against peers, corporations, and hundredors, who are not subject to a capias; but the usual mode of commencing actions in this court, is by issuing out a writ of capias quare clausum fregit, which is founded on a supposed original, and answers to the bill of Middlesex or latitat in the King's Bench h. Before the statute 19 Hen. VII. c. 9. a practice had been introduced, of commencing an action in the Common Pleas, by bringing an original writ of trespass quare clausum fregit, for breaking the plaintiff's close, vi et armis; which, by the old common law, subjected the defendant's person to be arrested by writ of capias; and then afterwards, by connivance of the court, the plaintiff might proceed to prosecute for any other less forcible injury i. practice appears to have been formerly discountenanced by the court k; but was afterwards revived, and may still in strictness be resorted to, in cases where the defendant keeps out of the way, so that he cannot be arrested upon, or served with process against his person.

By whom, when, and how issued.

The original writ 1 is issued by the cursitor, who is so called from the writs de cursu; and where no capias lies, as against peers or members of the house of commons, or against corporations, or hundredors on the sta-

And where a capias lies, but the defendant abscends or keeps out of the way, so that he cannot be arrested or served with process against his person, it is usual to sue out an original writ, in order to proceed to outlawry. But in all other cases, the practice is for the plaintiff's attorney to make out a pracipe a for an original writ, and deliver it to the filacer, who thereupon issues the capias in the first instance, keeping the pracipe as instructions for the original, which is not in fact issued, unless it become necessary, in consequence of a writ of error after a judgment by default b. There being no cursitor for, an original writ cannot be issued In county palainto a county palatine; but when the cause of action, being of a transitory nature, arises therein, an original writ may be issued into another county; and the defendant, if he reside in a county palatine, may be brought into court on a testatum capias; and if he afterwards move to change the venue into the county palatine, the court will make him undertake not to assign for error the want of an original c. It is also a rule, in the Common Pleas, that when a judge's order is granted for time to plead, in an action laid in a county palatine, the defendant shall be bound not to assign the want of an original as error d. On suing out the original writ or ca- Fine on. pias, where the plaintiff's demand exceeds forty pounds, a fine is payable to the king, by way of composition for the liberty of suing in his court e; which fine is estimated according to the amount of the demand, being six shillings and eight pence for every hundred marks, or ten shillings for every hundred pounds f. The original writ should be directed to the Direction of. sheriff, or sheriffs, of the county where the action is brought, and intended to be tried; and it should be tested or witnessed in the king's name, at Westminster, or wherever else the Chancery is holden g; and as that court is supposed to be always open, it may be tested in vacation, as well as in term-time h: but a private seal is frequently necessary for passing it in vacation.

are four terms in the year; which are called, from some festival or saint's day preceding their commencement, the terms of Saint Hilary, of Easter, of the Holy Trinity, and of Saint Michael. Hilary term begins on the octave of Saint Hilary, or the eighth day inclusive after the feast day of that saint, which falling on the 13th of January, the octave therefore, or first day of Hilary term is the 20th of January; and it ends on the 12th of February following, unless it happen on a Sunday, and then on the 13th of February 2. Easter term begins in fifteen days of Easter, being the Sunday fortnight after that festival; and ends on Monday before Whitsunday. Trinity term, which was abridged by the statute 32 Hen. VIII. c. 21. begins on the morrow of the Holy Trinity, being the Monday next after Trinity Sunday; and ends on the Wednesday three weeks after, unless it happen on the 24th of June, and then on the day following. Michaelmas term, which was abridged by the statute 16. Car. I. c. 6., and still further by the 24 Geo. II. c. 48., begins (five weeks after Michaelmas day,) on the morrow of All Souls, being the 3d of November, and ends on the 28th of November following, if not a Sunday, otherwise on the 29th. Of these terms it may be observed, that Michaelmas and Hilary are fixed terms, and invariably begin on the same day of the year; but Easter and Trinity terms are moveable, their commencement being regulated by the feast of Easter. After Hilary and Trinity terms, the judges go their circuits, for the trial of causes wherein issues have been previously joined; and hence they are called issuable terms.

Issuable.

Return days in.

In each of these terms, there are stated days, called general or common return days; of these there are four in each term, except Easter, which has five. In Hilary term, the general or common return days are, in eight days of Saint Hilary, in fifteen days of Saint Hilary, on the morrow of the Purification, and in eight days of the Purification. In Easter term, they are in fifteen days of Easter, in three weeks after Easter, in one month after Easter, in five weeks from Easter day, and on the morrow of the Ascension. In Trinity term, they are on the morrow of the Holy Trinity, in eight days of the Holy Trinity, in fifteen days of the Holy Trinity, and in three weeks after the Holy Trinity. And in Michaelmas term, they are on the morrow of All Souls, on the morrow of St. Martin, in eight days of St. Martin, and in fifteen days of St. Martin b. Some of these return days happen on a Sunday; and anciently, when writs were formed, courts of justice did actually sit on that day; but that practice having been long disused, it is now holden, that an appearance cannot be entered, nor any judicial act done, or supposed to be done, by the court, till the Monday c.

Excheq. Append. 2.

In Hilary term, the first day of full term is the 23d of January, if not Sunday; and if Sunday, the next day after: and this term always begins that day eight weeks, on which Michaelmas term ended, and ends fourteen wasks after Michaelmas term began. Man.

The third day, the sheriff returned his writs into court, which were deli- Day of retorna vered to the custos brevium, and thence this day was called the day of retorna brevium; and then it was that the court was seised of the cause, by possession of the writ. The fourth day was called the appearance day, Appearance day. or dies amoris c, which was the day given, ex gratia curiæ, for the defendant's appearance: and this, which is denominated the quarto die post, is now the first day in full term, on which the court sits for the dispatch of business, except in Trinity term, when the court, by act of parliament, does not sit till the fifth day. The first and last days of every term are days of appearance.

term; or, as it does not affect the liberty of the defendant, it may be made returnable at the distance of two or three terms.

Want of, when aided.

The want of an original writ is aided, after verdict, by the 18 Eliz. e. 14. but not after judgment by default, or confession b; or upon demurrer, or nul tiel record. And it has been holden, that an original writ which is had in substance, or a good one which warrants not the declaration, is not aided by this statute. Where the original however differs from the declaration, and is not between the same parties d, in the same county e, of the same term f, or for the same cause of action s, the court, on a writ of error, will prima facie intend that it is not the original upon which the action was brought; and where it is certified to be the same, if the defendant in error come in upon the scire facias ad audiendum errores, and alledge for diminution that it was not the original upon which he declared, the court will grant a new certiorari; and if, upon such writ, there appear to be a good original, the plaintiff in error will not be suffered to make any allegation to the contrary h.

When sued out of course.

When all the proceedings are of the same term, an original writ of that term will warrant them i; and the cursitor will make it out, as a matter of course, at any time before the essoin day of the ensuing term. But an original writ of the term wherein final judgment is given, will not warrant the judgment, if it appear upon record, that there have been proceedings of a preceding term k. And it is a rule in Chancery, that no cursitor shall make original writs of any return past, unless he receive instructions within the term wherein they are to be returnable, or at furthest on or before the essoin day of the next succeeding term, without warrant from the lord chancellor, or master of the rolls i.

On petition to master of rolls. If the defendant therefore bring a writ of error, after judgment by default, &c. it is usual for the plaintiff to present a petition to the master of the rolls, setting forth the proceedings in the action, and the bringing of the writ of error, and that the petitioner hath not sued out an original writ to warrant the judgment, which he is advised is necessary; and that the time for applying for the same in ordinary course being expired, the cursitor cannot make it out, without an order for that purpose m. is drawn up, agreeably to the prayer of the petition, that the cursitor of the county where the venue is laid, do issue out an original writ, with a proper return; and that the petitioner pay the plaintiff in error his costs, if he do not proceed further, after having had notice of the order.

An original writ was not amendable at common law, in the case of a Amendment of. common person. But it may be amended, by the statute 8 Hen. VI. c. 12. for the misprision of the clerk, in not following his instructions, or on account of his nescience, or want of skill, in matters of form, though not in substance b. When the cursitor or his clerk has been guilty of a mistake, in making out the original variant from the præcipe, which is the warrant for the original, the practice of the office is to set it right as a matter of course, and re-seal the write: Or the amendment may be made on motion, or by petition to the master of the rollsd; and it seems that before the return of the writ, the motion should be made in Chancery', but afterwards, in the court where the writ is returnable f.

The first process, or proceeding upon the original writ, in actions of Process on. account, covenant, debt, annuity, and detinue, is a summonse, or warning Summons. to appear according to the exigency of the writ; which is made out by the plaintiff's attorney for the sheriff, and delivered by one of his officers to the defendant, or left at the usual place of his abode.

The defendant being summoned, was formerly allowed to cast an essoin. Essoin. or send an excuse by his servant for not appearing; and that being done, it was the plaintiff's duty to adjourn it to some day, appointed by the court, in the next term'; if he did not, he was liable to be non-prossed. But no essoin was ever allowed in personal actions, on the return of a capiask; nor even on a summons, where the defendant was seen in court, or appeared by attorney1: and as a corporation aggregate could not appear in any other manner, they were not entitled to an essoin m. At this day, the defendant being in general at liberty to appear by attorney, no essoin is allowed in any personal action whatsoever, even when a peer or member of parliament is defendant n. When an essoin is cast, and neither quashed nor adjourned to a particular day, the plaintiff, in the King's Bench, may declare the first day of the next term, and the defendant is not entitled to an imparlance o.

Issues on.

If the defendant appear, on or before the quarto die post of the return of the original, he should cause an appearance to be entered with the filacer, who is so called from the files of the custos brevium, which are warrants for him to continue the process. If he made default, and the sheriff returned that he was summoned b, the practice formerly was, for the filacer to issue an attachment'; which was a judicial writ, commanding the sheriff to put the defendant by gages and safe pledges; that is, to take certain of his goods, which were forfeited if he did not appear, or to make him find personal pledges or sureties, who were amerced in case of his non-appearanced: And this is still the first and immediate proceeding upon the original in trespass vi et armise, &c. where the violence of the wrong requires a more speedy remedy; and therefore the original writ commands the defendant to be at once attached, without any previous warning. But it seems that, in an inferior court, a custom to issue a summons and attachment at the same time, is bad in law. Upon process of attachment, it seems that the sheriff may either summon the defendant, or take gages for his appearance at the return of its. But a sheriff's officer cannot justify entering the defendant's house, under an original writ of trespass quare clausum fregit, and continuing there till the defendant paid him a sum of money, as and by way of surety for his appearance h. The sheriff's return to the attachment is, either that he has attached the defendant i, or that he has nothing by which he can be attached: in the latter case, the plaintiff may have a testatum pone, or attachment k. If the defendant, being attached, still neglected to appear, the plaintiff might formerly have proceeded, in all cases, to compel his appearance by distringas 1, or distress infinite; which was a process commanding the sheriff to distrain the defendant by all his lands and chattels, and to answer for the issues m or profits of the same.

In the King's Bench, the sheriff, on the first distringus, usually returned issues to the amount of forty shillings: and this was so much of course, that no more could have been levied by the sheriff in the first instance; and therefore the levying of the whole debt at once, on a testatum distringus, has been deemed irregular n: And where the defendant was called in the writ by a wrong name, the sheriff was holden not to be justified in taking his goods under it o. If the defendant did not appear, before or on the quarto die post of the return of the first distringus, the plaintiff sued out an alias distringas*, and thereupon moved the court to increase the issues; a proceeding that seems to have come in lieu of the writ of averment b. In general, if the debt were small, the court would order issues to be returned at once to the amount of it; but otherwise, on the defendant's non-appearance, the plaintiff sued out a pluriesc, or testatum distringas, and moved the court a second time, and so toties quoties, until issues were returned to the amount of the debt. When that was done, Costs on sale of. the plaintiff applied to the court, for a rule for sale of the issues e, under the statute 10 Geo. III. c. 50. § 3. which enacts, that " the court out of " which the writ proceeds, may order the issues, levied from time to time, " to be sold, and the money arising thereby to be applied, to pay such " costs to the plaintiff, as the said court shall think just, under all the " circumstances, to order; and the surplus to be retained, until the de-" fendant shall have appeared, or other purpose of the writ be answered:" which statute was construed to extend to all writs of distringus, and not to be confined to such as concerned privilege of parliament only f. the costs of a distringus, &c. were directed to be taxed, and that the sheriff should sell the issues to pay such costs, though the defendant had appeared after the issues were levied, but before they were sold g.

The process upon an original writ of trespass quare clausum fregit, in Process on the Common Pleas, was similar to that in the King's Bench. And, for expediting the proceedings, writs of distringas, in the Common Pleas, might have been made returnable on any day in term h, and need not have had fifteen days between the teste and return; and it was a rule k, that " upon all writs of distringus, returnable the last day of term, the plaintiff " should be at liberty, at the rising of the court, to move to increase issues " on the alias or pluries distringas, to be issued thereupon on the follow-" ing day, in case no appearance should have then been entered; and also "that in like cases, where a distringus should be returnable on the last " day of term, and issues thereupon levied, the plaintiff should be at li-" berty, at the rising of the court, to move for leave to sell such issues, to " pay the costs of such distringus or distringuses." Where the debt was small, the court of Common Pleas usually ordered the issues to be increased to the full amount of it, on the second or alias distringas; but if it were large, they would order 40l. or 50l. to be levied on the second, and the remainder on the third or pluries distringus; and it was in the discretion of the court, to put the defendant under terms of pleading instanter, and taking short notice of trial, when he moved to have the issues levied upon several distringases restored to him on his appearance, according to the statute 10 Geo. III. c. 50. § 4 m.

When a defendant resided abroad, and no person here had an authority to appear for him, his goods could not, it seems, have been taken under a writ of distringus, issuing out of the court of Common Pleas, to compel his appearance a. So, where a plaintiff sued a defendant who was out of the country, for a debt contracted here by his wife in his absence, and proceeded by distringus, that court ordered the writ to be set saide, and the issues levied under it to be restored b. And in another case c, they set aside a distringus, executed upon the goods of the wife of a surgeon in the navy, serving on a foreign station, the debt not being contracted in the wife's trade. But where the defendant quitted the kingdom before the action commenced, leaving another in possession of his house and goods, and the plaintiff, having served a summons to appear at the house, distrained the defendant's goods to compel an appearance, the court held it to be regular d. So where the defendant, residing abroad, carried on trade in England, a plaintiff might have proceeded, notwithstanding his absence, to compel an appearance by distringas; particularly if the plaintiff did not know, at the fime of giving credit, that the defendant was out of the realm. And where three partners (two of whom resided abroad, and one in England,) were sued for a partnership debt, and the partner resident in England appeared to the action, but refused to appear for the partners who resided abroad, the sheriff, under a distringus issuing out of the Common Pleas against the two partners, might have taken partnership effects, though paid for by the partner resident in England alone, to whom the partnership was largely indebted; and the court would not have relieved him from such distress f. But where an action had been commenced against two partners, one of whom resided abroad, and the other, who was resident here, appeared for himself only, the court of Common Pleas set aside a distringus and subsequent proceedings thereon, against the latter defendant, and ordered the issues levied upon his separate property to be restored: So that where there are no partnership effects, there is no other mode of proceeding in such case, than by outlawing the defendant who is abroad s.

Against partnership effects.

How restrained, in C. P.

The method of proceeding by summens, attachment, and distress infinite, is not affected by the statutes for preventing frivolous and vexatious arrests h; which only relate to process against the person. And as no capius lay, it was the only method of proceeding against peers of the realm, corporations h, and hundredors on the statutes of hue and cry k, &c. as it is now on the statute 7 & 8 Geo. defendant, particularly when he resided abroad, a rule of court was made in the Common Please, calculated to prevent surprise on the defendant; whereby it was ordered, that "in every action to be commenced by original writ of quare clausum fregit, there should be written or printed, under the summons to be served by the sheriff's officer on such writ, a notice similar to that required on other serviceable process, of the intent and meaning of such service; and that upon every distringas, to be issued in default of the defendant's appearance to such quare clausum fregit, there should, at the time of the execution of such distringus, be served by the sheriff's officer on the defendant, if he could be met with, or if not, left at his dwelling house or place where such distringus should be executed, a written or printed notice, apprising him of the cause of the distress, and that in default of his appearance at the return of the writ, he would be liable to be distrained upon for such further sum as the court should order."

At length, it was enacted by the statute 7 & 8 Geo. ## CHAP. VI.

Of the Proceedings in Actions against Peers of the Realm, and Members of the House of Commons; and against Corporations, and Hundredors.

Peers and members, how sued at common law. AT common law, it seems that peer's of the realm, and members of the house of commons, not being subject to a capias, could only have been such by original writ. But now, by statute 12 & 13 W. III. c. 3. § 2a. "any "person or persons having cause of action against any knight, citizen or burgess of the house of commons, or any other person entitled to privilege of parliament, may prosecute such knight, &c. in his majesty's court of King's Bench, Common Pleas, or Exchequer, by summons and distress infinite, or by original bill and summons, attachment, and distress infinite; which the said respective courts are empowered to issue against them, or any of them, until he or they shall enter a common appearance, or file common bail to the plaintiff's action, according to the course of each respective court."

persons within the description of the statutes relating to bankrupts, being entitled to privilege of parliament, and becoming insolvent, it is enacted, by the statute 6 Geo. IV. c. 16b. that "if any trader, liable to become " bankrupt, having privilege of parliament, shall commit any of the acts " of bankruptcy therein mentioned, a commission of bankrupt may issue " against him; and the commissioners, and all other persons acting under " such commission, may proceed thereon, in like manner as against other " bankrupts; but such person shall not be subject to be arrested or im-" prisoned, during the time of such privilege, except in cases thereby " made felony. And if any creditor or creditors of any such trader, having " privilege of parliament, to such amount as is thereinafter declared requi-" site to support a commission, shall file an affidavit or affidavits, in any " court of record at Westminster, that such debt or debts is or are justly " due to him or them respectively, and that such debtor, as he or they " verily believe, is such trader as aforesaid, and shall suc out of the same " court a summons, or an original bill and summons, against such trader, s and serve him with a copy of such summons, if such trader shall not, " within one calendar month after personal service of such summons, pay,

'This clause appears to have been taken from a similar one in the statute 4 Geo. III. c. 33.; upon which it was holden, that a bond given under the latter statute, is analogous to a recognizance of bail in error: and therefore, where a member of parliament had given a bond, with two sureties, conditioned for payment of the sum to be recovered in the action, and before trial became bankrupt, the court refused to order the bond to be delivered up to be cancelled b.

By a subsequent clause, in the statute 6 Geo. IV. c. 16 c. it was enacted, Disobeying orthat "if any decree or order shall have been pronounced in any cause de-" pending in any court of equity, or any order made in any matter of bank-" ruptcy or lunacy, against any such trader having privilege of parliament, " ordering such trader to pay any sum of money, and such trader shall " disobey, the same having been duly served upon him, the person or per-" sons entitled to receive such sum, under such decree or order, or in-" terested in enforcing the payment thereof, pursuant to such decree or " order, may apply to the court by which the same shall have been pro-" nounced, to fix a peremptory day for the payment of such money, which " shall accordingly be fixed by an order for that purpose; and if such " trader, being personally served with such last mentioned order, cight " days before the date therein appointed for payment of such money, " shall neglect to pay the same, he shall be deemed to have committed an " act of bankruptcy, from the time of the service thereof; and any such " creditor or creditors as aforesaid may sue out a commission against him, " and proceed thereon, in like manner as against other bankrupts."

are also two cases, in which it has been determined, that a peer of the realm may be sued in the King's Bench, by bill and summons a, &c. But in a subsequent case b, it was the opinion of the judges, on a question referred to them in the house of lords, that these cases were not to be considered as decisive authorities on the subject; though, after pleading in chief, it was too late for the defendant to object to the jurisdiction of the court c. It seems therefore that, notwithstanding the above statute, the only regular mode of proceeding against a peer, is by original writ d. And if a peer be sued jointly with others, by bill of Middlesex, the court will set aside the proceedings, as against the peer. But the motion for this purpose must be made as soon as may be, and before interlocutory judgment f. And if an Irish peer be sued by bill, the court of Common Pleas will not set aside the proceedings on motion; but leave him to plead his privilege in abatement g. It was formerly doubted, whether a member of the house of commons was cutitled to his privilege, when sued with a common person "; but it is now settled, that his privilege shall be allowed him i. And where an action is brought against a peer or member of the house of commons, jointly with other persons, the original writ or bill should be against all the defendants; upon which the peer or member should be

The original writ against a peer, or member of the house of commons, is the same as against other persons k; only that when it is issued against a peer, the sheriff is commanded to summon him by good summoners; and after describing the defendant by his proper title, these words are added, " having privilege of peerage," or, against a member of the house of commons, "having privilege of parliament." And it is said, that a peer or pecress cannot be attached, but should be brought in by summons 1: Yet, where a declaration in case against an earl, stated him to have been summoned to answer, instead of attached, it was holden to be bad, on special demurrer m. In proceeding by original writ n, against a peer or member of the house of commons, the original should issue into that county where the defendant lives; and a summons is made out thereon by the plaintiff's attorney, and delivered to the sheriff, who serves it on the defendant personally, or by leaving it at his dwelling house, or last place of abode . And where, upon process, by original writ, against a member of the house of commons, the summons omitted to describe him as having privilege of parliament, and the notice at the foot stated, that in default of his appearance, on the return day of the writ, the plaintiff would cause

Appearance by plaintiff, on stat. 45 Geo. III. c. 124.

The bill against a member of the house of commons, is a complaint in writing, describing the defendant as having privilege of parliaments; and concludes with a prayer by the plaintiff, of process to be made to him, according to the form of the statute, &c. This bill is filed, in the King's Bench, with the clerk of the declarations, in the King's Bench office: And if the bill be filed in vacation, for a cause of action arising after the term, there should be a special memorandum, stating the day of bringing the bill into the office of the clerk of the declarations. In the Common Pleas, the bill is filed with the filacer of the county where the venue is laid: In the Exchequer, it is filed with the master. And the first process thereon, in all the courts, is a writ of summonsb; which is a judicial writ, issuing out of the King's Bench or filacer's office, or office of pleas in the Exchequer, on a proper præcipe c, and directed to the sheriff of the county where the venue is laid, commanding him to summon the defendant: Or, if the defendant reside in a different county, the plaintiff may sue out a writ of testatum summons into that county d. Upon one or other of these writs, the defendant should be summoned, in like manner as upon an original; and if he do not appear, within four days after the return of it, is subject to the process of attachment and distringase, &c. If he appear, his appearance should be entered, in the King's Bench, with the clerk of the common bails; in the Common Pleas, with the filacer of the county into which the summons issued; or, in the Exchequer, in the appearance book in the office of pleas.

The writ of summons, and other subsequent process upon the bill, differ from the process by original, in the following particulars: first, that they do not state the cause of action at large, but only require the defendant to answer the plaintiff generally, in a plea of irespass on the case, (according to the plea,) to his damage of, &c. as he can reasonably shew that thereof he ought to answer!; secondly, that they are tested on the very return, and not on the quarto die post of the return of each other; thirdly, that they are made returnable on days certain, and not on general return days; and fourthly, that there need not be fifteen days between the teste and return of them.

The mode of proceeding by distringas, against members of the house of commons, being found extremely dilatory and expensive, it was enacted by the statute 45 Geo. III. c. 124. § 3. that "when any summons, or original bill and summons, shall be sued out against any person having privilege of parliament, and no such affidavit shall be made and filed as therein is mentioned, if the defendant or defendants shall not appear at the return of the summons, or within eight days after such return, the plaintiff or plaintiffs, upon affidavit being made and filed in the proper court, of the personal service of such summons, which affidavit shall be

The defendant having appeared, or the plaintiff appeared for him according to the above statute, the plaintiff proceeds to declare against him. The time allowed for declaring against a peer of the realm, or member of Time for. the house of commons, is the same as in other cases. But in assigning the breach in assumpsit, against a peer of the realm, the plaintiff must not charge the defendant with contriving and fraudulently intending, craftily and subtilly to deceive and defraud him; for the house of lords have adjudged it a very high contempt and misdemeanor, to charge a member of their house with any species of fraud or deceitb.

All further proceedings against peers of the realm, and members of the Further prohouse of commons, are the same as against other personsc; only it should be remembered, that as no capias lies against them, they cannot be taken in execution, unless where the judgment is obtained upon a statute staple, or statute merchant, or upon the statute of Acton Burnel<sup>d</sup>, in which case a capias lies, even against peers of the realm.

If they have neither lands nor goods, there is no way to compel them to appear, at law or in equity i, but only in parliament k; for it is a rule, that for a public concern, the sheriff cannot distrain any private person, who is a member of the corporation 1.

Of the Capias by Original, and Process of Outlawry, in the King's Bench, and Common Pleas.

Capias, origin of.

AT common law, the defendant was not liable to be arrested, upon mesne process, for civil injuries unaccompanied with force a. This immunity of the defendant's person, in case of peaceable though fraudulent injuries, producing great contempt of the law in indigent wrongdoers, a capias was allowed to arrest the person, in actions of account, though no breach of the peace were suggested, by the statutes of Marlbridge, (52 Hen. III.) c. 23. and Westm. 2. (13 Ed. I.) c. 11. in actions of debt and detinue, by statute 25 Edw. III. stat. 5. c. 17. and in all actions on the case, by statute 19 Hen. VII. c. 9 b.

The capias is a judicial writ, issued by the filacer, and directed to the sheriff or sheriffs of the same county as the original; commanding them to take the defendant, if he be found in their bailiwick, and safely keep him, so that they may have his body in court, at the return of the writ, to answer the plaintiff in the action: and it is usually called a special capias ad respondendum f. If the sheriffs return to this writ, that the defendant is not found in their bailiwick, the plaintiff may have an alias or pluries capias, directed to the same sheriffs, commanding them, as before, or as oftentimes they have been commanded, to take the defendant s, &c.: or he may have a testatum capias, directed to the sheriffs of a different county, (and afterwards, if necessary, an alias or pluries testatum capias,) suggesting that the defendant lurks and wanders in that county h. any of these writs, if the defendant be within a liberty, it is usual to insert a clause of non omittas; which clause may be inserted in the first process: So that, under particular circumstances, it may be necessary for the plaintiff to have recourse to an alias or pluries testatum, non omittas, capias ad respondendum, which is the most special writ of any against the defendant's person; and commands the sheriffs, as before, or as oftentimes they have been commanded, not to omit by reason of any liberty, but to take the defendant, &c. it being testified that he lurks and wanders in their As an original writ cannot be issued *, so there cannot be a capias, Cannot be issued into a county palatine; but on an original writ sued out in another county, a testatum capias may be issued into a county palatine b, for bringing in the defendant. In the courts of great sessions in Wales, by a late act of Ingreat sessions in Wales. parliament c, writs may issue from one county to another.

In a personal action, brought by two or more executors, there may be Summons and summons and severance; that is, if one or more of them will not join with the rest in prosecuting the action, the court will issue a writ of summons ad sequendum simula, and upon their non-appearance at the return of it, will give judgment of severance e, so as to enable the rest to proceed without them.

The process upon the original should be tested in the name of the chief Teste and return justice, or senior judge of the court, if there be no chief justice. The original. capias should regularly be tested in term-time; but not on a Sunday, or other dies non juridicus: And where the plaintiff means to proceed to outlawry, the capias should be tested on the quarto die post of the return of the original f, the alias on the quarto die post of the return of the capias, and the pluries on the quarto die post of the return of the alias g; and there must be fifteen days at least between the teste and return of each writh. In the Common Pleas it is said, that suing out the capias, alias, and pluries together, is regular, and warranted by constant practice i. And unless the plaintiff mean to proceed to outlawry, the capias may be tested before the original, and even before the cause of action accrued, provided it be actually taken out afterwards; and it is not necessary, in other cases, that the alias or pluries should be tested on the quarto die post of the return of the preceding writk: for as the mesne process never appears on the record, no error can be assigned therein 1; and the defendant cannot have oyer of it, so as to plead in abatement m. These several writs must be made returnable like the original, in the King's Bench, on a general return day n, ubicunque, or wheresoever the king shall then be in England, or, in the Common Pleas, before the king's justices at Westminster, in the same, alledging the outlawry of the other defendant in the same suit; the court of King's Bench set aside the declaration for irregularity. But an allegation that a co-defendant was by due course of law outlawed, at the suit of the plaintiff, in this plea and suit, is sufficient, without a prout patci per recordum b.

Outlawry, in civil actions, is putting a man out of the protection of the Outlawry, in law, so that he is incapable of suing for the redress of injuries, and may be imprisoned: and he forfeits thereby all his goods and chattels, and the it lies, and its profits of his lands; his personal chattels, immediately upon the outlawry, and his chattels real, and the profits of his lands, when found by inquisition c. So penal were the consequences of an outlawry, that until some time after the conquest, no man could have been outlawed except for felony, the punishment whereof was death: But in Bracton's time d, and somewhat earlier, process of outlawry was ordained to lie in all actions vi et armis: and since, by a variety of statutes, (the same as introduced the capias,) process of outlawry lies in account, debt, detinue, and divers other common or civil actions e.

If the defendant be a woman, the proceeding is called a waiver; for Waiver of as women were not sworn to the law, by taking the oath of allegiance in the leet, (as men anciently were, when of the age of twelve years or upwards,) they could not properly be outlawed, or put out of the law, but were said to be waived, that is derelictæ, left out, or not regarded f. And for the same reason, an infant cannot be outlawed under the age of twelve years g.

Outlawry is either upon mesne process before, or upon final process after Upon mesne judgment h. Upon mesne process, the plaintiff cannot proceed to outlawry, unless the action were commenced by original writ 1; nor can the defendant be outlawed after judgment, unless the action were so commenced: therefore, where the defendant was outlawed after judgment, in an action commenced by bill of privilege, it was holden that process of outlawry did not lie, as there was no capias in the original action k. After After judgment. judgment, the plaintiff may have an exigi facias, and proceed to outlawry, upon the return of non est inventus to a writ of capias ad satisfaciendum, without an alias or pluries 1; because the defendant, having been already in court before judgment, and having conusance of the debt, ought to pay it on the first suing out of the capias, and his not performing the judgment is a contumacy, for which he is put out of the king's protection. And no writ of proclamation is required upon an exigent after judgment, but only upon mesne process in. In the Common Pleas, the defendant may In C. P. on

The writ of exigi facias is a judicial writ, made out by the filacer, as clerk of the exigents', in the King's Bench, or by the exigenter in the Common Pleas, and directed to the sheriff of the county where the action is laid d; commanding him to cause the defendant to be required from county court to county court, or from husting to husting, if in London e, that is, at five successive f county courts or hustings, until he be outlawed, if he do not appear, and if he appear, to take him s, &c. This writ should be tested on the quarto die post of the return of the pluries capias before, or of the capias after judgment: and if there be not five county courts between the teste and return of it, there issues, upon the sheriff's return theretoh, an exigent de noro, with a clause (whence it is called an allocatur exigent,) directing the sheriff to allow the several county courts. at which the defendant has been already required i. The writ of exigent upon an outlawry, must be in the hands of the sheriff, at the time the defendant is demanded; and therefore, where a sheriff returned to a writ of exigent, and allocatur exigent, that he had demanded a defendant at the hustings, upon five several days, on three of which the writs could not by possibility have been in his hands, the court held that the returns were irregular k. In the Common Pleas, no exigenter shall receive any pluries capias, in order to make an exigent or proclamation thereon, before the same is signed or stamped by the clerk of the warrants, or his deputy, to the end it may thereby appear that the warrants of attorney therein are duly filed 1: and therefore the practice in this court is, to take the pluries, when returned by the sheriff, with a warrant of attorney, to the clerk of the warrants, who will mark it, on being paid for filing the warrant m.

In addition to the exigent, a writ of proclamation n was introduced by the statute 6 Hen. VIII. c. 4. which, except in London or Middlesex, required it to be directed to the sheriff of the county of which the defendant was called or described in the original, for there he was supposed to dwell; and if he did not in fact dwell there, he might have avoided the outlawry, by the statute of additions o: And where the exigent was

In the Common Pleas, the supersedeas is itself an appearance, if delivered to the sheriff before the quarto die post of the return of the exigente: And, in that court, after the return of the exigent, but whilst it remained in the sheriff's hands, and before the defendant was returned outlawed, the court made a rule, that a supersedeas to the exigent should be allowed, on payment of costs . practice of granting a supersedeas still continues, in cases which do not require special bail. But upon a question agitated some years ago, in the court of King's Bench, whether, in a case originally requiring special bail, if the defendant stand out to an exigent s, he can come in and appear to the exigent, without putting in special bail, it was ruled by the court, that there ought to be special bail. "It would be very unreasonable, they said, that the defendant should gain an advantage, by standing out till process of outlawry: He certainly ought not to be in a better condition then, than if he had appeared at first: " And accordingly the direction given was, that the filacer should not issue a supersedeas, till the defendant had put in special So, in the Common Pleas, it is a rule, that "where the defendant shall abscond to avoid being arrested, and cannot be arrested, although the plaintiff shall bond fide have used his best endeavours for that purpose, a supersedcas shall not be issued, to stay the proceedings to an outlawry, unless. the defendant shall have first put in special bail; and that the written supersedeas thereupon issued, in case special bail shall not afterwards be perfected according to the course of the court, where special bail is required upon arrests, shall be void, and of no effect to stay the plaintiff's proceeding to the outlawry: but the same may be gone on with, from the time of such default, as if no appearance had been entered or special bail filed, and shall not be deemed irregular or erroneous, by means of such interruption of the proceedings, by putting in, and not afterwards per-

If the defendant be neither arrested nor appear, but make default, at Judgment of five successive county courts or hustings, he is outlawed if a man, or if a woman she is waived, by the judgment of the coroners, or of the recorder in London 2; and the judgment of outlawry being returned by the she- Capias utlaguriff upon the exigent, the filacer, who acts as clerk of the outlawries in the King's Bench b, will make out a writ of capias utlagatum, which is either general or special c, and may be issued into any county, without a testatum'; nor is there any occasion, upon an outlawry after judgment, to revive the judgment by scirc facias, after a year and a day e. But, 'in the Common Pleas, a writ of capias utlagatum cannot be sued out and tested after the death of the defendant f. And where the judgment of outlawry was entered after the plaintiff's death, the court held, that a capias utlagatum could not regularly be issued, without reviving the judgment g.

By the general writ of capias utlagatum, the sheriff is commanded, General, form of. "that he do not omit, by reason of any liberty of his county, but that he " take the defendant, if he be found in his bailiwick, and him safely keep, " so that he may have his body in court, on a general return day, where-" soever, &c. in the King's Bench, or, in the Common Pleas, before the " king's justices at Westminster, to do and receive what the court shall " consider of him h." The defendant being taken by the sheriff on this writ, either gives bail to appear and reverse the outlawry; or remains in custody, until he actually reverse it, or obtain a charter of pardon, or be relieved under an insolvent act i.

At common law, the defendant could not have been bailed, when taken Bail on, at by the sheriff on a capias utlagatum k; and this case is particularly excepted out of the statutes 23 Hen. VI. c. 9. and 13 Car. This statute has been construed not to extend to criminal cases; at least to misdemeanors, after conviction b: And even in civil cases, the defendant cannot be bailed, where he was not bailable upon the process to outlawry c; for it was the design of the statute to put him in the same condition as if he had not been outlawed: and therefore he is not bailable, when taken upon an outlawry after judgment. Neither, upon this statute, will the court on motion restore goods taken upon a special capias utlagatumd; but they will of course be restored, upon the reversal of the outlawry e. rupt having been arrested after outlawry, and a levy made on his goods by the sheriff, under a special writ of capias utlagatum, the court of King's Bench would not relieve him on motion, in a summary way, from such arrest and levy, except upon the terms of appearing to the action, and putting in and perfecting special bail; although the plaintiff had also proved her debt under the commission, and received a dividend, after which she commenced her action for the balance f. And it seems, that bankruptcy and certificate are no grounds for discharging a prisoner in custody on a capias uilagatum 8.

Attorney's undertaking, or bond to appear, &c. When there is no affidavit of a bailable cause of action, the sheriff is authorized, by the statute, to discharge the defendant, on an attorney's undertaking to appear and reverse the outlawry: But where an affidavit has been made, he ought not to be discharged, without giving the security required by the statute; which is not a common bail bond, but a bond, with one or more sufficient surety or sureties, for appearance by attorney at the return of the writ, and to do and perform such things as shall be required by the court h; that is, to put in and perfect bail to a new action, plead within a limited time, put the plaintiff in the same condition, and such like matters l. But they have nothing to do with his copyholds d, or trust property e. Witnesses may be subpæna'd to attend the execution of the inquiry; and when made, the sheriff is to take possession of the goods and chattels of the defendant, and of the leasehold tenements in his own occupation f: But he must not oust, or disturb the possession of his tenants g; and can only take the issues or profits of his freehold tenements h. Reversing outlawry, by writ of error, or motion.

The money raised by the sheriff, under these writs, belongs to the crown; but the plaintiff may have it paid to him, in satisfaction of his debt and costs, by applying to the court of Exchequer, or lords of the treasury: and he may also, upon petition d to the lords of the treasury, obtain a lease or grant, under the Exchequer seal, of the king's right to levy the profits. If the money raised by the sheriff do not exceed the sum of Afty pounds, the court of Exchequer, on motion, will order it to be paid to the plaintiff. But if it exceed that sum, the plaintiff must pelition for it to the lords of the treasury; stating the amount of his debt, a short abstract of the proceedings, with the expenses he has been put to, and praying, in respect thereof, that the attorney general may be authorized to consent, on behalf of the crown, that the money remaining in the shcriff's hands may be paid over to the petitioner f. This petition is referred, by the lords of the treasury, to their solicitor g; who should be furnished with a certificate of the proceedings from the clerk in court h, and an affidavit i, sworn before a baron, of the amount of the debt and costs; whereupon he will make his report k, which should be filed with the clerk of the treasury. A warrant is then issued, under the king's sign manual, for the attorney general to give his consent to an order, pursuant to the prayer of the petition 1: upon which a motion is made in the court of Exchequer; and, the attorney general consenting, an order is framed accordingly m. This order must be engrossed, and put under seal, with a subpænan annexed to perform it; and the sheriff being served therewith, must pay over the money, or will be liable to an attachment o.

But for any matter of fact, as death, imprisonment, service of the king, &c. he is driven to his writ of error, unless it be in the case of felony, and there in favorem vitæ he may plead it. And there is an old rule of court, in the Common Pleas, that a writ of error shall not be allowed, nor any record removed, or writ of de non molestando or supersedeas granted, before some manifest error be shewn to the court, in term time, or in vacation to some of the justices, and by them allowed d. It seems, however, to be discretionary in the courts to relieve by motion, or put the parties to a writ of error; and of late years they have gone further than heretofore upon motion, the more effectually to expedite justice, save expence, and preserve the credit and character of the defendant.

It was not formerly usual for the courts to reverse an outlawry upon For error in fact. motion, for error in fact; the defendant being put to his writ of error for reversing it f. But, in a late case !, the court refused to set aside an outlawry upon motion for irregularity, against one of several defendants, who was a foreigner and resided abroad, Rvidence of out- before he had appeared. On a writ of error to reverse an outlawry, issue being joined on an assignment that the outlaw was beyond sea, at the time of suing out the writ of exigent, and thence until the time of pronouncing the outlawry, and the plaintiff in error having proved the previous proceedings, and that the outlaw was abroad at the time of suing out the exigent, the court of Common Pleas held this to be sufficient, without proving the time when the judgment of outlawry was pronounced, or that the defendant was then abroad a. But where the defendant was described in an original writ, as T. B. of C. in the county of N., and, upon a writ of error brought to reverse the outlawry, the error assigned was, that T. B. was not, before or at the time of issuing the original writ, of or conversant in C. aforesaid, and that there was not any town, hamlet or place, of the name of C. in that county; to which the plaintiff pleaded, that he prosecuted his writ, with intent to declare upon a bond made by the defendant, by which he was described as T. B. of C. in the county of N.; the court held, that this was an estoppel, and affirmed the judgment of outlawry b.

Appearance, in person or by attorney, to reverse outlawry.

At common law, the party outlawed must have appeared in person, in order to reverse an outlawry; it not being deemed sufficient for him to appear by attorney c. But now, by statute 4 & 5 W. & M. c. 18. § 3. for the more speedy and easy reversing of outlawries in the court of King's Bench, "no person outlawed therein, for any cause matter or thing what-" soever, treason and felony only excepted, shall be compelled to come or " appear in person in the said court, to reverse such outlawry; but shall " or may appear by attorney, and reverse the same without bail, in all " cases except where special bail shall be ordered by the said court." An attorney therefore, making an affidavit to support a motion to set aside an outlawry, against a defendant who has not appeared, must shew that he is authorized to act for the defendant d.

Special bail, on reversing it, for want of proclamations.

Before the allowance of a writ of error, or reversing an outlawry, by plea or otherwise, for want of proclamations, the statute of Elizabeth c requires, "that the defendant in the original action shall put in bail, not " only to appear and answer the plaintiff in a new action, to be commenced " for the cause mentioned in the former, but also to satisfy the condemn-

In the earlier cases upon the subject, it was determined that he should b: But there are cases to the contrary, in the time of Holt, Ch. J.c; and in one of them d it is said, that if the party outlawed come in gratis, upon the return of the exigent, &c. he may be admitted by motion to reverse the outlawry, for any other cause than want of proclamations, without putting in bail; but if he come in by cepi corpus, he shall not be admitted to reverse it without appearing in person, as in such case he was obliged to do at common law, or putting in bail with the sheriff for his appearance upon the return of cepi corpus, and for doing what the court shall order. In two subsequent cases e however, special bail was put in, upon reversing the outlawry, for errors in law, though it does not appear but that the party came in gratis. At length, in the case of Serecold v. Hampson f, the court, upon considering the words of the 4 & 5 W. & M. c. 18. § 3. which empowers the outlaw to appear by attorney, and says, "the outlawry shall be reversed without " bail, in all cases except where special bail shall be ordered by the court," declared they were of opinion, they had a discretionary power to require it or not; and that the want of an affidavit before the outlawry was no objections, because that is only requisite to warrant an arrest: and though the 31 Eliz. c. 3. § 3. be the only act that expressly requires bail, it is not to be thence inferred, that in other cases it ought not to be insisted on; for that act makes a new error, and the bail upon it is absolutely to pay the condemnation money. And accordingly, it is now settled, that on reversing an outlawry, for any other error in law besides the want of proclamations, bail is common or special, in like manner as upon the arrest.

Where special bail is required, it need not be put in before the allow- When put in. ance of the writ of error; but it is well enough, if put in at any time before the reversal h. And in a late case it was determined, that upon a Form of recogwrit of error prosecuted by the defendant in person, to reverse an outlawry, in a civil action, for a common law error, the recognizance of bail is to be taken in the common alternative form, to pay the condemnation money or render the principal, and not absolutely to pay the condemnation money i, as in the case of reversing an outlawry upon the statute 31 Eliz.

And though in that case it was said, that if a party ask of the court to interfere by motion, where he has no right to their interference, but only upon error brought, they may impose upon him what terms they think just, yet in a subsequent case, the court of King's Bench, upon motion, reversed the outlawry of the defendant in a civil suit, on account of his being beyond sea at the time of the exigent awarded, upon his putting in bail in the alternative, and paying all costs; including any which might have been incurred in the court of Exchequerb. So, in the Common Pleas, where the defendant is of right entitled to reverse the outlawry on error brought, the court in general will relieve him on motion, without imposing any other terms than payment of costs, and putting in special bail, when necessary, or rendering the defendant c: And the recognizance of bail in that court, which is in the alternative, to pay the condemnation money or render the defendant, as in the King's Bench, may be taken in the original cause c. But where the third proclamation was made at the door of the church of the parish of which the defendant was described to be in the writ, and in the bond upon which the action was brought, but where he did not reside at the time when the proclamation was made; the court reversed the outlawry, as for want of proclamations, and ordered bail to be taken to pay the condemnation money e. In a joint action against two defendants, one of them, being in Ircland, was sued to outlawry; and judgment being had against the other, the court, on motion to reverse the outlawry, made the rule absolute, on putting in bail, and consenting to give judgment, which they said was necessary in a joint action, on account of the original f.

Every outlawry determines upon the death of the party outlawed : and if he was outlawed in a civil suit, the representatives of the outlaw shall have restitution of the land seized, or of the personal effects, if they remain in the sheriff's hands undisposed of; but in criminal cases, outlawry works an entire forfeiture of the outlaw's estate, both real and personal. In order to reverse an outlawry on death, there must be a certificate from the minister of the parish where the party died or was buried, and likewise an affidavit of his death, by some person who was acquainted with him, and was present at the death or burial; in which affidavit the party should be described as in the outlawry. But though outlawry determines upon the death of the outlaw, yet, before the king's hands can be amoved from the lands or goods seized, such death must be pleaded, and judgment entered up thereon in the Exchequer, upon the plea being confessed by the attorney general. And in like manner, if the outlawry be reversed; (which must be done in the court where the action was originally brought,) for any other reason, a certificate of such reversal from the clerk of the outlawries must be pleaded and confessed, and judgment entered up thereon in the Exchequer, before the king's hands can be amoved. These proceedings are in nature of a suggestion upon the roll, in the court of Exchequer; and the judgment of the barons is, "that his majesty's hands be amoved from the possession of the premises, &c s." The plea in this case may be put in by any person; for though the judgment he, that he shall be restored to the possession of the premises, yet it gives no title to the lands: but in order to discharge the sheriff, the fudgment roll must be carried to the pipe office, that a quietus may be made thereupon. If, after such judgment, any difficulty attends the getting possession, a writ of amoveas manus must be sued out of the Exchequer, directed to the sheriff, who will thereupon deliver possession h.

Of the BILL of MIDDLESEX and LATITAT, and SUBSE-QUENT PROCESS thereon, in the King's Bench; of the CAPIAS QUARE CLAUSUM FREGIT, &c. in the COMMON PLEAS; and of PROCESS in the EXCHEQUER of PLEAS.

A Bill of Middlesex, or Latitat, is the ordinary mode of commencing Bill of Middleactions in the court of King's Bench, against unprivileged persons: And a latitat, being a kind of original in that court a, may be issued in the issued, and first instance, without previously suing out a bill of Middlesex b. But this mode of commencing actions is not applicable to peers of the realm, corporations, or hundredors on the statute 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 31. who, not being subject to a capias, must be sued by original writ; nor to members of the house of commons, who for the same reason must be sued by original writ, or by bill for the real cause of action, stating them to have privilege of parliament. And there is no need of any process for commencing actions against attornies or officers, who are supposed to be already present in court; nor against prisoners in the actual custody of the marshal. A writ of latitat, issued against a peer, was superseded on motion, grounded on an office copy of the pracipe, in which the defendant was styled Baronc: but the motion for this purpose must be made as soon as may be, and before interlocutory judgment d.

be cancelled, and set aside the bill of Middlesex, for irregularity a. It has been frequently ruled however, that for certain purposes, a bill of Middlesex or latitat, out of the King's Bench, may be taken to be in nature of an original writ in the Common Pleas b; and a latitat, even without a bill of Middlesex, if properly issued and continued on the roll, has been holden to be a good commencement of the suit, to avoid a plea of the statute of limitations c, or a tender made after suing it out d. It was indeed said by Holt, Ch. J. that there is a difference between a civil action, and an action given by a statute; for in the first case, the suing out a latitat within the time, and continuing it afterwards, will be sufficient; but in the other case, if the party proceed by bill, he ought to file his bill within time, that it may appear to be upon the record itself . But, upon a writ of error, all the judges in the Exchequer chamber held, that a latitat is a kind of original in the King's Bench f: And accordingly, in two subsequent cases g, it was holden to be a good commencement of the suit in a penal action. Hence it appears, that a latitat may be considered, either as the commencement of the action, or only as process to bring the defendant into court, at the election of the plaintiff h. Though if it be stated as the commencement of the action, to avoid a tender, the defendant may deny that the plaintiff had any cause of action at the time of suing it out i; or if it be replied to a plea of the statute of limitations, the defendant, in order to maintain his plea, may aver the real time of suing it out, in opposition to the teste .

Anciently, it seems, the process in trespass in the King's Bench was founded on a plaint or queritur, entered on the records of the court: and the first process thereon was a precept in nature of an attachment, upon which the sheriff returned, either that he had attached the defendant, or that he had nothing by which he could be attached. On the latter return, if the defendant did not appear, there issued into Middlesex, or other county where the court sat, a precept in nature of a capias, commanding

OF THE BILL OF MIDDLESEX,

Names of parties.

A bill of Middlesex, and notice thereto, describing the defendant as Mr. A., without stating his christian name, is irregular .: And, in the King's Bench, where the party arrested was described in the process, and affidavit to hold to bail, by the initials of his christian name only, the court ordered the bail bond to be delivered up to be cancelled, and the defendant discharged, upon entering a common appearance b. And, in that court, where the christian name of the defendant is omitted in a bailable latitat, the court, on motion, will set it aside, for irregularity; but where it is omitted in serviceable process, they will leave the party to his plea in abatement c. So, in the Common Pleas, if a defendant be arrested by the initials of his christian name only, and sign a bail bond in a similar manner, the court will discharge him, on entering a common appearance, on his undertaking to bring no action d. So, where the christian name of the defendant was wholly omitted in a latitat, the proceedings were deemed irregular, and set aside on motion e: and there is no distinction in this respect. between bailable and serviceable process e. But where, by a writ of capias ad respondendum, the sheriff was directed to take Messrs. C. and D. without mentioning their christian names, and they afterwards signed a bail bond in their christian and surnames, the court held it to be a waiver of the irregularity in the writ . Also, it is a rule, that every subsequent writ should correspond with that which has gone before, in the names of the parties: Therefore, where an action was brought against Bates and another, for an act done by them as justices of the peace, and the latitat against Bates was by the name of William, and the alias by the name of John, the court thought the proceedings irregular, and set them aside, as far as they respected Bates g. But a misnomer may be cured, by altering the writ, and getting it rescaled, before the return h: And where process is sued out against four defendants, one of whom is misnamed, it may be served upon the three whose names are right, and if the name of the other be afterwards altered, and the writ resealed, it is good against all i.

Correspondence in, of subsequent, with prior writ.

Misnomer, how cured.

The plaintiff was formerly allowed to join four defendants, for separate causes of action, in one writ; and to declare against them severally k. And this is still allowed, in the Common Pleas!, where the process is not bailable! But in the King's Bench, by a late rule of court m, "in all actions by bill, the mesne process shall contain the name of the defendant, or (if more than one,) of all the defendants in that action; and shall not contain the name or names of the defendant or defendants in any other Where the process is bailable, a plaintiff cannot, in either court, join several defendants in one writ, for distinct causes of action 2: And if the plaintiff hold two defendants to bail on a joint writ, and declare against them severally, the court will set aside the declaration and subsequent proceedings for irregularity b. Bailable process however may, it seems, be taken out against some defendants, and serviceable process against others c: And, in the Common Pleas, where an action is brought against more than four defendants, and two writs are sued out, it does not seem to be necessary to name all the defendants in each writ c.

The bill of Middlescx, and other process into that county, are issued out Issuing. signing, of the bill of Middlesex office, and signed by the clerk, but not sealed. The latitat, and other process thereon, are issued and signed by the signer of the writs in the King's Bench office, and afterwards sealed at the seal office. The clerk, according to ancient orders, was upon the signing of every writ of alias and pluries capias, and of every non omittas, to subscribe under the same, the term when the latitat was sued forth; and no such writ could be signed in term time, before a note was delivered in, subscribed with the term when the latitat was sued forth, for the entering of the same; and in vacation time, the clerks were to enter every such writ, before it was signed d. At the time of issuing the bill of Middlesex or latitat, &c. the plaintiff's attorney should deliver to the officer a præcipe e, or note of instructions: And it is usual to make the affidavit of the cause of action at the same time, before the officer or his deputy.

In point of form, the bill of Middlesex and latitat, &c. are common or special. Before the making of the statute 13 Car. II. stat. 2. c. 2. a defendant might have been arrested and holden to bail for any sum of money, upon a common bill of Middlesex or latitat, &c. not expressing the particular cause of action. It consequently happened, that he was frequently arrested, and holden to bail or imprisoned, for a large sum of money, when perhaps there was no real plaintiff, or little or no cause of action f. remedy this mischief, it was enacted, that "no person arrested by any " sheriff, &c. by force or colour of any bailable writ, bill or process, issu-" ing out of the King's Bench, wherein the certainty and true cause of " action is not expressed particularly, shall be compelled to give security " for his appearance, in any penalty or sum of money, exceeding the sum " of forty pounds g." This statute, says Mr. Justice Blackstone h, (without any such intention in the makers,) had like to have ousted the King's Bench of all its jurisdiction over civil injuries without force; for as the bill of Middlesex was framed only for actions of trespass, a defendant could not be arrested and holden to bail thereupon, for breaches of civil contracts. But, notwithstanding this statute, the defendant might still be arrested, and holden to bail upon a common bill of Middlesex or latitat, &c. for any sum not exceeding forty pounds a: And where it was for a larger sum, a method was devised, to preserve the jurisdiction of the court, and at the same time to authorize an arrest, by inserting in the process an ac etiam, or special clause beginning with these words, shortly describing the true cause of action, in addition to the general complaint of trespass b. And a rule of court was made upon this statute, that no attorney should make any precept or writ, with a clause of ac etiam, &c. against any heir, executor or administrator; nor in any case where, by the course of the court, special bail was not required c.

In trespass therefore, and other cases, where the defendant either cannot, or is not meant to be arrested, and held to special bail, the process in general is in the common form, requiring the defendant to answer the plaintiff, in a plea of trespass. This description of the plea however, though it was heretofore material d, is now considered as mere matter of form: Therefore, where a motion was made to stay the proceedings on a bill of Middlesex, which was in debt only, and not in trespass, with an ac etiam in debt, the court ordered the bill to be amended, by inserting the plea of trespass c. In a subsequent case f, where the bill of Middlesex was to answer the plaintiff in a plea of debt, instead of trespass, and also to a bill to be exhibited in a plea of trespass upon the case, the court refused to grant a rule for setting it aside, on the authority of a case, which was read from the master's note book, exactly in point s. And a bill of Middlesex, requiring the defendant to appear before us, is good h.

When the cause of action is of a bailable nature, and it is intended to arrest the defendant, and hold him to special bail, for a larger sum than 40l. there should be a clause of ac etiam in the process: and in such case, an omission in the ac etiam part of the writ, of the sum for which the defendant is arrested; or that it was due on promises k, is irregular, and he cannot be holden to special bail thereon. There are also some cases, in which the cause of action must be expressed in the process, though the defendant be not arrested, and held to special bail: Thus, in an action on the lottery act, the amount of the penaltics sued for must be specified in the first process; even though the defendant be not holden to bail thereon. And where a writ is sued out upon a recognizance of bail, it is necessary, by rule of court a, that after the words "in a plea of trespass," there should be inserted the following clause, "and also to a bill of the said plaintiff, " against the said defendant, in a plea of debt upon recognizance, accord-" ing to the custom of our court before us, to be exhibited;" otherwise the defendant or his attorney is not bound to accept of a declaration in debt upon such recognizance. An ac eliam writ is holden to be a good continuance of common process, so as to avoid a plea of the statute of limitations b.

The bill of Middlesex, being merely a precept c, has no direction or teste. Bill of Middle-But the writ of latitat, and other subsequent process, should be directed to the sheriff or sheriffs of the county, where the defendant is supposed to resided; or, if one of the sheriffs is a party, to the othere; or if both Direction of sheriffs are parties, to the coroner f; and if he also be a party, to clisors named by the master in the King's Bench s, or prothonotaries in the Common Pleas h. And a latitat cannot be directed to the sheriff of Middlesex; for if this were allowed, a bill of Middlesex might never be issued. But when the copy of a latitat was directed to the sheriff, and not, as it ought to have been, to the sheriffs of London, it was not deemed irregular k.

It was formerly holden, that a writ of latitat, &c. did not run into When issued Wales 1, or the counties palatine m: but a different practice now prevails n; into Wales, or county malatine which practice is recognized, as to Walcs, by the statutes 13 Geo. III. c. 51. § 1, 2.°, and 5 Geo. IV. c. 106. § 21.; and, with respect to the countics palatine, the true meaning of the expression breve domini regis non currit, &c. is said to be, that the court cannot write directly to the sheriff, as they do in other cases p. In a county palatine therefore, the process should be directed to the proper officer; as in Durham, to the Bishop, or his chancellor; in Cheshire, to the Chamberlain, or his deputy; and in-Lancushire, to the Chancellor, or his deputy 1: And an alias capias, directed to the sheriffs of the city of Chester, instead of the chamberlain of the county palatine, directing him to issue his mandate to the sheriffs, is irregular, and may be set aside at the instance of the defendant. In these cases, the mandatory part of the writ is different from the common form 5; and if the officer, to whom it is directed, refuse to receive it, he is liable

In the isle of Ely, the process out of the courts at Westminster goes in the first instance to the sheriff of Cambridgeshire, who thereupon issues his mandate to the bailiff of the franchise d. Return of bill of Middlesex, or latitat, &c.

The latitat, and other subsequent process, should be tested in the name of the chief justice, or senior judge of the court, if there be no chief justice; and this process, as well as the capias in the Common Pleas, may be tested before the cause of action. If it be sued out in term time, it is usually tested on the first day of that term; though it may be tested of the preceding one h: If sued out in vacation, it should be tested on the last day of the preceding term i; for if tested in vacation, it is altogether void k: And in all continued writs, the alias must be tested the day the former was returnable. A bill of Middlesex may be stated in pleading to have been sued out in vacation m, so as it be not alleged that the court was then holden at Westminstern: and it may be stated to have been sued out of the court at Westminster, on a day between the essoin day and the quarto die post; for though the courts do not actually sit on the essoin day, yet in law it is considered as the first day of the term o. And this, and every other process by bill, must be made returnable on a particular return day, or day certain, in full term p; as on Monday, or some other day of the week, next after the preceding general return; and it may be made returnable on a general return, in full term, by specifying the day of the week on which it falls, as on Monday in fifteen days of Saint Hilary, &c. But it must not be returnable on a dies non juridicus; as on a Sunday, the feast of the Purification in Hilary term r, Ascension day in Easter term , or Midsummer day (if it happen) in Trinity term, unless it be on the Friday next after Trinity Sunday, in which case it is dies juridicus

And Monday next after the Morrow of the Holy Trinity is not a good return for the first Monday in Trinity term; but the return for that day should be Monday next after eight days of the Holy Trinity<sup>b</sup>. It should also be observed, that as there are more than seven days between the morrow of All Souls, and the morrow of Saint Martin, in Michaelmas term, the day before the morrow of Saint Martin, being the 11th of November, is not the day of the week next after the morrow of All Souls; and therefore, on this day, the bill of Middlesex, or other process, should be made returnable on Monday (or other day of the weck, being) the feast of Saint Martin. There is no necessity for any particular number of days between the teste and return of a latitat, or other process by bill: even one was formerly deemed sufficient c; and it may be now sued out on the very return day d.

The ordinary mode of commencing actions, in the court of Common Capias quare Pleas, is by writ of capias quare clausum fregit; which is founded on a supposed original, and answers to the bill of Middlesex or latitat in the King's Bench e. It is not necessary however, Need not be inin this court, that a clause of ac etiam should be inserted in the pracipe, or instructions for the writk: nor that the filacer's name should be added to a common capias 1. The writ of capias quare clausum fregit should be tested in term-time, and returnable before the king's justices at Westminster, on a general return day: And, as it is founded on a supposed original, there should regularly be fifteen days between the teste and return.

Pracipe for, issuing, signing, and sealing writs, &c.

If the defendant, in a bailable action, cannot be taken on the first writ, before it is returnable, the plaintiff may have one or more writs of capias by continuance, in order to arrest him in the same county; and need not sue out an alias or pluries capias d. And if a capias by continuance be tested on the same day as the original capias, a new original capias may be sued out to warrant it, though such new original bear teste before the cause of action accrued e. It was formerly necessary, where the defendant resided in a different county from that in which the plaintiff meant to lay the venue, to sue out a capias into the latter county, and then a testatum into the other f; for the plaintiff lost his bail, if he declared in any other county than that in which the capias issued, as is still the case by original in the King's Bench ; but a rule having been made in the Common Pleas h, that "where the defendant is arrested by virtue of a capias ad respondendum in any county, and bail is put in thereupon, the plaintiff may declare in a different county, without its being deemed a waiver of the bail," it is now usual to sue out a capias at once, into the county in which the defendant resides; and where he cannot be found in that county, the plaintiff's attorney may sue out a capias, or testatum', into another. Where the first capias issued on an affidavit of debt sworn before and filed with the filacer, if a second capias issue, there must be a new affidavit of debt, sworn before and filed with the filacer of the second county k; the statute 1 requiring, that the affidavit should be sworn before the officer who issues the process, or his deputy: but where a testatum capias issues, a new affidavit is unnecessary m: And an original capias cannot regularly issue into a county palatine<sup>n</sup>; but the defendant may be arrested therein on a testatum capias. In any of the foregoing writs, if the defendant reside within a liberty, there may be clause of non omittas, empowering him to enter it. These writs are issued, on a proper pracipe p or note of instructions, and signed by the filacer; after which they are scaled: and, in bailable cases, it is usual at the same time to make an affidavit of the cause of action, before the filacer or his deputy.

In the Exchequer of Pleas, the first process used for bringing the defendant into court, in ordinary cases, is a venire facias, subpana, or quo minus capias, ad respondendum. The venire facias, we have seen d, is in Venire facias ad nature of an original writ; and was the process used at common law, against persons having privilege of parliament. This process is issued, on a proper pracipe c, and directed to the sheriff; commanding him to cause the defendant to come before the barons of the Exchequer at Westminster, on a day in term, to answer the plaintiff of a plea of trespass on the case, (or as the nature of the action may be,) whereby he is the less able to satisfy his majesty, the debts which he owes him at his Exchequer, &c f. On this writ, the practice, before the statute 51 Geo. III. c. 124. § 2. was for the sheriff, to whom it was delivered, to make out a warrant or summons g to his officer, who thereupon summoned the defendant, by delivering to him a copy of the summons, or leaving it for him, in his absence, at his dwelling house, or place of abode; and, upon the sheriff's return of the names of the summoners h, if the defendant did not appear, a distringus i issued, on a proper pracipe k, against his lands and chattels, upon which the sheriff returned issues to the amount of 40s.1; and after that, if necessary, an alias or pluries distringas m: And it was a rule, that when Issues. issues were returned upon any writ of distringus, the plaintiff might, immediately after the return thereof, apply by motion for increasing issues, upon further process to be issued between the parties; which issues were increased from time to time, at the discretion of the court ". But the pro- Now regulated cess by venire facias and distringus, in the Exchequer, is now regulated by Gco. IV. c. 71. the statute 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 71. § 5.0 And though, when the defendant is abroad, the plaintiff is not allowed to issue a distringus, as a preliminary step to entering an appearance for him according to the statute, so that he may proceed thereon to final judgment, as if the defendant himself had appeared p; yet in other cases, he may still proceed by distringus, on service of the venire facias, for the purpose of compelling an appearance, as he might have done before the act. The present mode of proceeding on that statute, is by serving the defendant personally, if possible, with a copy of the venire; or, if he cannot be met with, by leaving such copy at his dwelling house, or usual place of abode b, with some adult member of his family there, or the person with whom he lodges: and service of the venire on the wife of the defendant, at his dwelling house, has been deemed good service. So, where a copy of the writ was left with a servant of the defendant's brother, who was also his partner, and a co-defendant in the action, at whose house the servant acknowledged he had resided, this was considered as good service, although the party at the time was out of the kingdom d: but delivering a copy of the writ at the counting house of the defendant, is not sufficient e, unless it be given to a partner, or some accredited person there f. To ground a motion for a distringus, on the above statute, an affidavit must be made in this court, similar to that in the King's Bench and Common Pleas ; and the subsequent proceedings are the same as in those courts.

Subpæna ad respondendum.

The subpæna ad respondendum is a process directed to the defendant; commanding him to appear before the barons of the Exchequer at Westminster, immediately after service thereof in term, or, if sued out in vacation, on a day in the next term, to answer the king, under the penalty of 100L, concerning certain articles then and there, on his majesty's behalf, to be objected against him h. This process, we have seen i, is analogous to the subpæna in Chancery, or on the equity side of the Exchequer: and may be issued out of the office of Pleas; and it is not necessary that such process should be signed by the chief secondary, or a sworn clerk in the A copy of the writ, or label1, specioffice of the king's remembrancer k. fying the day of appearance, is made out thereon, and served on the de-But it is not the practice, as in Chancery, to serve a subpana, by leaving the body of the writ with the defendant, where there is but one: It is sufficient, if a copy or label be left, and the original produced, and shewn to him m. If the defendant do not appear within four days after the return of it, an affidavit n is made of the service; upon which there issues an attachment o, and afterwards, if necessary, a distringus, on the statute 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 71. § 5. Previously to that statute there issued, on the defendant's non-appearance to the attachment, an alias or Indorsements on process.

Of day of signing.

It will here be proper to take notice of some things that are required by act of parliament, to be set down, subscribed to, or indorsed upon the process, in the different courts. And first, by the statutes 5 & 6 W. & M. c. 21. § 4. and 9 & 10 W. III. c. 25. § 42. made for preventing abuses committed by arresting persons, without any writ or legal process to justify the same, and by that means evading the stamp duties thereon; " the officer, who shall sign any writ or process, to arrest any person or " persons before judgment, shall, at the signing thereof, set down upon " such writ or process, the day and year of his signing the same b." And by a subsequent statute c, made for the like purposes, "every warrant, " issuing upon any such writ or writs, shall have the same day and year " plainly and distinctly set down thereon, as shall be so set down on the "writ itself." The indorsement of the date, however, is said to be no part of the writ: and therefore, if the teste be right, the courts will not set aside the proceedings, for a mistake of the indorsement d. But where, in an action against an attorney for negligence, in not proceeding to judgment and execution in due time, the bill of Middlesex against the original defendant (having no teste,) was stated, under a videlicet, to have issued

And where the demand is made up of several items, it is sufficient to indorse the total of them on the writ c.

A further regulation was made by the statute 2 Geo II. c. 23. § 22. And that every copy of any writ or pro-" cess, that shall be served upon any defendant, shall, before the service " thereof, be in like manner subscribed or indorsed, with the name of the " attorney or solicitor who shall be immediately retained or employed by "the plaintiff." Lastly, by the statute 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 71. § 8. reciting that arrests of the person had in many instances been made under writs sued out by persons not being attornies or solicitors, and whose places of residence were unknown, which practice had been found to be productive of oppression and vexation; it is enacted, that "no sheriff, under-sheriff, or other " officer having the execution of process, shall grant any warrant for the ar-" rest of, or shall arrest the person of any defendant, upon any writ or pro-" cess issued by any plaintiff in his own person, unless the same writ shall, " at or before the time of granting such warrant, or of making such arrest, " be delivered to such sheriff, under-sheriff, or other officer having the exe-" cution of process, by some attorney of one of the courts of record at West-" minster, or of the courts of Great Sessions in Wales, or of the courts of " the counties palatine of Lancaster or Durham, or of the court out of " which the said writ shall have issued, or by the clerk of such attorney, or " an agent authorized by such attorney in writing; and unless the said writ " shall be indorsed by such attorney or his clerk, or such agent as afore-" said, in the presence of such sheriff, under-sheriff, or other officer having " the execution of process, with the name and place of abode of such at-And, by § 9. Irregularity in process, what, and when, and how cured.

If there be no process c, or if it be defective in point of form d, or in its direction e, teste f, or return g, or the attorney's name be not indorsed upon it h, the defendant may move the court to set aside the proceedings for irregularity. And a writ, having a wrong return, will not be aided, by a correct day being mentioned in the notice to appear i. But he cannot take advantage of any error or defect in the process, after he has appeared to it k, or taken the declaration out of the office 1, or obtained time to put in bail to the action m; for it is the universal practice of the courts, that the application to set uside proceedings for irregularity should be made as early as possible, or, as it is commonly said, in the first instance :; and where there has been an irregularity, if the party overlook it, and take subsequent steps in the cause, he cannot afterwards revert back and object to it b. In the Common Pleas, the court will not quash a writ, on the ground of its having been served in a wrong county c. And it is said, that a mistake in the process is cured by the plaintiff's entering an appearance, which has always been looked upon as effectual for that purpose, as if the defendant had entered the appearanced; but the plaintiff cannot, by entering an appearance, cure the want of service of a copy of the processe, or a defect in the notice subscribed thereto f. It is also said, that no advantage can be taken of the irregularity of process, without having it returned, and before the court s. And where the irregularity complained of is not in the process, but in the notice to appear theretoh, or in the service of it i, the rule should be to set aside such service, and not the process itself k.

The courts will in general amend the process, where there is any thing Amendment of to amend by 1: and it has been amended in the name of the defendant, where he was a prisoner in custody under it m. But the court of King's Bench would not grant a rule for amending the writ, under which the defendant had been arrested by a wrong name, after actions of false imprisonment had been brought for such arrest n. So, an amendment cannot be made of mesne process, by adding the name of another person as plaintiff. A writ returnable on a dies non is altogether void, and cannot be amended by the court. And the courts, we have seen q, will not in general allow a writ to be amended, to the prejudice of the bail.

Entering process on roll, to avoid statute of limitations.

tat, and write thereupon issuing out of the King's Bench. And where a writ is sued out to avoid the statute of limitations, it should regularly be entered on a roll, and docketed, with the sheriff's return thereto, and continuances to the time of declaring a. The writ should be entered on a roll of that term wherein it was returnable; and, in the King's Bench, it is entered in hec verba: after which the roll proceeds with an entry of the plaintiff's appearance, the sheriff's return of non est inventus, and continuances of the process from term to term, by vicecomes non misit breve, to the term of the declaration. In the Common Pleas, the roll merely contains a recital of the writ, with an entry of the plaintiff's appearance, and sheriff's return, &c. And when the proceedings are thus entered, the roll is docketed b with the clerk of the judgments in the King's Bench, or prothonotaries in the Common Pleas, and afterwards filed in the treasury of the court. In replying to a plea of the statute of limitations, except by original', the plaintiff should show that the cause was regularly continued, by vicecomes non misit breve, from the return of the writ to the time of declaring d. And where three latitats were sued out at different times, for the same cause of action, and the defendant appeared upon the second, and signed a non pros for not declaring, the court ordered the continuances subsequently entered upon the first, to be struck out; being of opinion, that the first latitat was made an end of by the second; and if it were not so, the practice of the court is clear and well known, that the continuances must be by alias and pluries, and not by original writs of latitate. But the continuances need not appear in pleading, to have been by alias and pluries writs f: And in general, the continuances are mere matter of form, and may be entered at any time s. It has even been holden, that they may be made by the attornies in their chambers h. And, in order to save the statute of limitations, it is sufficient that the writ be sued out, and the return indorsed upon it, in time; it not being necessary that the writ should be delivered out of the sheriff's office as returned i.

Continuances.

Evidence of process.

In penal and other actions, which are limited by statute to be commenced within a certain time, it is necessary for the plaintiff to produce the writ at the trial, or an examined copy of it, if filed, in order to shew that the action was commenced in due time, unless it appear to have been so commenced, on the face of the record of nisi prius. And, in the Common Pleas, the production of a cupias ad respondendum, sued out in time, is deemed sufficient for that purpose a. But if the writ was not sued out till after the time prescribed, though by relation it would be within the time, the plaintiff will be nonsuited b. If there be only one writ, the plaintiff may give it in evidence, without shewing it to be returned c. And if the declaration appear, on the face of the record, to have been delivered or filed within the time allowed by the rules of the court for declaring, it is sufficiently connected with the writ d; if not, other evidence is necessary to connect them. And, in the Common Pleas, if the issue be made up of a term subsequent to that allowed by the rules of the court for declaring, the plaintiff must shew that the declaration was delivered or filed within that time . Where there are two writs, the court will presume that the plaintiff proceeded on the last, unless he can connect them, by shewing the first to be returned; for until that be done, the court is not in possession of the cause, so as to award an alias or pluries for bringing the defendant into court s. But where the debt was paid after a pluries writ issued, the defendant was not allowed to object at the trial, that the latitat was not returned; for at any rate, if the pluries writ had been the commencement of the action, it was only an irregularity, which though a ground for applying to the court to set aside the proceedings, yet having been once waived, could not afterwards be objected to h. Where one writ was produced at the trial, and three declarations against the principal and his bail, to shew that certain actions had been brought against them, and three allocaturs of the costs taxed in the same actions were also put in and proved; this was deemed sufficient evidence of three actions having been brought, and of the costs having been taxed therein i.

To prove the issuing of a writ, in an action against an attorney for practising without a certificate, it is not sufficient to prove the præcipe by the filacer's book, and to give notice to the party to produce it; but it should also be shewn that, after the return, the treasury was searched, and no such writ found, and that it was in the party's hands, who had notice to produce it k.

CHAP. IX.

Of the Proceedings on Mesne Process, against the Person of the Defendant; and of the Service of a Copy of Process, not ballable; and the Notice to appear thereto.

Proceedings on mesne process, against the person. THERE are two ways of proceeding upon mesne process against the person of the defendant, whether the action be commenced by original writ, bill of Middlesex or latitat, capias quare clausum fregit, &c. or attachment of privilege; first, by service of a copy of the process; and 2dly, by arrest.

Previous to, and on stat. 12 Geo. I. c. 29.

Before the making of the statute 12 Geo. I. c. 29. a defendant might have been arrested, upon process against the person, in civil actions, for any sum of money however trifling, or to any amount however considerable, without any affidavit of its being due. To remedy which, it was enacted by the above statute, (amended by the 5 Geo. II. c. 27. made perpetual by the 21 Geo. II. c. 3. and extended to inferior courts by the 19 Geo. III. c. 70. § 2.) that " in all cases, where the cause of action shall not amount "to the sum of ten pounds or upwards, and the plaintiff or plaintiffs shall * proceed by way of process against the person, he she or they shall not " arrest, or cause to be arrested, the body of the defendant or defendants; " but shall serve him her or them personally, within the jurisdiction of "the court, with a copy of the process; upon which shall be written an " English notice to such defendant, of the intent and meaning of such " service; for which 🖚 fee or reward shall be demanded or taken: pro-" vided nevertheless, that in particular franchises and jurisdictions, the " proper officer there shall execute such process. And that in all cases, " where the plaintiff's cause of action shall amount to the sum of ten " pounds or upwards, an affidavit shall be made and filed of such cause " of action; which affidavit may be made before any judge or commis-" sioner of the court out of which such process shall issue, authorized to " take affidavits in such court, or else before the officer who shall issue such process, or his deputy; which oath such officer or his deputy afe mpowered to administer; and for such affidavit one shilling shall be paid, and no more: and the sum or sums specified in such affidavit, shall be indorsed on the back of such writ or process a; for which sum or sums, so indorsed, the sheriff or other officer, to whom such writ or process shall be directed, shall take bail, and for no more."

of the statute, we have seen a, is merely directory to the sheriff; and does not avoid the process, where the sum sworn to is not indorsed upon it. But the statute is express, that the affidavit must be filed, before the writ issues b. And " if any writ or process shall issue for the sum of ten " pounds or upwards, and no affidavit and indorsement shall be made as " aforesaid, the plaintiff or plaintiffs shall not proceed to arrest the body " of the defendant or defendants, but shall proceed in like manner as is " directed by the statute 12 Geo. I. c. 29. in cases where the cause of " action does not amount to the sum of ten pounds or upwards."

And, by a late act of parliament c, " no person shall be held to special By stat. 7 & 8 " bail, upon any process issuing out of any court, where the cause of ac-"tion shall not have originally amounted to the sum of twenty pounds or up-" wards, over and above and exclusive of any costs charges or expences that " may have been incurred, recovered or become chargeable, in or about the " suing for or recovering the same, or any part thereof: And that in all " cases where the cause of action shall not amount to twenty pounds or " upwards, exclusive of such costs charges and expences as aforesaid, and " the plaintiff or plaintiffs shall proceed by the way of process against " the person, he she or they shall not arrest, or cause to be arrested, the " body of the defendant or defendants; but shall serve him her or them " personally, within the jurisdiction of the court, with a copy of the pro-" cess and proceedings thereupon, in such manner as by the said act of " the twel/th year of the reign of his late majesty king George the first " is provided, in cases where the cause of action shall not amount to ten " pounds or upwards in any superior court, or to forly shillings or up-" wards in any inferior court." But the statute 51 Geo. III. c. 124. § 1. did not avoid the plaintiff's proceedings and judgment, by reason of his having arrested the defendant for a sum exceeding fifteen pounds, when he recovered less than that sum d. And where the defendant pleaded, that the plaintiff had sued out a writ against him by a wrong name, under which he was arrested, and allowed to go at large by the sheriff, and that the writ was afterwards altered, by inserting the real name of the defendant, under which he was again arrested, without any fresh affidavit of debt, as required by the statute, the plea was holden to be bad, on special demurrer; as it did not go to the merits of the action, and, if true, the defendant should either have pleaded in abatement, or moved to set aside the proceedings for irregularity. It is curious to remark the Changes in law changes which the law of arrest has undergone at different periods. Anciently, as no capias lay, an arrest was not allowed, except in actions of trespass vi et armis: afterwards, an arrest was introduced, with the capias, in other actions: and now, by the operation of the before-mentioned statutes, an arrest cannot be had, in the only action wherein it was formerly Plaintiff only restrained, by the above statutes.

Arrest still allowed, by rule of court or judge's order, on affidavit made abroad.

In Ireland, and Scotland.

In action for general damages.

Cases provided for by the above statutes.

Service of copy of process.

Notice to appear to, in what cases necessary.

These statutes however, except so far as they probabilit the holding to bail for causes of action under twenty pounds, are not directly restrictive of any authority antecedently exercised by the courts, in respect to the holding to bail; but of the act of the plaintiff only a. And as the practice of the courts, anterior to the statutes, appears to have been, to receive affidavits sworn out of England, and verified here, for the purpose of making orders thereupon, to hold defendants to special bail b; so this practice, not being inconsistent with the letter of the statute 12 Geo. I. c. 29. has prevailed ever since: and accordingly it is now settled, that the defendant may be arrested, under an order of the court or a judge, upon an affidavit made out of England, and verified here, as well where the affidavit is made abroad, out of his majesty's dominions, before some magistrate or person of competent authority there, as where it is made before a judge or other person authorized to take affidavits in Ireland and Scotland. And on similar grounds, though the plaintiff is prohibited by the statutes from arresting the defendant upon his own affidavit only, in an action for general damages, as in assumpsit or covenant to indemnify, &c. or in an action for a tort or trespass, yet the court or a judge is not restrained thereby, but may make a special order upon such affidavit, for holding the defendant to special baild. In trespass for the mesne profits, after a recovery in ejectment, the action is bailable or not, at the discretion of the court or a judge: and when an order for bail is made, the recognizance is usually taken in two years value of the premises; but this is also discretionary e.

There are three cases provided for by these statutes; first, where the cause of action does not amount to twenty pounds; secondly, where it amounts to twenty pounds or upwards, and no affidavit is made thereof; thirdly, where it amounts to twenty pounds or upwards, and there is an affidavit made and filed of the cause of action f. In the two first cases, the process against the person is not bailable g; and the defendant cannot be arrested thereon, but must be personally served with a copy of it; on which there must be written an English notice, of the intent and meaning of such service h; which in effect reduces it to a mere summons i. This notice (which is only necessary on the copy of the process served, and need not be on the writ itself k,) is required by the statutes, where the cause of action amounts to twenty pounds or upwards, and no affidavit is made thereof, as well as where it does not amount to twenty pounds a And it must be directed to the defendant b; for if his name be not pre- Direction of. fixed thereto, the process is irregular, and may be quashed on motion. The notice should, it seems, be directed to the defendant by his christian, Form of. as well as surname c; and require the defendant to appear at the return of the process d: and where the process is returnable on a general return day, as in the Common Please, or King's Bench by original f, or on a quo minus in the Exchequer s, it should require him to appear on the return . day, though it happen on a Sunday h, and not on the quarto die post of the return of the process. In the King's Bench, a notice requiring the defendant to appear on Friday, instead of Saturday, the sixth of November, is irregular i. And so, in the Common Pleas, where a writ was tested on the twelfth of February, returnable in fifteen days of Easter, being the fifth of April, and in the notice to appear, the return day was stated to be the fifth of February, instead of the fifth of April, the court held this to be irregular, and set aside the proceedings k. But it is not necessary that the year should be stated in the notice, in words at length; it being sufficient to set out in figures 1. If there be no notice to appear m, when ne- Want of. cessary, or the notice be not properly directed", &c. the defendant may move the court to set aside the proceedings. But any trifling informality Informality in. in the notice, as setting down the day of the month on which the defendant is to appear, without saying instant, next, or specifying the year, or mentioning an impossible year, will not invalidate it o.

The copy of process, to be served on the defendant, must be a copy of Copy of what such process as he might have been arrested upon, before the statute 12 Geo. In county palatine. be served. But where the defendant is in a county palatine, he should be served with a copy of the process issuing out of the superior court, and not of the mandate, from the officer to whom it is directed. And, in the Exchequer, a variance in the body of the copy of process, from the writ itself, is fatal, and subversive of the process, and subsequent proceedings. The copy of the process may be served by the sheriff or his officers, (except in particular franchises, having the return of writs,) or by any one else d, provided he be able to examine the copy with the original, so as to swear (if necessary,) to the service. In particular franchises and jurisdictions, the proper officer there should execute the process. The court will not allow the copy of a writ to be amended, so as to make the service good?

Formerly, a copy of the process must have been served on the defendant,

And it may be served at any hour, however late, at night; process not being within the rule of court as to service of notices, &c. before ten o'clock i. In the Exchequer, we have seen k, service of a writ on Candlemas day, is deemed good service. In the King's Bench, a bill of Middlesex must not be served in London, or elsewhere out of the county of Middlesex1; nor whilst the defendant is attending his cause at the sittings m: And a latitat cannot regularly be served in any other county than that to the sheriff of which it is directed n. So, in the Common Pleas, a capias directed into one county, cannot be regularly served in another, although it happen that the same officer is filacer for both counties o: And a capias directed into Kent, cannot be well served in the Cinque ports, or city of Canterbury P. But where there is any dispute as to the boundaries of the county, the courts will not determine it on motion q: And, in order to set aside the service of a writ in a wrong county, there must be a positive affidavit, in the King's Bench, shewing that there could be no dispute as to the boundaries . On serving the copy, it is not necessary, though usual, to show the original processa, unless demanded b: But if a defendant, at the time he is served with a copy of process, in the King's Bench, demand to see the original, and is refused, the service is irregular c. And where the defendant was served with a copy of a capias, and, a quarter of an hour afterwards, demanded to see the original, which was refused by the officer, the court of Common Pleas set aside the service and subsequent proceedings d. And where the defendant, on being served with a copy of process by the name of John, observed his name was Nicholas, upon which the person who served it was about to alter the name, when the defendant said, "never mind; I am the person, and will take care of it;" the court notwithstanding held, that the service was irregular, and set it aside, but without costs 1. ### CHAP. X.

Of the Arrest, upon Bailable Process.

IN treating of the law of arrest, it is proposed to consider, first, for what Arrest. cause of action it is allowed; 2dly, the affidavit to hold to bail; 3dly, what persons may, or may not be arrested; and lastly, by whom, and under what authority, when, where, and in what manner the arrest may be made.

When the cause of action amounts to twenty pounds or upwards, and When allowed an affidavit thereof is made and filed according to the statutes, the process for what sum. is builable; and the defendant may in general be arrested, and holden to special bail. But where the plaintiff, having a debt due to him under an arrestable sum, procured a promissory note to be indorsed to him by another creditor, for the purpose of holding the defendant to special bail, the court, considering this as a practice to evade the statute, discharged the defendant out of custody, on filing common bail 4. And, by the statute 7 & 8 Geo. In Wales, or IV. c. 71.b " no sheriff or other officer, within the principality of Wales, or " the counties palatine of Chester, Lancaster or Durham, shall, upon any " mesne process issuing out of his majesty's courts of record at Westmin-" ster, arrest or hold any person to special bail, unless such process shall " be duly marked and indorsed for bail, in a sum not less than fifty " pounds."

With respect to the cause of action, it is a rule, that where there is a When debt is certain debt to the amount of twenty pounds, or damages to that amount which may be reduced to a certainty, as in assumpsit or covenant for the payment of money', the defendant may be arrested, as a matter of course, on an affidavit shortly stating the cause of action. And he might formerly In trover, or dehave been arrested in like manner, in an action of trover d, or detinue; for these were considered as being more properly actions of property, than of tort. But where the defendant, being a custom-house officer, was arrested in an action of trover, brought against him for seizing goods, and it appeared by affidavit that there was a reasonable foundation for the seizure, that the goods were deposited in the king's warehouse, and that the defendant had used due diligence in proceeding towards a condemnation in the Exchequer, the court ordered common bail to be accepted. And by a late rule, in all the courts, "no person can be held to special bail, in an action of trover or detinue, without an order made for that purpose by the Lord Chief Justice, or one of the judges."

When not allowed, without special order.

On the other hand, where the damages are altogether uncertain c, as in assumpsit or covenant to indemnify, &c. or in actions for a tort or trespass d, there can be no arrest, without a special order of the court or a judge e, on a full affidavit of the circumstances f; for it would be unreasonable that the defendant should be arrested, for what damages the plaintliff fancics he has sustained, and is pleased to swear to. And it is not usual to grant a special order, except where there has been an outrageous battery or mayhem s, or the defendant is about to quit the kingdom. An affidavit stating that "the defendant was indebted to the plaintiff in 3000l. and upwards, being the value of cortain bars of silver, delivered by the plaintiff or on his a munt to the defendant, to be by him carried and delivered, and by the desendant undertaken to be carried and delivered, to E. B. at Gottenburgh in Sweden, for the use and on account of the plaintiff, but which bars of silver, or any part thereof, the defendant had not carried or delivered to the said E. B. at G. aforesaid, or to any other person, or at any other place, for the use of the plaintiff," was deemed sufficient to hold the defendant to special bail, on a judge's order; although it was objected, that it did not state any debt owing from the defendant to the plaintiff, and that there was no averment that the plaintiff had any property in the silver, or was damnified by the non-delivery of it h.

For sum cutam, &c.

In debt on statute. There are also some cases, where the defendant cannot be arrested, though the action be brought for a sum certain; and others, where he cannot be arrested for the whole of the legal debt, but only for so much as is equitably due. Thus, in an action of debt on a penal statute i, the defendant cannot be arrested, though it be for a sum certain; as it is a maxim, that every man shall be presumed innocent of an offence, till he be found guilty: But where an action is brought on a remedial statute, as for money won at play k, or on a statute which expressly authorises an arrest, as for exporting wool i, double value for holding over m, having un-

So, in an action of debt upon a recognizance of bail, the de- Onrecognizance fendant cannot be arrested: for besides that the sufficiency of the bail must have been proved, or admitted, previous to their being allowed, there are many things to be enquired into, which may shew them not liable c; and it is commonly said, that if the defendant were arrested in such an action, there would be bail in infinitum. And for similar reasons, an ar- Bail, or replevin rest is not permitted in an action of debt upon a baild or replevine bond; whether the action be brought in the name of the sheriff f, or of his assignee. But, after judgment has been obtained against the bail in such action, the defendant may be arrested in an action on the judgment g. A For goods bardefendant cannot be arrested, on an affidavit stating him to be indebted to the plaintiff for goods bargained and sold h, or, for goods sold i, without saying that they were delivered: for there is no reason why the plaintiff should have the security of the defendant's body under arrest, and also retain the security of the goods in his own hands k. And the court of On allocatur, for Common Pleas will not permit a defendant to be arrested, in an action founded on the prothonotary's allocatur, for costs 1; nor on a policy of Policy of assurassurance, for a total or partial loss, without an adjustment, or express promise to pay the amount m. But a defendant may be arrested on a Guaranty. guaranty, or undertaking to be answerable to a certain amount, for goods sold to a third person, in the event of his failing to pay for them ".

A party cannot be arrested and held to bail for a penalty, but only for For penalty, or the sum secured by it o. And hence it is, that in an action of debt upon bond, conditioned for the payment of money, though the penalty is, strictly speaking, the legal debt, yet as it is now considered, upon the statute for the amendment of the law p, to be merely a security for principal, interest and costs, the defendant cannot be arrested for more than the sum really due by the condition. And, in like manner, where the bond is conditioned for the performance of covenants q, or to save harmless r, &c. the defendant ought not to be arrested for the penalty, but only for the amount of the damages really sustained by the breach of the condition. But, upon a bond in a penalty, conditioned for paying a less sum by instalments and interest, though a part only of the instalments are due, the obligee may arrest for the aggregate amount of all the instalments, and the interest normed due before the action brought. An arrest may also be made for the penalty of a band conditioned for the performance of a promise of marriage b, &c. where the penalty is the real debt, or rather in nature of stated damages. And where an agreement was made in writing; to deliver a certain quantity of goods, within a certain time, at the price of 300l. or in default thereof, that the defendant would forfeit and pay to the plaintiff 100l.; in an action brought for the penalty, the judges of the Common Pleas were of opinion, that the defendant might be held to bail c.

On mutual dealings.

Where there have been mutual dealings between the parties, the balance is considered as the debt at law, as well as in equity: And therefore, upon an unliquidated account, if the plaintiff were to swear to the sum due to him on the debtor side only, it would be looked upon as a mere evasion; and if not sufficient to support an indictment for perjury, would it seems entitle the defendant to a special action on the case, for a malicious arrest. And, at any rate, if the balance did not constitute an arrestable debt, the defendant would be entitled to his costs, under the statute 43 Geo. III. c. 46. § 3. as having been arrested and held to bail, without any probable cause e.

After former arrest.

The defendant having been once arrested, cannot in general be arrested again, for the same cause of action . Nemo debet bis vexari, pro eadem causa. Thus, where the defendant was arrested on a writ taken out pending a prior action, wherein he had been previously arrested for the same cause, the court discharged him on common bail s. So the defendant was discharged, where he had been arrested a second time, pending a writ of error, and before judgment was given thereon, or the action discontinued h. And where the plaintiff, not liking the bail in the former action, obtained a side-bar rule for leave to discontinue upon payment of costs, and afterwards proceeded to charge the defendant in custody with a declaration in a new action, the court conceiving this to be a trick, discharged the side-bar rule; so that the bail to the former action still continued liable i. But where it appeared that the bail in the prior action were forsworn, the court refused to assist the defendant, though he was arrested before the former action was discontinued; saying, the plaintiff was right in laying hold of him as he did; for had he discontinued, the defendant would probably have run away k. And it has been determined, that the plaintiff, after suing out common process, may sue out a bailable writ for the same cause, and errest the defendant, before he discontinues the first action; for this is not a case within the rule of not permitting the defendant to be twice arrested for the same cause. By rule of Mich, 15 Car. II b. it is ordered, that "if a defendant be lawfully delivered from arrest upon any process, he shall not be arrested again at the same time, by virtue of another process, at the suit of the same plaintiff." But, notwithstanding this rule, the court of King's Bench held, that the plaintiff might lodge a detainer against the defendant, in custody upon mesne process, after his bail had justified, the defendant not having completed his discharge, but being still within the prison; and that he was not entitled to be discharged, upon an affidavit that the sum for which the detainer was lodged, was due at the time of the first arrest c.

The rule for preventing vexatious arrests, was formerly so rigidly ad- Non pros. hered to, that where the plaintiff was nonprossed for want of a declaration, he could not afterwards have arrested the defendant, in a second action for the same cause d. And this is still the practice in the Common Please. But, in the King's Bench, it has been determined, that after a nonpros, the defendant shall find bail in the second action f; for the plaintiff, it is said, suffers enough by paying costs in the first action, and therefore ought not to be in a worse condition than before. For a similar Discontinuance. reason, where the plaintiff, having misconceived his action, moves to discontinue upon payment of costs, he may, after the costs are taxed and paid 8, take out a new writ for the same cause, and have the defendant arrested de novoh. But where the plaintiff held the defendant to bail, before the cause of action accrued, and afterwards discontinued and paid costs, and then arrested him de novo for the same cause, after it accrued; the court of King's Bench discharged the defendant on common bail i. So, where an action Cassetur billa. was brought against one of two partners for a joint debt, and the defendant having been arrested therein, pleaded the partnership in abatement, it was holden, that the plaintiff might, after entering a cassetur billa, bring a new action against both partners, and arrest the defendant again for the same debt n. locutory judgment, the defendant may be arrested and held to bail by the assignees, in a second action for the same cause . But where the defendant has been arrested in an action brought in the name of a bankrupt, by the authority of his assignees, he cannot be afterwards arrested, at the suit of the assignees, for the same cause of action, unless the first action has been discontinued, and the costs taxed and paid b.

Supersedeas.

Wherever the second action appears to be vexatious or the defendant is arrested or detained in custody therein, after being superseded or supersedeable in a former action, by the laches of the plaintiff'd, the court will discharge the defendant on common bail; even though he be arrested on a note given subsequent to the supersedeas e, or in a different form of action, so as it be substantially for the same cause f. And where a defendant was arrested in the mayor's court of Hereford, by the practice of which court, a plaintiff is not bound to declare, without a rule for that purpose, and the defendant, without conforming to the practice, superseded the action for want of a declaration, and was again arrested in London for the same cause of action, the court, without entering into the irregularity of the defendant's proceedings, discharged him on filing common bail g. But where there are no laches in the plaintiff, and à fortiori where the defendant is in fault, the court will not assist the latter: Thus, where A. having been arrested at the suit of B. gave him a draft for part of the demand, and agreed to settle the remainder in a few days; after which, the draft being dishonoured, B. sued out a new writ against A., and arrested him again on the same affidavit; this was holden to be regular h. And if the defendant be discharged out of custody, on account of some act for which the plaintiff is not answerable, such as an alteration in the warrant to arrest by the sheriff's officer, without the plaintiff's knowledge, in such case the defendant may, after the first action is discontinued, be again held to bail for the same cause i. So, where the first action is compromised, and a second brought for the same cause, the court will not set aside the bail bond taken on an arrest, unless the proceedings appear to be vexatiousk. The defendant having given a bond, conditioned for the payment of a sumof money, if the sentence of a Vice-Admiralty court should be affirmed on appeal, and the appeal having been dismissed for want of prosecution, the defendant was arrested and holden to bail; after which, the appeal being restored upon petition, the action was suspended, and the bail discharged; but being again dismissed, a new action on the bond was commenced; and the court of Common Pleas held, that the defendant might be again arrested and holden to bail 1. So, where the defendant has been arrested abroad, he may be again arrested here, for the same cause of action; at

And where the defendant being in custody within a local Detainer in infejurisdiction, the plaintiff lodged a detainer against him, but discontinued the action from fear of a plea to the jurisdiction, and then arrested the defendant in the King's Bench, without having paid the costs of the first suit; the court held, that the defendant was not entitled to be discharged on filing common bail, the second suit not being vexatious d. By stat. 43 Geo.

III. c. 46.

It was formerly holden, that where the judgment was merely for costs upon a nonsuit c, or the debt was originally under ten pounds, but raised to a larger sum by the addition of costs d; or the action was for general damages, which were reduced by the judgment to a sum certain above ten pounds e, the defendant could not be arrested in the King's Bench, either upon the judgment itself, or upon a subsequent promise, in consideration of forbearance f, to pay the debt and costs. But it was afterwards determined in both courts 6, that a defendant might be arrested and held to special bail, in an action on a judgment for ten pounds, for damages and costs; though the original debt alone were under that amount. This determination seems to have occasioned the passing of the statute 43 Geo. III. c. 46. § 1. by which it is enacted, that "no person shall be arrested or held to " special bail, upon any process issuing out of any court in England or " Ireland, for a cause of action not originally amounting to the sum for " which such person is by the laws now in being liable to be arrested " and held to bail, over and above and exclusive of any costs, charges and " expenses that may have been incurred, recovered or become chargeable, " in or about the suing for or recovering the same, or any part thereof." And, by the statute 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 71 h. "no person shall be held to special bail, upon any process issuing out of any court, where the cause " of action shall not have originally amounted to the sum of twenty pounds " or upwards, over and above and exclusive of such costs charges and ex-" penses as aforesaid." This statute, however, does not extend to Scotland or Ireland 1.

the court said that such could not be the practice; for that an affidavit made for one specific object, could not be transferred to another, and perjury could not be assigned on the office copy 8. So, in the Common Pleas, where, on an affidavit of debt sworn before and filed with the filacer for Devonshire, a capias ad respondendum issued to the sheriff of that county against the defendant, who not being found there, an office copy of such affidavit was filed with the filacer for London, on which another capias issued, directed to the sheriffs of London, under which the defendant was arrested, the court held, that this was irregular; for, by the terms of the statute, an affidavit must be made before a judge, or commissioner of the court authorized to take affidavits, or before the officer who issues the process or his deputy; and in this case therefore, the affidavit should have been sworn before and filed with the filacer in London b. But where the defendant was arrested on a testatum capias into Devonshire, without any affidavit filed on issuing the testatum capias, an affidavit having been filed on issuing a previous capias into Cambridgeshire, the court held it to be regular, though the testatum was not tested on the quarto die post of the original; the filacer for Cambridgeshire being the proper officer to issue writs into Devonshire. By the jurat to an affidavit of debt, made by a foreigner, it was certified by the signer of the bills of Middlesex, that the affidavit was interpreted by F. C. professor of languages, (he having first sworn that he understood the English and French languages,) to the deponent, who was afterwards sworn to the truth thereof; and this was holden to be sufficientd.

Title of cause.

There being no action depending in court, at the time when the affidavit is made, it ought not regularly to be entitled in a cause: and in one case, the King's Bench discharged the defendant out of custody on common bail, on account of its being so entitled e; but in a subsequent case f, they thought that as the practice had obtained so long, of adding a title to affidavits of this kind, it would be too much to determine, that such practice had been erroneous; particularly as this was a mere question of form, and did not interfere with the justice of the case. A rule of court however has been since made in the King's Bench, "that affidavits of any cause of action, before process sued out to hold defendants to bail, be not entitled in any cause, nor read if filed g." And, in the Common Pleas, if an affidavit to hold to bail be entitled in a cause, it is bad; and the defendant may be discharged, on entering a common appearance h. It was determined in one case, to be no objection to an affidavit to hold to bail, that it was not entitled "In the King's Bench:" but in a subsequent case it was holden, that an affidavit of debt, not entitled in any court, and only subscribed with the words "By the Court," at the bottom of the jurat, is not sufficient a; though where the name of one of the judges of that court is affixed to the affidavit, it will entitle the party to read it, as sworn in court b: And an affidavit not entitled in the court, but purporting at the foot, to have been sworn before the deputy filacer, is sufficient c.

An affidavit made abroad, out of the king's dominions, is put on the Affidavit made same footing as an affidavit sworn in Scotland or Ireland; which, though not sufficient of itself to authorize an arrest, will be a good ground for applying to the court or a judge, for an order to hold the defendant to special bail d. The affidavit however, when made out of England, ought to contain all the requisites that are essential to affidavits for holding to bail in this country; and therefore, while the bank acts remained in force, it was deemed necessary to state, in an affidavit made in Ireland, for the purpose of arresting the defendant in this country, that he had not made a tender of the money in bank notes. It has been said, that where an affi- In Scotland, or davit of debt is made in Scotland or Ireland, the party verifying it must swear, "that it was made by the plaintiff; that the hand-writing subscribed thereto, is of his own hand-writing; that the said affidavit was made and taken before a magistrate, who, deponent believes, had competent authority to administer an oath; and that the hand-writing of the person subscribing the said affidavit, is the hand-writing of such magis-But in practice it is deemed sufficient, where the affidavit of debt is made in Scotland or Ireland, to swear to the hand-writing of the judge before whom it was made g: And accordingly, where an affidavit of debt contained no place in the jurat, but purported to be sworn before the Chief Justice of the King's Bench in Ireland, and to be signed by him, and such signature was verified by affidavit here, the court held, that it was a sufficient foundation for arresting the defendant, under a judge's order, on mesne process h: Though if an affidavit of debt be made abroad, out of the king's dominions, it is usual to swear to the other circumstances before stated i. An affidavit to hold to bail, on an Irish judgment, must shew the value of the sum recovered in Irish money k. And where an affidavit to hold to bail, made before a British Consul in a foreign country, stated that the defendant was indebted to the plaintiff in 100,000l. sterling, for money had and received, it was holden that the affidavit was insufficient; inasmuch as it did not appear with certainty, whether the defendant was indebted in British sterling money!. It is not settled, whether a British Consul, or Vice-Consul, resident in a foreign country, has authority, by virtue of his office, to administer an oath, for the purpose of holding a defendant to bail in this country; the judges of the King's Bench, in a late case a, being equally divided in opinion on this point.

Must be direct and positive.

Swearing to belief, when sufficient.

By executor or administrator, or assignee of bankrupt.

Co-assignee of debt.

Assignee of bond.

In point of form, the affidavit should be direct and positive, that the plaintiff has a subsisting cause of action: and therefore, if it be merely by way of argument, or reference to books or accounts, &c. or as the party making it believes, it will not in general be sufficient b. But an affidavit that the defendant is indebted to the plaintiff in such a sum, as he computes it, has been adjudged good . And in an affidavit to hold to bail, made by the plaintiff's agent, (the plaintiff himself being abroad,) the debt on a judgment being first positively sworn to, a subsequent statement that the judgment is still in force, unpaid and unsatisfied, as deponent verily believes, will not vitiate d. Where the plaintiff sues as executor or administrator, or as assignee of a bankrupt, it is sufficient for him, or a clerk of the testator', &c. to swear that the defendant is indebted, &c. as appears by books, Sc. and as he verily believes f: but even in that case, a mere reference to books, &c. unsupported by the party's belief, is not sufficiently positive g; and, in the Exchequer, an affidavit by an executor, of a debt due to his testator, "as appears by a statement made from the testator's books, by an accountant employed to investigate the same, as deponent verily believes," is insufficient to hold a defendant to special bail h. So, where the affidavit to hold to bail was made by a bankrupt, who swore that, at and before the date and suing out of the commission, the defendant was indebted to deponent, and, as he believed, was still indebted to his assignces, on a bill of exchange accepted by the defendant, indorsed by the drawer to deponent, and, as he believed, still unpaid; the court thought the affidavit insufficient i. A co-assignee of a debt, arising out of bills of exchange in his own possession, may sue in the name of the original creditor, and hold the defendant to bail on his own affidavit, swearing positively as to all the facts required which are within his own knowledge, and to the best of his knowledge and belief, as to such as are within the knowledge of his principal and co-assignees k. And where the assignee of a bond swore, that the obligor was indebted in ninety pounds, for principal and interest upon the bond, as he believed, the affidavit was deemed sufficient to hold the defendant to special bail . But it is usual, in such case, for the obligce and assignee to join in an affidavit, stating the execution of the bond, the assignment of it, and how much is due for principal and interest b. An affidavit of debt, stating that A. was in- Of debt, in debted to B. for goods sold and delivered in Holland, and that the debt was assigned to C. according to the laws of that country, and concluding with a statement that the assignee of a debt may sue the debtor according. to the laws of Holland, "as deponent is informed and believes," has been deemed sufficient to hold the defendant to bail in this country c.

It is also requisite, that the affidavit should be certain and explicit, as Must be certain, to the nature of the cause of action: Therefore, an affidavit that the defendant is indebted to the plaintiff in such a sum, without more d, or generally upon promises e, or in so much upon a bond for performance of covenants f, or upon breach of articles s, or as a balance of accounts between the parties h, has been holden to be too general. So an affidavit to For goods sold hold to bail, stating only that the defendant is indebted to the plaintiff, " for goods sold and delivered, (without saying by the plaintiff to the defendant,) and as the acceptor of a bill of exchange i," or "for goods sold and delivered (not saying by the plaintiff,) to the defendant k," or "for goods sold and delivered for the defendant'," is insufficient. And, in the King's Bench, an affidavit to hold to bail, stating that the defendant, being captain of a ship, was indebted to plaintiff, "for work and labour of plaintiff done on board the ship, and for materials found by plaintiff and used therein, and for goods sold and delivered, and money paid by plaintiff, at the request of defendant," was holden to be defective, in not stating that the work was done, or money paid for, or the goods sold to defendant m. But where it was stated in the affidavit, that the defendant was indebted, Use and occupa-" for the use and occupation of a certain dwelling house, &c. of the plaintiff, held and enjoyed by the defendant as tenant thereof," without saying that he was tenant to the plaintiff, it was deemed sufficient ". So, in the Wages, &c. Common Pleas, an affidavit to hold to bail, stating the debt to be "for money paid laid out and expended, and wages due to the plaintiff for his services on board the defendant's ship," is sufficient, without expressly stating that the wages were due from the defendant. So an affidavit to Ilire of carhold to bail, which states that the defendant is indebted to the plaintiff, for the hire of divers carriages, &c. of the plaintiff, to and for the use of the defendant, is sufficient, without stating that they were hired of the plaintiff, or by whom they were hired 2. So, it has been deemed sufficient to state, in an affidavit to hold to bail, that the defendant is indebted to the plaintiff in such a sum, "for money had and received on account of the plaintiff," without adding, that it was received by the defendant b. Money paid, &c. And, in an affidavit of debt for money paid to the use of the defendant c, or for work and labour as the defendant's servant d, it is not necessary, in the Common Pleas, to state that it was at his request; but it is otherwise in the King's Bench e. An affidavit made by a married woman, that the defendant is indebted "for the rent of lodgings, and for money lent by her to the defendant," was held sufficient; although it did not state to whom the lodgings were let, and the person making the affidavit was herself incapable of lending money; for she might have lent it as agent to her husband f. And an affidavit that R. Patten is indebted for money paid to the use of the said R. Jackson, is well enough g. But an affidavit stating the defendant to be indebted to the plaintiff, for money had and received to the use of his wife h; or that E. I. is indebted, &c. for money due from the said G. P. E. I. &c. i is insufficient. An affidavit to hold to bail on a bill of exchange, has been deemed sufficient, though it do not state in what character the plaintiff sues, whether as payee or indorsee k: And an affidavit, stating that the defendant was indebted to the plaintiff on a bill of exchange, payable to a third person, at a day now past, was deemed sufficient; without stating at what day the bill was payable, or shewing the connexion between the payee and the plaintiff 1. But an affidavit, that the defendant is indebted to the plaintiff, "as indorsce of a promissory note, or bill of exchange, made or accepted by defendant," without stating the date of the note or bill, or that it was payable on demand, or at a day past, is insufficient m: and it seems that the affidavit must state in what character the defendant is sued n. So, an affidavit stating the defendant to be indebted to the plaintiff, on a promissory note, drawn in favour of J. E. & Co. and duly indorsed to the plaintiff, has been deemed insufficient o.

On money bond, &c.

In an action on a money bond, the affidavit to hold to bail should regularly state that the defendant is indebted, &c. for principal and interest due on a bond, bearing date, &c. and made and entered into by the defendant to the plaintiff, in the penal sum, &c. conditioned for the payment

And where the affidavit stated, that the defendant was indebted, &c. in a certain sum, for principal and interest due on a bond, made by the defendant, in a greater penal sum, it was holden to be good; though it did not state the condition of the bond to be for the payment of money b. But the affidavit must shew that the bond was then due and payable; otherwise the defendant will be discharged on common bail c. And an affidavit, stating that the defendant is indebted to the plaintiff in 6000l. "upon a bond, bearing date, &c. and made and, entered into by defendant to plaintiff, in the penal sum of 25,000l." without shewing the condition of the bond, was holden insufficient; and the court discharged the defendant on common bail d. So an affidavit to hold to bail, in an action against a surety on an arbitration bond, must set out the condition, and shew that a demand of the money was made on the principal, if required by the award e.

In holding a defendant to bail for stipulated damages, for not perform- For stipulated ing an agreement, it is necessary that the affidavit should state what the agreement was, and the breach of it f. And as a party cannot be held to bail for a penalty, but only for the sum secured by it, an affidavit stating that the defendant was indebted to the plaintiff in 1000l. "under an agreement in writing, whereby the defendant undertook to pay the plaintiff the balance of accounts, &c. which balance is still due and unpaid," is insufficient, without stating that the balance was 1000le. So an affidavit, that the defendant is indebted to the plaintiff in 50l. "by virtue of an agreement, whereby he bound himself in that sum for the performance of the said agreement, and which he had neglected and refused to perform," without stating what the agreement was, or the breach of it, is not sufficienth. So an affidavit, stating that the defendant is indebted to the plaintiff in so much for interest money, under and by virtue of an agreement under the hand of the defendant i, or for his subscription as member of a certain reading club, according to the rules and regulations of the same k, is not sufficient. So, if a tenant bind himself in a penalty, for performance of repairs within a certain time, the court will not permit him to be arrested for the penalty, upon an affidavit which does not shew in what respect, and to what amount, he has violated his contract. So, where an affidavit stated, that the defendant was indebted to the plaintiff in 245l. "for money lent by plaintiff to defendant, for the use of another, and for which the defendant promised to be accountable, and repay or cause to be paid or secured to the plaintiff, &c." the defendant was discharged that the defendant was indebted to the plaintiff, upon a written agreement to marry plaintiff, at a time specified, or pay her 10004 and that he had not done either, although the time had elapsed, and plaintiff was ready and willing to marry defendant, and requested him to marry her; the court held that this was insufficient, as they can take nothing by intendment in an affidavit of debt; and here, no consideration for the defendant's promise was shewn . But, in the Common Pleas, an affidavit to hold to bail, stating the defendant to be indebted, "for damages awarded, and for costs and expenses taxed and allowed," is sufficiently certain; for it will be inferred, that the award and taxation are such as will support the ac-And, in that court, an affidavit stating that the defendant was tion b. indebted to the plaintiff, "upon and by virtue of a certain charter-party of affreightment, bearing date, &c. for and on account of the hire of a ship, let to hire by the plaintiff to the defendant, and by him taken, for a certain voyage from _____ to ____, was deemed sufficient c. So, an affidavit to hold to bail, stating that the defendant was indebted to the plaintiff, in trust for the deponent, under a deed, by which the defendant had covenanted to pay money, "at certain times, and on certain events, now past and happened," was holden to be sufficient d.

It was formerly sufficient, in order to hold to bail in trover, to make a general affidavit, that the defendant had possessed himself of divers goods and chattels of the plaintiff, of the value, &c. which he had refused to deliver to the plaintiff, and had converted the same to his own use. And to obtain a judge's order, under the late rule i, the affidavit should fully set forth the circumstances under which the defendant has possessed himself of the goods, the particulars of which they consist, and the value of them, and in what manner the defendant has converted them to his own use. In order to hold to bail in trover for a bill of exchange, it should be stated that the bill remains unpaid k. der, in bank

By the Bank acts f, which were passed during the late reign, for re- Negativing tenstraining cash payments, the affidavit to hold to bail was required to state, that no offer had been made to pay the sum sworn to, in notes of the governor and company of the Bank of England, expressed to be payable on demand, (fractional parts of the sum of 20s. only excepted g). These acts of parliament were construed to extend to affidavits made in Ireland, for the purpose of being used in this country h: And if an affidavit was made here, to be used in Ireland, it must have negatived the tender in Irish, as well as English bank notes. But the acts did not apply to the case of a defendant holden to bail in trover, which could only be done under a judge's order, on an affidavit of the circumstances i. By these acts k, "no action or suit could have been prosecuted against the governor and company of the Bank of England, during the continuance of the restriction thereby imposed on payments by the said governor and company in cash, to compel payment of any note of the said governor and company, expressed to be payable on demand, or of any note of the said governor and company, made payable otherwise than on demand, or of any sum of money whatsoever by the said governor and company, which they were willing to pay in their notes, expressed to be payable on demand." But in other cases, bank notes, if objected to, were not made a legal tender by these acts 1; though they are so considered, if not objected to at the time m.

Defect in, remedied by stat. 43 Geo. III. c. 18.

It was not necessary, however, that the affidavit should be very particular, in negativing a tender in bank notes: for, by the statute 43 Geo. III. c. 18. § 2. it was enacted, that "in case of any application to any of his majesty's courts in Westminster hall, by any person who had been or should be held to special bail, under or by virtue of any process out of such court, to be discharged upon common bail, by reason of any defect in such part of the affidavit on which he was so held to bail, as negatived or was intended to negative any offer having been made to pay the sum in such affidavit mentioned, in notes of the governor and company of the bank of England, the person or persons making such application so to be discharged, should not be entitled to such discharge, unless he she or they should at the same time make proof, by affidavit, that the whole sum of money, for which he she or they had been so held to bail, had been or was, before such holding to bail, offered to be paid, either wholly in such notes, or partly in such notes and partly in lawful money of this kingdom." This statute, however, was not intended to remedy the total omission of a clause in the affidavit, negativing a tender in bank notes, but merely to cure formal slips *. And, by the statute 59 Geo. III. c. 49. § 1. the restrictions on payments in cash, under the several bank acts, finally ceased and determined on the first day of May 1823: So that it is no longer necessary to negative a tender of the debt in bank notes, in an affidavit to hold to bail.

No longer necessary.

Lastly, it is a general rule, that the affidavit to hold to bail should be single: and therefore if it contain two or more different causes of complaint, that cannot be joined in the same action, either at the suit of one or several plaintiffs b, or against one c or several d defendants, it is irregular, and the courts on motion will set aside the proceedings c.

Affidavit must be single.

If there be no affidavit, or the affidavit be defective <sup>f</sup>, or materially different from the process <sup>g</sup> or declaration <sup>g</sup>, or not duly filed <sup>h</sup>, or if the sum sworn to be not indorsed on the writ <sup>i</sup>, the court will discharge the defendant upon common bail. But if the affidavit be merely informal, the defendant cannot object to it, after he has voluntarily given a bail-bond <sup>k</sup>, put in <sup>1</sup> or perfected <sup>m</sup> bail above, taken the declaration out of the office <sup>n</sup>, pleaded to the action 3, or let judgment go by default b. And it is a rule Court will not in the King's Bench, that when the affidavit to hold to bail is regular, the court will not go out of it, or prejudge the cause, by entering into the merits upon which it is founded. The plaintiff therefore, in that court, must stand or fall by his affidavit; it being the constant and uniform practice of the court, in cases of arrest, not to receive a supplemental or explanatory affidavit on the part of the plaintiff, nor a counter or contradictory one on the part of the defendant d. Even an affidavit of the plaintiff's confession, that the defendant owes him nothing, will not be received. This practice however must be understood with reference to the merits of the cause; it being competent to the defendant to shew by a counter affidavit, that he was privileged from arrest, or had been before holden to bail in this country, for the same cause of action f.

Supplemental or contradictory ashdavit, in K. B.

In the Common Pleas, where the affidavit to hold to bail is defective, In C. P. by reason of the omission of some circumstance necessary to complete it, as where it is not sworn, in an affidavit made by an executor, that he believes the debt to be due g, or that the defendant acknowledged an account stated h, &c. the court will permit the deficiency to be supplied by a supplemental affidavit. And so, where the matter of bail is discretionary, as in an action for a malicious prosecution i, &c. the court, in determining whether an order shall be granted for special bail, will permit a contradictory affidavit to be read on the part of the defendant. But where the affidavit is a mere nullity, as being made by a person convicted of felony k, or does not contain any positive oath, or cause of action m, the court will not receive a supplemental affidavit: nor will they try the merits of the cause on a contradictory one, except in cases where the matter of bail is discretionary n. In the Exchequer, if there be probable ground to suspect that the securities upon which the defendant is held to bail are illegal, the court, it is said, will discharge him upon filing common bail o.

The sciendant may be arrested, on the first or any subsequent prothe suing out thereon. But an affidavit made more than a year before the suing out of the writ, is not sufficient to authorize an arrest, in the King's Bench; for the act requires an oath of a subsisting debt, at the time of suing out the process; and after a year, it will be presumed that the debt has been paid, if nothing appear to the contrary b. It is therefore necessary that a new affidavit should be made, before a writ is sued out, when more than a year has elapsed since the making of the former affidavit.

New one, when necessary.

Privilege from

Having thus shewn for what cause of action, and upon what affidavit, the defendant may be arrested, and held to special bail, it will next be proper to consider the privilege from arrest; which is personal, temporary, or local: and either existed at common law, or was created by act of parliament.

Of the sovereign, and his servants.

Where the defendant is not subject to a capias, he cannot of course be arrested and held to special bail. Thus, in the first place, not to mention the sovereign, it is holden that the servants in ordinary of the king, or queen regent, though subject to a capias, ought not to be arrested, even upon process of execution d, without notice first given to, and leave obtained from the lord chamberlain of his majesty's household e: And a servant of this nature is not liable to be arrested, although the debt be contracted in the course of trade, which he publicly carries on f. But the servants of a queen consort or dowager have no such privilege g. And as the privilege is confined to the king's servants in ordinary with fee, in regard of their attendance on his person, it has been determined, that a gentleman of the king's privy chamber h, or the fort major or deputy governor of the tower of London i, is not privileged from arrest. So, where one of the wardens of the tower, on being arrested, claimed his privilege, but afterwards executed a bail-bond, the court refused to order it to be delivered up to be cancelled k. The king hath moreover a special prerogative, (which indeed is very seldom exerted,) that he may, by his nrit of protection, privilege a defendant from all personal and many real suits, for one year at a time, and no longer, in respect of his being engaged in his service out of the realm. And the king also, by the common law, might take his debtor into his protection, so that no one might sue or arrest him, till the king's debt were paid: but by the statute 25 Edw. III. stat. 5. c. 19. notwithstanding such protection, another creditor may proceed to judgment against him, with a stay of execution till the king's debt be paid; unless such creditor will undertake for the king's debt, and then he shall have execution for both a.

By the law of nations, as declared by the statute 7 Ann. c. 12. Ambassadors Ambassadors, and other public ministers b, are privileged from arrest; as: vants. are also their domestic servants; it being enacted by the above statute, that "all writs and process against the person or goods of an ambassador, " or other public minister of a foreign prince or state, or the domestic ser-" vant of such ambassador or public minister, shall be utterly null and " void, to all intents and purposes whatsoever." But a consul is not considered as a public minister, nor consequently privileged from arrest c. And it has been adjudged d, that a defendant claiming the benefit of this act, as domestic servant to a public minister, must be really and bona fide his servant, at the time of the arrest e; and must clearly shew by affidavit, the general nature of his service, the actual performance of it, and that he was not a trader or object of the bankrupt laws f. For, by the laws of nations, a public minister cannot protect a person who is not bond fide his servant. It is the law that gives the protection: and though the process of the law shall not take a bona fide servant out of the service of a public minister, yet, on the other hand, a public minister shall not take a person, who is not bond fide his servant, out of the custody of the law, or screen him from the payment of his just debts's. So, where the servant of an ambassador did not reside in his master's house, but rented and lived in another, part of which he let in lodgings; the court held, that his goods in that house, not being necessary for the convenience of the ambassador, were liable to be distrained for poor rates h. the wife of an ambassador's secretary was arrested, upon a writ issued against her and her husband, the court refused to quash the writ, though the husband swore that, before and at the time of the arrest, he was in the actual employment of the ambassador, and in daily attendance upon him, in writing dispatches, and other official documents; it not being sworn, that he was a domestic servant, or employed in the ambassador's house i.

This privilege, however, has been long settled to extend to the servants of a public minister, being natives of the country where he resides, as well as to his foreign servants k; and not only to servants lying in his house, for many houses are not large enough to contain and lodge all the servants of some public ministers, but also to real and actual servants lying out of his house. Nor is it necessary, to entitle them to the privilege, that their names should have been registered in the secretary of state's office, and transmitted to the sheriff's office b; though, unless they have been so registered and transmitted, the sheriff or his officers cannot be proceeded against for arresting them c. And it is not to be expected, that every particular act of service should be specified: 'Tis enough, if an actual bond fide service be proved: and if such a service be sufficiently made out by affidavit, the court will not, upon bare suspicion, suppose it to have been merely colourable and collusive d.

Peers, and peer-esses.

By the common law, Peers of the realm of Englande, and Pecresses, whether by birth or marriage f, are constantly privileged from arrest in civil suits, on account of their dignity, and because they are supposed to have sufficient property, by which they may be compelled to appear: which privilege is extended, by the act of union with Scotland's, to Scotch peers and peoresses; and, by the act of union with Ireland h, to Irish peers and peeresses. And they are not liable to be attached, for the non-payment of money, pursuant to an order of nisi prius, which has been made a rule of court i. But this privilege will not exempt them from attachments, for not obeying the process of the courts k; nor does it extend to pecresses by marriage, if they afterwards intermarry with commoners 1. And though the servanis of peers, necessarily employed about their persons and estates, could not formerly have been arrested m, yet this privilege seems to have been taken away by the statute 10 Geo. III. c. 50. § 1 n. Where a capias issues against a pecr, the court will set aside the proceedings for irregularity o: But it seems, that the sheriff is not a trespasser for executing it P. And the court will not, on motion, cancel a bail-bond, given by a person claiming to be an Irish peer, unless his peerage be clearly made out q.

And where a woman, who had given a warrant of attorney, married during the term, and was afterwards taken in execution, on a judgment signed as of that term, and therefore having relation to the first day of the term, it was holden that she could not be relieved f. an action against the wife only, if it be clear and notorious that she is covert, the court will discharge her out of custody, upon her own affidavit of the fact, which must be positively sworn to s, and that her husband is alive; or, if she has given a bail-bond, will order it to be delivered up to be cancelled, on filing common bail, or entering a common appearance h; unless she has deceived the plaintiff, by representing herself to be a feme sole . And common bail was ordered, in a case where the plaintiff, at the time of giving credit to the defendant, knew that she was a married woman, though living apart from her husband, with a separate maintenance k. So where a feme covert, separated from her husband by a sentence of divorce a mensa et thoro, was holden to bail, while an appeal was still pending against the sentence, the court, on motion, ordered the bailbond to be cancelled, on her entering a common appearance 1. to entitle a feme-covert to her discharge, it is not necessary that her coverture should be known to the plaintiff; nor is it sufficient to prevent it, that she has appeared and acted as a feme sole, and obtained credit in that character, unless she represented herself to be single m. of the coverture be doubtful, or the defendant has obtained credit by imposing herself on the plaintiff as a feme sole, she must find special bail, and plead her coverture, or bring a writ of error . And the court of Common Pleas refused to discharge a defendant on the ground of coverture, she being a foreigner, and her husband abroad; though she was not separated from him by deed, had no separate maintenance, nor had ever represented herself as a single woman b. So that court would not, upon a summary application, cancel the bail-bond, and permit the defendant to enter a common appearance, where a great part of the debt sued for was contracted before she disclosed her coverture, and it appeared that she had acted with great duplicity in cluding payment, and, at the time of the application, was residing out of the jurisdiction of the court. But where a married woman had been arrested as acceptor of a bill of exchange, at the suit of an administratrix, to whose intestate the bill was indorsed, the court ordered the bail-bond to be delivered up to be cancelled, on an affidavit that the drawer and intestate knew, at the time the bill was drawn accepted and indorsed, that the defendant was married . If a plaintiff knowingly arrest a married woman, the ourt of Common Pleas will make him pay the costs of the motion for her discharge s: And, in the Exchequer, the court would not order a fems covert to pay costs, nor impose any terms, on her being discharged, although it was sworn that she was carrying on business on her own separate account, and that the action was brought for goods furnished to her in the way of her trade h.

OF THE PRIVILEGE

without a subnana. Nor have the courts been nice in scanning this priviloge; but have given it a large and liberal construction. Thus a plaintiff, who was attending from day to day at the sittings, in expectation of his cause being tried, was held to be privileged from arrest, whilst waiting for that purpose at a coffee house in the vicinity of the court, before the actual day of trial b. And where the defendant was attending his cause at the sittings, and though it was put off early in the day, stayed in court till five in the afternoon, and then went with his attorney and witnesses to dine at a tavern, where he was arrested during dinner; the court held, that such a necessary refreshment as this ought not to be looked upon as a deviation, so as to cancel the defendant's privilege redeundo. So where a witness, having attended a trial at Winchester assizes, which was over on Friday about four in the afternoon, was arrested on Saturday about seven in the evening, as she was going home in a coach to Portsmouth, the court held that she ought to be discharged, her protection not being expired; and that a little deviation or loitering would not alter it d. There is indeed a case in the year books e, where a man was arrested in a town, which was forty miles out of his way, and yet was allowed his privilege; for perhaps, it is said, he went there to buy a horse, or other necessaries for his journey. But the sheriff, not being bound to take notice of the privilege of a witness, is not liable to an action of false imprisonment for arresting him, when privileged redeundo from attending the court f. where an attorney had been attending a cause at the Middlesex sittings in term, which was put off to the adjournment day, after which he went with his witnesses to a coffee house, where he was arrested, three hours after the rising of the court, on an attachment for non-payment of money, the court held that an attorney was not to be allowed so long a time to speak to his witnesses on such an occasion, before he went home; and that he was properly taken s. In the same case, the attorney having been discharged, on payment of the money for which the attachment issued, was taken in exccution at the door of the court, as he was going away; and the court held, that as he was decided to have been in legal custody, he was not entitled to any privilege redeundo.

Bail, &c.

Persons attending arbitrators. The privilege we are speaking of has been holden to extend to all persons who have any relation to a cause, which calls for their attendance in court, and who attend in the course of that cause, though not compelled by process; such as bail, &c h. And it has been determined, that the party to a cause is privileged from arrest for debt, during his attendance on an arbitration, under an order of nisi prius, made a rule of court i; or on the execution of a writ of inquiry 2. So, the summons of an arbitrator, to whom a cause has been referred by order of the court of Chancery, protects a party from arrest, under process of the court of King's Bench, whilst employed in bond fide obedience to the summons b. But where a party residing in London, was summoned to attend an arbitrator at Exeter, and required to bring with him certain papers then at Cufton, and he went to the latter place, where all his papers were, to make a selection, and having stayed there more than twenty four hours for that purpose and necessary refreshment, was arrested; a majority of the judges of the court of King's Bench held, that he was not entitled to be discharged out of custody, having no right to stop and sort his papers b. It is likewise holden, that all persons attending under the summons of commissioncrs of bankrupt, are protected from arrest c: And a witness attending commissioners, in order to tender his testimony upon a subject of inquiry before them, without having been summoned for that purpose, is privileged from arrest during such attendance, and in returning d. But the When not pricourt of King's Bench would not discharge a person in custody, by process of the sheriff's court, in a cause afterwards removed into the King's Bench, because he was arrested while attending commissioners of bankrupt, to prove a debt c. A witness is not privileged from arrest by his bail, on his return from giving evidence f: And where he has absconded from his bail, he may be retaken by them, even during his attendance in court s. So, a capital burgess of a borough, attending an election of co-burgesses, under a summons from the mayor, issued in obedience to a mandamus, directing the corporation to proceed to such election, is not privileged from arrest, during his attendance there for that purpose h. If a party be arrested, in coming to attend the trial of his cause, the judge at nisi prius will grant a habeas corpus to discharge him; and will put off the trial until he is released. So, where a witness from the country, on his arrival in London, for the purpose of giving evidence in a cause which stands for trial during the sittings, is arrested for debt, the proper course for obtaining his discharge, is to bring him before a judge at chambers, by writ of habeas corpus k. A similar privilege is allowed, by the annual mutiny and murine acts a, to volunteer soldiers, who are not liable to be taken out of his majesty's service, by any process or execution whatsoever, other than for some criminal matter, unless for a real debt, or other just cause of action; and unless, before the taking out of such process or execution, (not being for a criminal matter,) an affidavit shall be made as before mentioned, that the original sum justly due and owing to the plaintiff or plaintiffs, from the defendant or defendants in the action, or cause of action on which such process shall issue, or the original debt for which such execution shall be sued out, amounts to the value of twenty pounds at least, over and above all costs of suit in the same action, or in any other action on which the same shall be grounded.

These acts have been construed to extend not merely to common soldiers, and troopers b in the life guards, &c. but also to non-commissioned or warrant officers, as gunners c, serjeants, and drummers d: For a ser*jeant* is a soldier with a halbert; and a drummer is a soldier with a drum c. These acts, however, do not extend to commissioned officers; nor to the case of soldiers imprisoned for disobeying orders of justices f, or on any other criminal accounts. And if a non-commissioned officer has been arrested and given bail, the court of Common Pleas will not, after judgment recovered against the bail, set aside the proceedings, and cancel the bailbond h. It should also be observed, that volunteer drill serjeants, &c. though subject to the regulations of the mutiny act, so far as relates to trial and punishment by volunteer courts martial, according to the statute 44 Geo. III. c. 54. § 21. are not privileged from arrest, for debts under 201. as regular soldiers i.

Privilege of bankrupts from arrest.

In coming to surrender, &c. by stat. 5 Geo. II. c. 30.

Determinations on that statute.

" and also to award the party so complaining raticly costs as such judge from judges shall think reasonable; for the recovery whereofold shall " have the like remedy, that the person who takes out the said execution might have had for his costs, or the plaintiff in the like action might "have had for the recovery of his costs, in case judgment had been given " for him with costs, against the defendant in the said action " ."

By other acts of parliament b, for the speedy and effectual recruiting of his majesty's land forces and marines, "no person, listed by virtue of "those acts, shall be liable to be taken out of his majesty's service, by "any process, other than for some criminal matter." But these latter acts were only meant to privilege such persons as were compelled to serve against their will c; or rather to prevent their being taken out of the service, by means of feigned actions.

The privilege of bankrupts from arrest may be considered in a threefold point of view: first, as it respects the time allowed them for coming to surrender, and finishing their examination; secondly, after the time allowed for these purposes is expired, and before they have obtained their cartificates; and thirdly, after they have obtained their certificates.

By the statute 5 Geo. II. c. 30. § 5. bankrupts, who were not previously in custody, were exempted from the arrest of their creditors, in coming to surrender; and from their actual surrender, for the two and forty days mentioned in the act d, or such further time as should be allowed for finishing their examination: which privilege was allowed in all cases, except that of a surrender in discharge of bail. On this statute it was holden, that the surrender of the bankrupt to the commissioners, at a private meeting, entitled him to the benefit of this privilege f; and it extended to the end of the forty second day g, and afterwards, if the bankrupt surrendered within two and forty days, to the end of the enlarged time allowed by the commissioners, or the lord chancellor, in pursuance of the statute 5 Geo. II. c. 30. § 3 h. But commissioners of bankrupt were not authorized by that statute, to enlarge the time, for an indefinite period, in order to enable a bankrupt to make a full disclosure of his estate and effects i. Where a bankrupt, whose last examination had been adjourned sine die, gave his voluntary attendance before the commissioners, in order to be examined at a meeting under his commission for a distinct purpose, and was there arrested, the chancellor held him to be entitled to his discharge k. So it was holden, that a bankrupt attending the hearing of a petition for leave to surrender, after the time had expired, was privileged from arrest, as a party attending his own cause 1. So, a bankrupt attending, upon notice for that purpose, a meeting of the commissioners, to declare a dividend of his estate, was protected from arrest, at the shit of a creditor, during such attendances although several years after his last examination. And where a hankrupt was arrested on a writ of extend while actually attending to give evidence before commissioners of bankrupt, the chancelfor discharged him, as being privileged from arrest at common law b. But as the king was not bound by the statute 5 Geo. II. c. 30. it was holden, that a bankrupt was not entitled to be discharged by virtue of that statute, when arrested on a writ of extent, during the time of privilege. It should also be observed, that the privilege we are now speaking of, is a particular privilege, to enable bankrupts to surrender, and till their actual surrender, is confined to the act of going with that view; not a general privilege, during the whole time which the act of parliament allows them for that purposed. And they may be taken, in order to be surrendered by their bail, at any time; even during their examination before the commissioners. So where a bankrupt, having escaped out of the custody of the marshal, and being at large, surrendered to a commission subsequently issued, and received the protection conferred by the statute; the court held, that he might notwithstanding be retaken, and detained in custody by the marshal f.

At present, the privilege of bankrupts from arrest, in coming to sur- By stat. 6 Geo. render, &c. depends on the statute 6 Geo. This provision being similar in substance to that of 5 Geo. II. c. 30. § 5. the decisions on the latter statute, which have been already stated i, will of course be applicable thereto.

Proceedings, when bankrupt is in prison.

When a bankrupt is in prison, or in custody, under any process, attachment, execution, commitment, or sentence, the commissioners are authorized by the statute 6 Geo. IV. c. 16 b. " by warrant under their hands, " directed to the person in whose custody such bankrupt is confined, to " cause such bankrupt to be brought before them, at any meeting, either " public or private; and if any such bankrupt is desirous to surrender, he shall be so brought up, and the expense thereof shall be paid out of his " estate good such person shall be indemnified by the warrant of the " commissioners, for bringing up such bankrupt; provided that the as-"signees may appoint any persons to attend such bankrupt from time to " time, and to produce to him his books, papers and writings, in order to " prepare an abstract of his accounts, and a statement to shew the par-" ticulars of his estate and effects, previous to his final examination and " discovery thereof; a copy of which abstract and statement, the said " bankrupt shall deliver to them, ten days at the least before his last ex-" amination."

Privilege from arrest, after time for surrendering, &c. expired, and before certificate.

When the time of privilege allowed to the bankrupt, in coming to surrender, and for finishing his examination, has expired, he is liable to be arrested, till he has obtained his certificate, for debts contracted previous to the date and issuing of the commission, and not proved or claimed under it. And the court would not discharge a defendant out of custody on common bail, on the ground that the plaintiffs, at whose suit he was arrested, were assignees under a commission of bankrupt, sued out above three years before, against the defendant, under which they had received dividends; though they suspended the execution of the rule on the sheriff to bring in the body, to give the defendant time to make application to the lord chancellor for relief. So, where the plaintiff had petitioned for a sequestration in Scotland against the defendant, this was holden not to be a sufficient cause for discharging him on common bail d. drawer of a bill of exchange, who has paid the amount to the holder, after a commission of bankrupt issued against the acceptor, may sue the latter, before he has obtained his certificate, and arrest him upon the bill, notwithstanding the holder has proved it under the commission e. similar clause, in stat. 49 Geo.

In the construction of a similar clause, in the statute 49 Geo. III. c. Decisions on 121 b. it has been holden, that the words of the statute must be taken to relate to cases where a party, who has proved under a commission, arrests the same person under whose commission he has proved: Therefore, where separate commissions of bankruptcy had been issued against three of four partners, to which they conformed and passed their examinations, and an order was made for allowing the joint creditors to prove their debts under the commission of one of the three bankrupts, under which commission the plaintiffs proved their joint debt, and afterwards sued all the partners for the same debt, and arrested one of the other two, under whose commission they had not proved; the court held, that he was not entitled to be discharged out of custody c. The election also is confined to the debt actually proved: Therefore, where two parcels of goods were sold at different times, and paid for by bills, and the vendce afterwards becoming bankrupt, the vendors proved under the commission, for the amount of the first parcel, for which they still held the bill of exchange; and the bill for the other parcel having been negotiated by them prior postlie bankruptcy, and being then outstanding, was afterwards dishonoured i the court held, that the vendors were not precluded by the above statute, from suing the hankrupt for the amount of the last parcel of goods . And the proof of a debt under the commission, cannot be pleaded in bar to an action brought for its recovery; though it may be a ground for the defendant to apply to the court in which the action is brought, to stay the proceedings, or to the chancellor, to expunge the debt b. But it seems that the proving of a debt under a commission, is an election by the creditor, within the statute 49 Geo. III. c. 121. § 14. which deprives him of his remedy by action against the bankrupt, in the cases excepted by the statute 5 Geo. II. c. 30. § 9°. And where the plaintiff, in an action against a bankrupt, makes his election to proceed under the commission, the defendant is entitled to have some entry or suggestion, recording the election, put on the record d.

Debts proveable under commis-

In general.

Debts payable on a future day.

After a bankrupt has obtained his certificate, his privilege from arrest principally depends on the statute 6 Geo. IV. c. 16°. by which it is enatted, that "every bankrupt who shall have duly surrendered, and "In all things conformed himself to the laws in force concerning bank-" rupts, at the time of issuing the commission against him, shall be dis-" charged from all debts due by him when he became bankrupt, and from " all claims and demands thereby made proveable under the commission, " in case he shall obtain a certificate of such conformity, so signed and " allowed, and subject to such provisions, as thereinafter directed: but " no such certificate shall release or discharge any person who was partner " with such bankrupt, at the time of his bankruptcy, or who was then " jointly bound, or had made any joint contract with such bankrupt f." The bankrupt being discharged, by the above statute, from all debts proveable under the commission, it may not be deemed an improper digression to consider, in the next place, what debts may or may not be proved under it. By that statute g, "every person with whom any bank-"rupt shall have really and bona fide contracted any debt or demand 46 before the issuing of the commission against him, shall, notwithstanding " any prior act of bankruptcy committed by such bankrupt, be admitted " to prove the same, and be a creditor under such commission, as if no "such act of bankruptcy had been committed; provided such person had " not, at the time the same was contracted, notice of any act of bank-" ruptcy by such bankrupt committed." And, with regard to debts payable on a future day, "any person who shall have given credit to the " bankrupt upon valuable consideration, or for any money or other matter " or thing whatsoever, which shall not have become payable, when such " bankrupt committed an act of bankruptcy, and whether such credit shall have been given upon any bill, bond, note, or other negotiable se-

Previously to the above statute, contingent debts, not due at the time of issuing the commission, were not in general proveable under it i and therefore, where the action was founded upon a recognizance of bail in error b, or bail-bond c, or on a bond given by a member of parliament, being a trader, under the statute 4 Geo. III. c. 33. § 1 d. which was not forfeited at the time of issuing the commission, or upon a promise of indemnity which was then unbroken e, or upon a promissory note subsequently indorsed by the bankrupt f, he might have been arrested thereon, notwithstanding his certificate. So, where the obligor in a bastardy bond, after the bond had been forfeited, became bankrupt, and obtained his certificate, the court held, that the parish officers were not precluded thereby from recovering upon the bond, further expenses incurred subsequent to the bankruptcy g. But now, by the 6 Geo. IV. c. 16h, "if a When proveable " bankrupt shall, before the issuing of the commission, have contracted " any debt payable upon a contingency which shall not have happened be-" fore the issuing of such commission, the person with whom such debt " has been contracted may, if he think fit, apply to the commissioners, " to set a value upon such debt, and the commissioners are thereby re-" quired to ascertain the value thereof, and to admit such person to prove " the amount so ascertained, and to receive dividends thereon; or if such " value shall not be so ascertained, before the contingency shall have hap-" pened, then such person may, after such contingency shall have hap-" pened, prove in respect of such debt, and receive dividend with the " other creditors, not disturbing any former dividends; provided such " person had not, when such debt was contracted, notice of an act of " bankruptcy, by such bankrupt committed."

This statute, however, is confined to debts payable on a contingency: When not And therefore, where the demand rests in damages, and cannot be ascer-

B. or the defendant, was paid by the plaintiff; and on June 20th, the defendant obtained his certificate under a commission of bankrupt; the court held, that his certificate did not discharge him from the amount of the premiumb. So, where an action is brought for the recovery of general damages, and the defendant becomes bankrupt between verdict and judgment, he is not discharged by his certificate c. But where the plaintiff in an action of trespass, having obtained a verdict, signed final judgment after the defendant had committed an act of bankruptcy, but before the issuing of the commission; the court held, that the debt was proveable under a commission subsequently issued, and that the defendant, who had been arrested on a capias ad satisfaciendum, was entitled to be discharged, on obtaining his certificate d. So where the plaintiff, in an action of assumpsit, obtained a verdict against the defendant on the 4th June; and on the 18th June, judgment was signed as of Trinity term, which commenced on the 7th of that month; and on the 15th June, a commission of bankrupt issued against the defendant, on an act of bankruptcy committed on the 7th May preceding; the court held, that at the time of issuing the commission, the plaintiff had a debt proveable under

Before the making of the statute 49 Geo. III. c. 121. a surety, or person liable for the debt of another, could not have come in and proved the debt, under a commission issued against the principal, unless it had been paid before the issuing of the commission: nor could the grantee of an annuity have proved the value of it as a debt under the commission issued against the grantor, unless the annuity had been secured by bond, which was forfeited by non-payment of the arrears, before the bank-ruptcy s: and consequently an action might have been maintained in these cases, notwithstanding the certificate, for the money paid, or arrears of the annuity, after the issuing of the commission; in which the defendant might have been arrested and held to special bail. These defects were remedied by the above statute by which it was enacted, that in all cases of commissions of bankrupt thereafter to be issued, where, at the time of issuing the commission, any person should be surety for, or be liable for any debt of the bankrupt, it should be lawful for such surety or per-

This branch of the statute was extended to all cases of sureties, where 'Determinations relief could be had under the commission, though the money was not paid till after it issued a. And the certificate was holden to be a bar, not only to an action, at the suit of a surety, for the recovery of money paid in discharge of the original debt, but to any action for consequential damages, accruing from the non-payment by the bankrupt of such debt when due: Therefore, where the acceptor of an accommodation bill brought an action against the drawer, who had become bankrupt and obtained his certificate, for not providing him with funds to pay the bill when due, whereby he had incurred the costs of an action, and was obliged to sell an estate in order to raise money to pay the bill, the certificate was holden to be a good bar to such action. the drawer of a bill of exchange, who has paid the amount to the holder, after a commission of bankruptcy issued against the acceptor, may, we

him under the bill, notwithstanding the holder has proved it under the commission. And where a surety in a warrant of attorney, in order to discharge himself from personal liability, paid part of the debt due to the creditor of a bankrupt who had proved under the commission; and thereupon satisfaction was entered on the record, the court held, that this did not fall within the statute 49 Geo. III. c. 121. § 8. as being a payment of part of a debt in discharge of the whole, and consequently that the bankrupt's certificate was no bar to an action by the surety, to recover the money so paid by him b. So, a surety in an annuity deed, who had been compelled by the annuity creditor, after the bankruptcy and allowance of the certificate of the principal, toppay several sums for arrears due after the issuing of the commission, was holden not to be within the statute 49 Geo. III. c. 121. § 8.; and therefore might have an action against the principal for such suchs, and hold him to bail c. And such surety was not entitled, by that statute, to prove the value of the annuity as a debt under the commission: and therefore, where such a surety had redeemed the annuity, subsequently to the bankruptcy, it was holden, that he was entitled to maintain an action for the value against the bankrupt, who had obtained his certificate, although the grantee had proved under the 17th section d. And where an action is brought for the recovery of a debt due before the bankruptcy, the bankrupt is discharged by his certificate, from the payment of interest and costs b, as well as the debt; and that, whether the action was brought before, or after the issuing of the commission; and if before, whether the bankruptcy happened before verdict d, or after verdict and before final judgment c. And a certificate will discharge a cognovit, given after a secret act of bankruptcy, for a debt previously due, with interest and costs . So where, on a commission of bankrupt being sued out against the plaintiff, he brought an action of trespass against the commissioners for false imprisonment, and was nonsuited, and they entered up judgment accordingly, and the commission was afterwards superseded, on which another was sued out, founded on the same act of bankruptcy as the first, under which the plaintiff obtained his certificate, and the defendants afterwards charged him in execution for the costs of the nonsuit, the court of Common Pleas held, that he was entitled to be discharged out of custody; as such costs were proveable under the second commission s. And, by the statute 6 Geo. But where the plaintiff is nonsuited, or has a verdict against him k, and afterwards becomes bankrupt before judgment, the costs, not being proveable under the commission, are not barred by his certificate. And where a bankrupt, sued as executor, pleaded a false plea, between the issuing of the commission and the obtaining of his certificate, he was holden to be liable to costs for such plea, de bonis propriis. So, the costs of a suit in Chancery, directed to be paid by an award, made before the bankruptcy of the defendant, but which costs were not taxed till after he became bankrupt, cannot be proved under the commission; but the bankrupt remains liable to be attached for the nonpayment of them m.

And in a late case it was holden, that a certificate is no bar to an attachment for the nonpayment of costs, pursuant to a rule of court made before the bankruptcy, but which were not taxed until the day of issuing the commission .

The bankrupt laws do not extend to debts contracted in foreign coun- Certificate when tries: And where the plaintiff resided here, the court would not order an exoneretur to be entered on the bail-piece, on the ground that the debt abroad. was contracted while the defendant was resident in a foreign country, and ' before he became a bankrupt by the laws of that country, though he might have obtained his certificate there b. But an insolvent's certificate, obtained in Nenfoundland, under the statute 49 Geo. III. c. 27. § 8. may be pleaded in bar to an action brought in this country, for a debt contracted here prior to the insolvency c. And a debt contracted in England, by a trader residing in Scotland, is barred by a discharge under a sequestration issued in conformity to the statute 54 Geo. III. c. 137. in like manner as debts contracted in Scotland d. So a certificate, obtained under an Irish commission of bankruptcy, has been holden to be a bar to an action brought in this country, for a demand arising upon a bill of exchange drawn in Ireland, and payable by the defendant who resided But a bill of exchange drawn by the defendant in Ireland, and accepted and paid by the plaintiffs in England," is a debt contracted in England, and cannot therefore be discharged by a certificate under an Irish commission f.

Bankrupt how discharged by certificate.

Disputing validity of commission, &c.

Privilege of insolvent debtors, and fugitives, from arrest, under occasional acts.

When a lankrupt is clearly entitled to the benefit of his certificate, he may be discharged in two ways: 1st, by pleading his certificate, if in time; and secondly, by applying to a judge, on an afficiavit of the certificate, under the statute 6 Geo. IV. c. 16 b. by which it is enacted, that " any bankrupt who shall, after his certificate shall have been allowed, " be arrested for any debt, claim or demand, thereby made proveable un-" der the commission, against such bankrupt, shall be discharged upon common bail: And if any such bankrupt shall be taken in execution, or " detained in prison for such debt, claim or demand, where judgment has been obtained before the allowance of his certificate, it shall be lawful " for any judge of the court wherein judgment shall have been so ob-" tained, on such bankrupt producing his certificate, to order any officer " who shall have such bankrupt in custody by virtue of such execution, to " discharge such bankrupt, without exacting any fee; and such officer " shall be thereby indemnified for so doing." But where the commission c, or certificate d, appears to have been fraudulent, or unduly obtained, the court will not discharge the defendant upon common bail. And where the validity of the commission is disputed, the court it seems will in general direct it to be tried on a feigned issue, notwithstanding the certificate, before they discharge the defendant e. But where the defendant in an action had become bankrupt, and obtained his certificate, after which proceedings were taken against the bail, the court of King's Bench relieved them on motion, without directing an issue to try the fact of the bankrupt's being a trader; the certificate, by the statute 5 Geo. II. c. 30. § 7 & 13 f. being made sufficient evidence of the trading, &c.g The court of Common Pleas would not formerly have relieved a bankrupt, in a summary way, where his goods were taken in execution under a fieri facias, after he had obtained his certificate; and therefore if he had not obtained his certificate in time, so as to plead it, he must have brought an audila querela h: But in a modern case, where a fieri facias issued against the goods of a bankrupt, before he had obtained his certificate, and was not exocuted till after, the court ordered the goods to be restored; for it is now the practice to give that relief in a summary way, which might be obtained by audita querela 1.

charged under the 41 Geo. III. c. 70. could not have been holden to bail, on a bill drawn and indorsed over by him, previous to the 1st March, 1803, though not due till after that period s. But insolvent debtors and When liable to fugitives, discharged under occasional insolvent acts, were formerly liable to be arrested, for debts contracted after the time prescribed in the acts, and before they were actually discharged b. And the clauses respecting fugitives, in those acts, did not extend to persons who had constantly resided abroade; or who had been abroad merely in the course of their trade, and not for the purpose of avoiding their creditors d. A debt depending upon a contingency, at the time of a party's discharge under the insolvent act, 18 Geo. III. c. 52. was not thereby discharged c. So, a party discharged under the 51 Geo. III. c. 125. was holden to be liable to his surety for the arrears of an annuity, due since his discharge, which the surety had been obliged to pay f. And the obligors in a bastardy bond, discharged under the general insolvent act, I Geo. IV. c. 119. subsequently to a judgment on the bond, were deemed liable for expenses incurred, in respect of the bastard, subsequently to their discharge s. But where a party had joined in a bond with the grantor of an annuity, to secure the payment of it, and afterwards obtained his discharge under the insolvent act, having duly inserted the bond in his schedule, the court held, that he could not be arrested upon the bond, for arrears of the annuity afterwards becoming due h. In the King's Bench, it has been determined, On subsequent that an insolvent who has taken the benefit of the 54 Geo. III. c. 28. is not liable to be arrested, upon a subsequent promise, to pay a debt contracted prior to the day mentioned in the act i; though it has been otherwise ruled in the Common Pleas k. And, in the latter court, a cognovit given by an insolvent after his discharge, upon proceedings commenced before, has been deemed to constitute a new promise, upon which he becomes liable, notwithstanding his discharge.

Previously to the above act, where a defendant was ordered by the insolvent debtors' court to remain in custody, at the suit of certain creditors by name, until sixteen months had expired, and was found at large within six months; the court held, under the statute 3 Geo. IV. c. 123. that any of his scheduled creditors, though not named in the order, might arrest him, and cause him to be confined, until the sixteen menths were expired b.

Effect of dis-

Mode of relief.

The effect of the discharge of an insolvent debtor is declared, and mode of relieving him when arrested pointed out, by the statute 7 Geo. IV. c. 57.c, by which it is enacted, that "no person who shall have become entitled to the benefit of that act, by any such adjudication as aforesaid, shall, at any time thereafter be imprisoned, by reason of the judgment so as aforesaid entered up against him or her, according to that act, or for or by reason of any debt or sum of money, or costs, with respect to which such person shall have become so entitled, or for or by reason of any judgment, decree or order for payment of the same; but that upon every arrest or detainer in prison, upon any such judgment so entered upon aforesaid, or for or by reason of any such debt or sum of money, or costs, or judgment decree or order for payment of the same, it shall and may be lawful for any judge of the court from which any process that have issued in respect thereof, and such judge is thereby required, and more process is satisfaction, that the cause of such arrest or de-

" such judge shall in his discretion think fit, it shall and may be lawful " for him to order such minitiff, or any person or persons suing out such " process, to pay such prisoner the costs which he or she shall have in-" curred on such occasion, or so much thereof as to such judge shall seem " just and reasonable, such prisoner causing a common appearance to be " entered for him or her in such action or suit." Where a party is arrested for a debt for which he has been discharged under the insolvent act, and gives bail, the court will order the bail bond to be delivered up to be cancelled. But though certificated bankrupts, or persons discharged under insolvent acts, are privileged from arrest, yet the sheriff, or his officer, is not liable to an action of false imprisonment for arresting them b.

Aliens have, in general, no privilege from arrest: But, in order to pro- Aliens, &c. tect foreigners, residing in this kingdom, who had quitted their own country in consequence of the French Revolution, it was enacted by the statute 38 Geo. III. c. 50. § 9°. that "aliens abiding in this kingdom, having quitted their respective countries by reason of any revolution or troubles in France, or in countries conquered by the arms of France, should not be liable to be arrested, imprisoned, or held to bail, or to find any caution for their forthcoming or paying any debt, nor to be taken in execution on any judgment, nor by any caption, for or by reason of any debt or other cause of action, contracted or arising in any parts beyond the seas, other than the dominions of his majesty, while such aliens were not within the said dominions of his majesty; and in case any such alien should be arrested, imprisoned, or held to bail, or taken in execution on a judgment, or by any caption, contrary to the intent of that act, such alien should be discharged therefrom, by order of any of his majesty's courts in Westminster Hall, or of the court of Session in Scotland, or of any judge of such courts in vacation time." d I Bos. & Pul. 138. In that case it was decided, by two judges of the Common Pleas, that a defendant could not be held to bail in this country, on an instrument entered into in France, by which his property only, and not his person, was, according to the law of France, made liable to the payment of the debt sued for: But Heath, Justice, was of a different opinion; and it is observable, that in Imley v. Also, by the statute 43 Geo. III. c. 155. § 28. this provision was extended to his majesty's four courts in Ireland. But its further continuance being no longer necessary, the acts by which it was created have been suffered to expire.

Infancy, or insanity, of defendant no ground for discharging his bail.

In some of the preceding cases, the process is declared to be void; as against Ambassadors, &c. In others, the court is expressly required to discharge the defendant a. And it may be remarked, in general, that where the defendant is clearly entitled to privilege, as the arrest is irregular and unlawful, the court will discharge him upon motion; and not put him to the necessity of suing out a writ of privilege b, or of filing common bail c. But where the question of privilege from arrest is doubtful, the court will not, upon motion. discharge the party out of custody, but leave him to his writ of privilege d. And they will not discharge a defendant out of custody on common bail, on the ground of infancy e; or that he was insane at the time of the arrest f, or afterwards became so g; nor will they discharge his hail, on the ground of the insanity of their principal, although a commission of lunacy may have issued against him, under which he has been found a lunatic h. The bail, however, may have a habeas corpus, to bring up their principal, notwithstanding his lunacy, in order to surrender him in their discharge. And where the return to a writ of latitat stated that the defendant was insane, and could not be removed without great danger, and continued so till the return of the writ, the court of King's Bench refused an attachment against the sheriff k.

Arrest, by whom made, and under what authority.

'n,

An arrest, when allowed, is made by the sheriff or his officers; or by the bailiff of a liberty or franchise. The sheriff's authority is derived immediately from the court, except in counties palatine, where he acts by virtue of a mandate from the officer to whom the writ is directed: And even there, if the writ be directed immediately to the sheriff, he is bound to execute it; and a bail-bond taken on the arrest is legal. The officers of the sheriff are of three kinds, first, bailiffs in fee, or perpetual bailiffs, who have, by charter or prescription, the execution of writs within the

guidable sy secondly, common bailiffs, (called in the old books, bailiffs errant b) who are usually bound with sureties in an obligation for the due execution of their office, and thence are called bound bailiffs ; thirdly, special bailiffs, nominated by the plaintiff or his attorney, and appointed by the sheriff pro hac vice d.

. The sheriff's warrant to any of these officers ought not to be made Sheriff's warout, until the sheriff have the writ in his actual custody f: And therefore, where the defendant was arrested before the officer had any warrant, and before the writ was delivered to the sheriff, the bail bond was ordered to be delivered up to be cancelled s. So, where an attorney fills up the sheriff's warrant on a capias ad respondendum, after it is signed, sealed, and sent to him with a blank, this is bad h. And where the sheriff having directed a warrant to A. and all his other officers, to arrest B., and A. afterwards inserted therein the name of C.; it was holden that the warrant was illegal, and the arrest by C. consequently void i. But where the sheriff made a warrant to four jointly, and not severally, and one of them arrested the defendant, the court of Common Pleas, though they were of opinion that the arrest was not authorized by the warrant, would not interfere to discharge the defendant out of the custody of the sheriff, on entering a common appearance k. And a defendant is not entitled to be discharged out of custody, on the ground of his having been arrested upon a warrant, in which the names of the plaintiffs are not inserted conformable to the writ, if the defendant be not misled by the mistake: therefore, where the arrest took place on a warrant at the suit of three plaintiffs, which required the defendant to answer A. B. and two others, without naming them, the court of King's Bench held, that he was not entitled to be discharged 1.

If the defendant reside within a liberty, the bailiff of which has the execution and return of writs, there should regularly be a non omittas; or if there be not, the sheriff, for having execution of the writ, should make out his mandate, directed to the bailiff of the liberty m. And if there be two liberties in a county, and the sheriff make his mandate to the bailiff of one of them, who gives him no answer, he may, upon a non omittas, arrest the defendant in either liberty n; and even if the sheriff enter, and arrest the defendant in a liberty, without a non omittas, the arrest is good, "though the sheriff may be liable to an action o.

When made.

On Sunday.

on the day of the return of the writ; and at any place within the county, except where the defendant is privileged. But it cannot be made, between the day of the return and quarto die post, by seiginal. And, by the statute 29 Car. II. c. 7. § 6. In a person or persons, upon the Lord's day, "shall serve or execute, or cause to be served or executed, any writ, process, warrant, order, judgment, or decree, except in cases of treason, "felony or breach of the peace: but the service of every such writ, &c. "shall be void, to all intents and purposes"; and the person or persons "so stiving or executing the same, shall be as liable to the suit of the party prieved, and to answer damages to him for doing thereof, as if he "or they had done the same, without any writ, &c."

In construing this statute, it has been holden, that an arrest cannot be made on a Sunday, upon a capias utlagatum; or for non-payment of a penalty upon conviction d. And the statute extends not only to process properly so called, but also to all notices on which rules are made: and hence it has been helden, that service of notice of plea filed on a Sunday is void, by construction of the statute c. Where A. was arrested at the suit of B. and discharged, the sheriff not knowing that there was also a detainer in his office at the suit of C. and on the Sunday following he was arrested at C.'s suit, the court discharged him out of custody f; considering the arrest on the Sunday, as an original taking, or as a retaking after a voluntary escape s; and in either case it was prohibited by the statute. But after a negligeni escape, the defendant may be retaken on a Sunday; and that either by the officer upon fresh pursuit, or by virtue of an escape warrant h; for this is not an original taking, but the party is still in custody upon the old commitment. Also it is holden, that bail may take their principal on a Sunday, in order to surrender him 1; for this is not by virtue of any process at all. And it should seem that process of contempt, being of a criminal nature, may be served upon that day k. But a rule nisi for an attachment, for non-payment of money pursuant to the master's allocatur, cannot be so served !.

Where made.

The arrest must be made in the county into which the process issues: Therefore, an arrest in the city of Landon, on a bill of Middlesex, is irregular, even though it took place on the verge of the county of Middlesex,

So it has been decided, that process cannot be lawfully executed in Kensington palace, which is privileged for this purpose as a royal residence And an arrest within the tower of London, would it seems be bad, without leave obtained from the governor h. But an arrest, within the verge of the king's place, has been holden, in the Common Pleas, to be no ground for discharging the defendant out of custody i. The privilege of the parties to a suit, and their mitnesses, of which we have before spoken k, may also in some measure be considered as of a local nature: And of the same kind is that of clergymen, who, by several ancient statutes 1, are privileged from arrest, in going to and returning from church, or performing divine service; but not if they stay in church, with a fraudulent design of eluding the process of the law. And it is said, that the party grieved may have an action upon these statutes m.

OF THE MANNER OF ARREST.

third persons, who find a defendant in custody, have a right to consider him as being lawfully in the custody in which he is found, and to proceed against him accordingly; for otherwise a person under an illegal agrest, at the suit of one party, would be completely protected, during his imprisonment, from all other process, which would be productive of great inconvenience and suspension of justice.

CHAP. XI.

Of the BAIL BOND; and DUTY of SHERIFFS, &c. on the ARREST.

WHEN the defendant is arrested, he is either let out of custody, upon giving bail to the sheriff, or an attorney's undertaking for his appearance; or depositing in the sheriff's hands, the sum indorsed on the writ, with ten pounds in addition to answer costs, &c.; or he remains in custody, or escapes, or is rescued, &c.

Bail in personal actions came in with the capies a: and it is either to Bail to sheriff. the sheriff, for the appearance of the defendant at the return of the writ, or to abide the event of the suit: The former is called bail to the sheriff, or bail below; the latter bail to the action, or, when special, bail above. Before the statute 23 Hen. VI. c. 9. the sheriff was not obliged to bail a Before stat. 23 defendant, arrested upon mesne process, unless he sued out a writ of mainprize; though he might have taken bail of his own accord b. This arbitrary power produced great extortion and oppression of the subject: to remedy which, it was enacted by the above statute, that "sheriffs, &c. By that statute. " shall let out of prison all manner of persons arrested, or being in their " custody, by force of any writ, bill or warrant, in any action personal, or " by cause of indictment of trespass, upon reasonable sureties of sufficient " persons, having sufficient within the counties where such persons be so " let to bail or mainprize, to keep their days in such place as the said " writs, bills or warrants shall require; persons being in their ward by Attachment.

This is a public act, of which the courts will judicially take notice, without its being specially pleaded . And its hash two branches: first, as to the persons to be let to bail; and, secondly, as to the form of the security b. Upon the first branch of the statute, it has been destinated that the sheriff has no authority to take a bond for the appearance of persons arrested by him, under process issuing upon an indictment at the quarter sessions, for a misdememory but can only take a secognizance for their appearance: And it has been doubted, whether the sheriff can take ball on an attachment for a contempt, issuing out of a court of law. But it is holden, that bail may be taken on attachment out of Chancery, on meme processe; though not after a decree f. The practice upon mane process is, for the sheriff to take a bond in the penalty of 40L for the defendant to appear and answers; and an action may be brought on the bond, in the name of the sheriff h. But though the sheriff may, yet he is not compellable to take bail, on an attachment out of Chancery; it having been determined, that an action will not lie against him for refusing to take it i: and therefore, if he will not take bail, the defendant must remain in

- d In an anonymous case, reported in I Str. 479. the Chief Justice, on a motion for an attachment, declared, that all the judges on consideration had resolved that the sheriff could not take bail on an attachment, but a judge at his chamber might. And accordingly, in a late case of Phelps v. Barrett, 4 Price, 23. it was determined by the court of Exchequer, that the sheriff cannot let out of custody on bail, a defendant taken under an attachment, issuing out of courts of law, for non-payment of costs; such process being in nature of, and in effect an execution: and see Com. Rep. 264. Barnes, 64. Per Ld. Mansfield, M. 23 Geo. III. K. B. accord. but see 1 Ld. Raym. 722. 2 Salk. 608. S. C. contra. The case of Morris v. Hoyward however, 6 Tsunt 569. 2 Marsh. 280. S. C. is an authority to shew, that although the sheriff is not bound to take bail upon an attachment, yet if he do, he may recover upon the bail bond: and see the case of Rer v. Dawes, 1 Ld. Raym. 722. 2 Salks 608. S. C. accord. That indeed was the case of an attachment out of Changery, to enforce an appearance; but process thing out of courts of law and equity is said of signal on the same foundation: though it is observable, that process out of Chancery is not within the statute 23 Hen. VI. c. 9.

as appears by that case, and Studd v. Acton, 1 H. Blac. 474. The case of Morris v. Hayward was decided upon great consideration, and is at variance with the subsequent case of Phelps v. Barrett; the foundation of which was, that an attachment is a process in nature of an execution. Per Bayley, J. in the case of Lewis v. Morland, 2 Barn. & Ald. 63. And as it was determined, in the latter case, that an attachment issuing out of the court of King's Bench, for non-payment of money, is in nature of mesne process, the principle on which the case of Phelps v. Barrett was decided, cannot it seems be supported. In the case of Rex v. Aylett, T. 25 Geo. III. K. B. a distinction was taken by the counsel in argument, which seems to be reasonable, between an attachment for non-payment of money, and for not delivering papers, or other cause; and it was said, that on the former, the sheriff might take bail, but the latter was bailable only before a judge.

custody, and can only be relieved by applying to the chancellor, or a judge of the court out of which the process issued . If the sheriff take bail, it seems from the case of the King v. Dawer b, that he may be amerced, if the party do not appear and answer; but in a subsequent case c, a messenger was sent, upon the sheriff a return of cepi corpus, to bring him in; which seems to be now the practice in Chancery, instead of making an order on the sheriff to bring in the body. So, in the Excheques it the condition of the hand be broken, the course is said to be, to get an order, on the return by the sheriff of cepi corpus, for a messenger to bring in the defendant d. But where a defendant had been arrested on an attachment for contempt, in not appearing to a subpæna ad respondendum, the court would not grant a motion for the messenger to bring up the body, after the defendant had given a bail bond to the sheriff, although the penalty was inadequate e.

When the defendant is arrested, and in actual custody, it is the duty of Sheriff's duty to the sheriff to take bail, if required: and therefore if a bail bond be tendered, with sufficient sureties, and the sheriff refuse to accept it, and liberate the defendant, he is liable to a special action on the case f. But in order to maintain such an action, it must appear that the parties who were offered as bail, had sufficient within the county where the arrest was made g. A bond however, with five surcties, three of whom are respectively worth more than the penalty of the bond, is sufficient, though the other two are worth less than the penalty b. The clause which requires reasonable sureties was introduced for the benefit of the sheriff; and therefore, though he may insist upon two sureties, yet he may take a bond with one only i. And for the same reason, the plaintiff cannot maintain an action against him, for taking sureties that are insufficient, or do not inhabit within his county k. And though the words of the statute seem to be confined to persons arrested and in actual custody, yet it has been holden, that the arrest need not be stated in an action upon the ball bond 1; and if stated, it is not traversable m: for it would be of mischievous consequence, if a bail bond, taken civilly, without exposing the party by an arrest, were not as effectual as if he had been actually arrested.

The second branch of the statute requires a security by bond or obligation : and therefore an agreement in writing, made by a third purion: with a sheriff's officer, to put in good bail for the defendant at the return of the writ, or surrender his body to the officer, or pay the debt and costsb; or an attorney's undertaking to the officer, for the appearance of the defendant c, or to give a bail bond to the sheriff in due time d, has been holden to be void, by the statute 23 Hen. VI. c. 9; and an action will not lie upon such agreement or undertaking. In these cases, if hail above he not duly put in, the sheriff is liable to an action for an escape; and the court will not relieve him, by permitting him afterwards to put in and justify bail : nor, after the plaintiff has recovered against the sheriff for the escape, will the court proceed summarily against the attorney, to make him pay the debt and costs, for his breach of faith s. It is also settled, that the sheriff or his officer cannot maintain an action against the defendant for money paid, when he has discharged him out of custody on mesne process, without taking a bail bond, and has in consequence of his non-appearance, been obliged to pay the debts and costs h.

In what sum.

Form of.

The bail bond is usually taken in a penalty, being double the amount of the sum sworn to and indorsed on the writ, notwithstanding the statute 12 Geo. I. c. 29. which directs the sheriff to take bail for that sum, and no more i; and the sheriff's bail are liable thereon to the full extent of the debt and costs, not exceeding the penalty of the bond k. Respecting the form of the bond, there are three things to be observed; first, that it be made to the sheriff himself; secondly, that it be made to him, by his name of office; and thirdly, that it be conditioned for the defendant's appearance at the return of the writ, and for that only 1. Therefore, if the bond be not made to the sheriff m, or be not made to him by his name of office m, on if it be single, without any condition at all m, or with an impossible condition n, or the condition be not for the defendant's appearance m, or be for that and something else m, it is void by the statute. So it is void, if executed before the condition is filled up o. And in an action on a bail bond, the return of the writ, on which the defendant in the original action was arrested, must be stated with certainty p. fendant may demur; but otherwise he should plead it: and when, by pleading or otherwise, it appears in any part of the record, he may move in arrest of judgment in any part of the record, he may move in arrest of judgment.

Variance of from writ.

If the bond be substantially good, it cannot be avoided for any trifling informality, or variance of the condition from the writ, in the description of the plea, or of the time or place of appearance. Thus, where the writ was to answer the plaintiff in a plea of debt for three hundred and twenty pounds, or in a plea of trespass with an agetiam, and the condition was to answer the plaintiff in a plea of debt or trespass generally, or without mentioning the plea at all, the variances were holden to be immaterial b; for the statute only requires a bond conditioned for the defendant's appearance, and the description of the plea is merely surplusage. And accordingly, where the sheriff, upon an original writ in a plea of trespass on the case on promises, took a bail bond conditioned for the defendant's appearance, to answer the plaintiff in a plea of trespass, the court held it to be valid c. So, where the writ, in trespass, was to appear before the lord the king at Westminster, and the condition was to appear before the justices of the King's Bench at Westminster d, the bond was holden good. And where the writ, by original, was returnable before the lord the king, wheresoever he shall then be in England, and the condition was without the words wheresoever, &c. the court gave judgment for the plaintiff, in an action upon the bond; saying, they would understand, that by appearing before the king was meant, before the king in his court, and not before the king in person e. So, where the condition of the bond, in an action by original, was to appear before the king at Westminster, it was deemed sufficient f. And where a declaration on a bail bond, in setting out the condition, stated that if the defendant should appear, &c. to answer the plaintiff, "according to the custom of his majesty's court of Common Bench here," the obligation should be void; and on the production of the bond, the latter words were omitted; the court of Common Pleas held, that this was no variance, as it was only necessary to set out the condition according to its legal effect g. It has also been holden, that the statute for preventing frivolous and vexatious arrests h is merely directory to the sheriff; and does not avoid the bail bond, where there is no affidavit of the cause of action i, on the sum sworn to is not indersed on the writ i, or even where the bond is taken in a penalty, being more than double the amount of the sum sworn to k. But an allegation, that an action was depending in his majesty's court of the Bench at Westminster, is not sustained by proof of a pluries bill of Middlesex; for by such allegation the Common Bench must be intended a. So, where a capias ad respondendum was made returnable before his majesty's justices of the Bench at Westminster, by virtue of which the sheriff issued his mandate to the bailiff of a liberty, commanding him to take the defendant, so that the sheriff might have his body before his said majesty at Westminster; and the bailiff took a bail bond, conditioned for the defendant's appearance before his said majesty at Westminster; the court of Common Pleas held, that the variance between the bail bond and the writ was fatal, and therefore that the bond was void, by the statute 23 Hen. VI. c. 9 b. And in an action on a bail bond, where the condition set out on the record was, " to answer the plaintiff in a plea of trespass, and also to a bill to be exhibited against the defendant for 60l. upon promises," and the bond, when produced, did not contain the words "upon promises", the variance was holden to be fatal c.

Render to sheriff, &c.

The detendant having given a bail bond, could not formerly have discharged his bail to the sheriff, by surrendering himself before the return of the writ; for it was considered as a settled point, that nothing could be a performance of the condition of the bail bond, but putting in and perfecting bail above d. But it has since been determined, that if the defendant surrender himself to the sheriff, before or on the return-day of the writ, the bail bond may be given up to be cancelled; after which, the plaintiff cannot take an assignment of it e; nor can he rule the sheriff, or maintain an action against him, for not assigning it f. defendant surrendered to the gaoler at the county gaol, in discharge of his bail to the sheriff, before twelve o'clock on the first day of term, being the return day of the writ, and the under-sheriff, who lived at a distance, signified his assent to the surrender by return of post the next day, it was held sufficient to discharge the bail bond, of which the plaintiff had taken an assignment afterwards, with notice of such surrender g. But it is optional in the sheriff, whether he will accept the surrender of the party, in discharge of the bail bond: and therefore, where notice of such surrender was given to the sheriff, and to the gaoler in whose custody the party then was, at the suit of another, after which the gaoler let the party out of custody, the court held that the gaoler was not liable upon his bond of indemnity to the sheriff, as for an escape in the former suit; for the party was not legally in the custody of the sheriff or his gaoler, merely by virtue of such surrender h. And it seems, that rendering the defendant to the King's Bench prison, before the return of the writ, will not discharge his bail to the sheriff a.

The provisions of the statute of Hen. VI. are not applicable to se- Attorney's uncurities taken by, or for the benefit of the plaintiff's: *And hence, an attorney's undertaking to appear for the defendant is binding, if given to the plaintiff in the cause, though it be not exactly in the form prescribed. And an undertaking, by a third person, to sign a bail bond for the defendant, is not considered as an undertaking, within the statute of frauds. to answer for the debt, default, or miscarriage of another d. By an old rule of court e, " a prisoner taken upon a capias shall not be discharged, till he hath given bond to appear; unless the plaintiff or his attorney shall consent to take an appearance, without bail:" But it is now the common practice to take an attorney's undertaking to the plaintiff, where special bail is required; and the courts will enforce it by attachment f.

It sometimes happens, that persons arrested upon mesne process may not be able to find sufficient surcties for their appearance at the return of the writ, and yet may be able to make a deposit of the money for which 43 Geo. III. c. they are so arrested, together with a competent sum for costs: and therefore, by the statute 43 Geo. III. c. 46. § 2. reciting that it is expedient that persons arrested should, upon making such deposit, be permitted to go at large until the return of the writ, without finding bail to the sheriff for their appearance at the return thereof; it is enacted, that "all per-" sons who shall be arrested upon mesne process, within those parts of " the united kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, called England and " Ireland, shall be allowed, in lieu of giving bail to the shcriff, to deposit " in the hands of the sheriff, by delivering to him or to his under-sheriff, or " other officers to be by him appointed for that purpose, the sum indorsed " upon the writ, by virtue of the affidavit for holding to bail in that ac-" tion, together with ten pounds in addition to such sum, to answer the " costs which may accrue or be incurred in such action, up to and at the " time of the return of the writ, and also such further sum of money, if " any, as shall have been paid for the king's fine upon any original writ; " and shall thereupon be discharged from such arrest, as to the action in " which he, she, or they shall so deposit the sum indorsed on the writ." And that "the sheriff shall, in every such case, at or before the re-" turn of the said writ, pay into the court in which such writ shall be " returnable, the sum of money so deposited with him as aforesaid; and " thereupon, in case the defendant or defendants shall afterwards duly " put in and perfect bail in such action, according to the course and prac-

Construction of that statute, and cases decided thereon.

In the construction of the above act of parliament, (which has been sometimes though erroneously, called Lord Ellenborough's act b,) it has been holden, that where money is paid to the sheriff upon an arrest, it shall be presumed to have been paid as a deposit in lieu of bail, unless a discharge or some acknowledgment in writing be given to the defendant for the debt and costs c. This act was made in ease of defendants, and not for the benefit of plaintiffs: And therefore, where the defendant puts in bail above, who, on being excepted to, render him, instead of justifying, the plaintiff is not entitled to receive the money out of court; but the defendant, if he made the deposit, may in such case receive it back d; or if the deposit was made by any other person than the defendant, the court will, upon bail above being put in and perfected, or the defendant surrendered, order it to be repaid to the bail, or other person by whom it was actually deposited, and not to the defendant. The above act does not controul the discretion of the court, with respect to the time for putting in bail: therefore, where money is paid into court in lieu of bail, which is not put in and perfected in due time, the court, on an affidavit of merits, will grant further time to the defendant f. And where the plaintiff had made application for the money to be paid out of court to him, and that rule was discharged on shewing cause, and it appeared, on fully discussing the merits of the case, that the defendant was entitled to the money, the court of Common Pleas granted a rule, absolute in the first instance, for the money to be paid over to him s. If a defendant, being arrested by a wrong name, pay the amount of the sum sworn to, and 10l. for costs to the sheriff, without prejudice, the plaintiff will not be permitted to take it out of court, on the defendant's omitting to perfect bail h: And neither the sheriff, nor officer of the court, is entitled to poundage, on the money being taken out of court a.

When bail above is not put in and perfected in due time, the plaintiff When plaintiff is is entitled, by the express words of the statute, to have the money paid him, by order of the court, upon motion made for that purpose b. And, &c. in the King's Bench, where a defendant cannot be found, so as to serve him personally with a rule for taking out the money deposited in the hands of the sheriff, the court will allow the service to be good, by leaving a copy of the rule at the defendant's last place of abode, and sticking it up in the office c. In the Common Pleas, where the defendant, on being arrested, paid the debt and ten pounds in addition for costs, which sum was more than sufficient to cover them, and informed the plaintiff's attorney, that he should reclaim only the surplus which might remain after payment of debt and costs, and the plaintiff's attorney, on the sheriff's omitting after request to remit the money, proceeded in the action; the court held, that the defendant was not liable to pay the costs so incurred after the arrest d. The cases in which the plaintiff may think fit to enter a common appearance, or tile common bail for the defendant, are where he claims and means to proceed for more than the sum indorsed on the writ: but in these cases, there is no provision made by the act, with regard to costs, if he should not eventually recover more than that sum; nor for his refunding any part of it, if he should recover less. In an action for a malicious arrest, an allegation that the plaintiff gave bail to the sheriff for his appearance at the return of the writ, is not supported by evidence that he paid the debt and 10% for costs into the hands of the sheriff; but he may still maintain the action, although he cannot recover for the consequential damages e.

If the defendant, upon being arrested, remain in custody, he is either Proceedings, confined in a private house, or carried to the county gaol. And where a when defendant remains in cusperson was arrested, by virtue of a warrant directed to a sheriff's officer, tody. but on account of illness was permitted to remain a few days in his own house, in the custody of the officer's follower, who was not named in the warrant, but who kept the key of the house in his possession, and was then removed to gaol, where he continued for the remainder of two months, the court of Common Pleas held, that this was a legal imprisonment, so as to constitute an act of bankruptcy f. For preventing the oppression On Lords' act. of inferior officers, in the execution of process for debt, it is enacted by the statute 32 Geo. II. c. 28 g. commonly called the Lords' Act, that "no " sheriff, under-sheriff, bailiff, serjeant at mace, or other officer or minister, " shall convey or carry, or cause to be conveyed or carried, any person or " persons by him or them arrested, or being in his or their custody, by " virtue or colour of any action, writ, process, or attachment, to any tavern, alehouse, or other public victualling or drinking house, or to the " private house of any such officer or minister, or of any tenant or re-" lation of his, without the free and voluntary consent of the person or " persons so arrested or in custody; nor charge any such person or per-" sons with any sum of money, for any wine, beer, ale, victuals, tobacco, " or any other liquor or things whatsoever, save what he, she, or they " shall call for, of his, her, or their own free accord; nor shall cause or " procure him, her, or them, to call or pay for any such liquor or things, " except what he she, or they shall particularly and freely ask for; nor " shall demand, take, or receive, or cause to be demanded, taken, or re-" ceived, directly or indirectly, any other or greater sum or sums of mo-" ney, than is or shall be by law allowed to be taken or demanded for " any arrest or taking, or for detaining, or waiting till the person or per-" sons so arrested or in custody shall have given an appearance or bail, as " the case shall require, or agreed with the person or persons at whose " suit or prosecution he, she, or they shall be taken or arrested, or until " he, she, or they shall be sent to the proper gaod belonging to the county, " riding, division, city, town, or place, where such arrest or taking shall " be; nor shall exact or take any reward, gratuity or money, for keeping " the person or persons so arrested or in custody, out of gaol or prison." And that "no sheriff, &c. shall carry any such person to any gaol or " prison, within four and twenty hours from the time of such arrest, un-" less such person or persons so arrested shall refuse to be carried to some " safe and convenient dwelling house, of his, her, or their own nomina-" tion or appointment, within a city, borough, corporation, or market " town, in case such person or persons shall be there arrested, or within " three miles from the place where such arrest shall be made, if the same " shall be made out of any city, borough, corporation, or market town, so " as such dwelling house be not the house of the person arrested, and be " within the county, riding, division, or liberty in which the person under " arrest was arrested; and then and in any such case, it shall be lawful to " and for any such sheriff, or other officer or minister, to convey or carry " the person or persons so arrested, and refusing to be carried to such safe " and convenient dwelling house as aforesaid, to such gaol or prison as he, " she, or they may be sent to, by virtue of the action, writ or process " against him, her, or them: And that no sheriff, &c. shall take or re-" ceive any other or greater sum or sums, for one or more night's lodging, " or for a day's diet, or other expenses of any person or persons under ar-" rest, on any writ, action, attachment or process, other than what shall " be allowed as reasonable in such cases, by some order or orders made by " justices of the peace, in pursuance of the said act "."

These provisions are confined to persons arrested on mesne process; the intent of them being, that such persons may have an opportunity of procuring bail, or of agreeing with the plaintiffs: and it has accordingly been determined, that a sheriff's officer is not liable to the penalties of the statute, for carrying a defendant taken in execution to prison, within twenty four hours after the arrest. Neither is the sheriff liable to an action of escape, for taking a prisoner in execution to a lock-up house, and keeping him there fourteen days before the return of the writ. No time is limited by the above act, within which a defendant, arrested on mesne process, should be carried to the county gaol: And where, to an action for an escape on mesne process, the sheriff pleaded, that the debtor was rescued out of his custody, as he was carrying him to Newgate, to which the plaintiff replied, that the debtor ought to have been carried to prison within a convenient time after the arrest, and that he was rescued, because the defendant neglected, &c. the court thought the replication bad, and gave judgment for the defendant. But it seems to be the duty of the sheriff, if possible, to carry the defendant to the county gaol, by the return of the writ on which he was arrested d; and that afterwards the sheriff keeps him at his peril, in case the creditor is delayed. Where the defendant, however, is arrested on the return day, he cannot be carried to the county gaol, till the expiration of twenty four hours after the arrest c. And where the sheriff, having arrested a defendant on mesne process, keeps him in his custody, after the return of the writ, and then carries him to prison, he is not liable to an action on the case, as for an escape, if the jury find that the plaintiff has not been delayed, or prejudiced in his suit f.

For the further protection of persons arrested, against the oppression of Duty of gaolers, inferior officers, and the exaction of gaolers, to whose custody they may be committed, it is by the same statute g enacted, that "every sheriff, under-" sheriff, bailiff of any liberty, gaoler and keeper of any prison or gaol, " and other person and persons, by whom, or to whose custody or keep-" ing, any one shall be arrested, taken, committed, or charged in execu-"tion, by virtue of any writ, process, action, or attachment, shall at all " times permit and suffer every such person and persons, during his, her, " and their respective continuance under arrest or in custody, or in exc-" cution, for any debt, damages, costs, or contempt, at his, her, and their " free will and pleasure, to send for, and have brought to him, her, or " them, at seasonable times in the day time, any beer, ale, victuals, or " other necessary food, from what place he, she, or they shall think fit, or " can have the same; and also to have and use such bedding, linen, or " other necessary things, as he, she, or they shall have occasion for, and " think fit, or shall be supplied with, during his, her, or their continuance " under any such arrest or commitment, without purloining or detaining " the same, or any part thereof, or enforcing or requiring him, her, or " them to pay for the having or using thereof, or putting any manner of " restraint or difficulty upon him, her, or them, in the using thereof, or re-latter act, the judges of the courts of Great Sessions in Wales are authorized to remove And see stat. 3 Geo. I. c. 15. § any officer of the said courts, (not nominated and appointed by the crown,) or his deputy,

At common law, a sheriff has no right to take fees for the execution of Fees to sheriff, process *: And, by the statute 23 Hen. VI. c. 9. he is only entitled to the fee of four pence, for issuing his warrant on mesne process, to arrest the defendant a; although, when the plaintiff has paid the sum of one guinea to the bailiff for an arrest, he has been allowed it by the master or prothonotary, in the taxation of costs b. And where a sheriff's officer, who had arrested a defendant, demanded and received from him, a larger sum than he was liable to pay as a caption fee, and for the expense of a bail bond, &c. the court of Exchequer, on motion, ordered it to be referred to the master, to ascertain what the officer was entitled to on that account, and ordered him to restore the surplus to the defendant, and to pay the costs of the application. But if, by abuse of the process of one of the courts at Westminster, a sheriff's officer extort a promissory note from a suitor, and then declare upon that note, in another of the courts at Westminster, the latter court cannot interfere summarily to punish the officer, under the statute 32 Geo. II. c. 28: § 12 d. And in order to recover a penalty on this statute, against a sheriff's officer, for taking a larger fee than is allowed by law upon an arrest, the plaintiff must prove what sum is allowed by law, either by a table of fees, or some regulation respecting it, by the officers of the court out of which the process issued . The justices in sessions have no authority to fix the bailiff's fees for an arrest f: And an action will not lie against the sheriff, where more than the sum allowed has been taken for a bail bond, by one of his officers, to whom the warrant was not directed, but to whose lock-up house the defendant was brought, after being arrested g.

When a defendant escapes out of legal custody, he may either be re- Retaking after taken by the sheriff or other officer on fresh pursuit, or by virtue of an escape warrant, (if he escaped out of the custody of the marshal of the King's Bench, or warden of the Fleet prison,) on the statute 1 Ann. stat. 2. c. 6. And though in general a defendant cannot be retaken on fresh pursuit, after a voluntary escape h, yet it has been determined, that a bailiff who has arrested a prisoner on mesne process, may retake him before the return of the writ, though he voluntarily permitted the prisoner to escape immediately after the arrest i. By the above statute k it is Escape warrant. enacted, that "if any person or persons committed or rendered to, or " charged in custody of the marshal of the King's Bench, or prison of the " Fleet, either in execution or upon mesne process, or upon any contempt " in not performing the order or decree of a Court of Equity, by any of

Upon this statute it has been determined, that if a person charged in execution in the King's Bench, be turned over to the Fleet and escape, either a judge of the King's Bench or Common Pleas may grant an escape warrant a. And after a negligent escape, the defendant, we have seen b, may be retaken on a Sunday, by virtue of such warrant. But if one who is no officer, by virtue of the warrant, seize a person escaping, and bring him before the sheriff, he cannot detain him; for, being illegally executed, it is the same thing as if there had been no warrant at all . "It has also been determined, that a person who has a day rule, cannot be taken by virtue of an escape warrant b; and if a person be taken thereon at eight in the morning, and the same day obtain a day rule, pursuant to a petition which was not read in court till after eight, yet he shall be discharged; for as to this purpose, there shall be no fraction of a day c.

The plaintiff's remedies, when the defendant escapes, are first, by Plaintiff's remetaking out fresh process against him; secondly, by obtaining an escape warrant for retaking him, if the escape was from the custody of the marshal of the King's Bench, or warden of the Fleet; and thirdly, by By action, &c. action or attachment against the sheriff or officer, for an escape: which remedies may be pursued, as well where the escape was voluntary, as where it was only negligent d. But where the sheriff, having arrested the defendant, suffers him to go at large, upon giving bail for his appearance at the return of the writ, he is not liable to an action of escape; for he was obliged to take bail, by the statute 23 Hen. VI. c. 9 c. And even where he suffers him to go at large without bail, he is not, it seems, liable to an action, provided he have him at the return of the writ f. have him not then, or afterwards suffer him to go at large, without lawful authority, he is, in either case, liable to an action g. And where an action is brought against the sheriff, after he has taken bail, he must plead the statute; and cannot take advantage of it on demurrer to the declaration, or in arrest of judgment h.

An action against the sheriff for an escape may it seems be defeated, by How defeated. putting in bail in the original action, of the term in which the writ was returnable, though after the expiration of the time allowed for putting it in; and even after the action for an escape is brought i. To prevent this, the plaintiff should oppose the justification of bail, if put in: and in a late case k, where bail had been permitted to justify without opposition, the court of King's Bench set aside the rule for the allowance of bail, on payment of the costs of justification. And, in that court, bail put in after the term in which the writ is returnable, is not an answer to an action against the sheriff for an escape, brought before it was put in . So, in the Common Pleas, if the sheriff omit to take a bail bond upon the arrest, and afterwards, upon an action being commenced against him for an escape, he causes bail to be perfected, the court will order the allowance of bail to be set aside, that the action may proceed b. But the court of Exchequer would not set aside an order for the allowance of bail, obtained after an action commenced against the sheriff for an escape, though no bail bond had been taken, nor bail above put in in due time, where the defendant had been rendered on the day of the expiration of the rule to bring in the body c. And in an action against the sheriff, for not assigning a bail bond, that court would not grant a motion, to enter the recognizance of bail on the record, as taken on the true day, (it being always entered generally as of the term,) to enable the plaintiff to proceed with his action d. If a bail bond has been taken by the sheriff, though his clerk, on inquiry at the office, deny that he has taken one, the plaintiff cannot maintain an action against him for an escape e: It is therefore usual, in declaring against the sheriff, to usert three counts; 1st, for an escape; 2dly, for not taking the defendant, when he had an opportunity; and 3dly, for not assigning the bail bond, on request. And, in an action for an escape upon mesne process, it is enough, without producing the warrant, or giving direct evidence of the arrest or escape, to prove the sheriff's return of cepi corpus, and to shew that the party did not put in bail, and was not in the sheriff's custody at the return of the writ f.

When the defendant is rescued upon mesne process, as he is going to prison, the sheriff may return the rescue s; but not, where the defendant is rescued after he is put in prison, except by the king's enemies h. And it seems that a return by the sheriff to a bill of Middlesex, stating that he took and detained the defendant, until he rescued himself, and that he was not afterwards found, &c. is sufficient, without naming the rescuers, or stating them to be people of the county i; but the return, not stating the arrest to have been made in the proper county, was holden to be bad i. And if the defendant escape, owing to the negligence of the officer, this will not justify the return of a rescue k. Upon the sheriff's return of a rescue, the plaintiff has a triple remedy against the rescuers; by attachment, action on the case, or indictment. The return of a rescue is of itself a conviction b; and the courts will grant an attachment upon it in the first instance c, which should be made returnable on a general return, though the original process was at a day certain d. But, without the sheriff's return, the courts will not grant an attachment, upon a mere affidavit of the fact c. It was formerly the constant course, upon the return of a Fine, &c. rescue, to set a certain fine of four nobles on each offender f: but of late years, the courts have fined according to their discretion, upon considering the circumstances of the case s. And as the sheriff's return of a rescue is not traversable, the court of King's Bench will proceed to punish the rescuers, without going through the ordinary course of examining them upon interrogatories h. But where a defendant in that court, was brought up on an attachment, for rescuing a person arrested on a warrant for obstructing excise officers, it was said to be the invariable practice of the court, in such a case, to put the defendant to answer interrogatories, though he did not deny the charge in the affidavits, unless the prosecutor waived putting themi.

CHAP. XII.

Of APPEARANCE, and BAIL to the Action.

Appearance.

HERETOFORE, when a writ issued out of the King's Bench, it was entered upon a roll; so that though the officer had not returned the writ, yet the defendant might have appeared at the day given by the roll; and that either to save himself from corporal pain by imprisonment, or to prevent the loss of issues, or to save his freehold or inheritance. And so it was in the Common Pleas; where they entered the writ upon a roll, by way of recital, viz. Dominus rex misit breve suum clausum, in hæc verba, &c.

What.

Voluntary, or compulsive.

In actions by original, in K. B.

Appearance is the first act of the defendant in court b; and differs from putting in bail, which is the act of the court itself c, as is evident from the language of the bail-piece in the King's Bench, wherein the defendant is stated to be delivered to bail d, &c.: and it is either voluntary or compul-A voluntary appearance is of no effect, in the King's Bench, unless the plaintiff's attorney, within fourteen days after such appearance, sue out a writ of latitat, or bill of Middlesex, where the defendant abides in that county. But this rule cannot be taken advantage of by any but the defendant, unless some particular fraud be alleged f. In the Common Pleas it is a rule, that no bail be put in for any party against whom no writ or process is sued out, without leave of the court s. And no bail is required in that court, but a common appearance only, if the defendant appear upon a summons, attachment or distress, or by supersedeas quia improvide, &c.h

In actions by original, in the King's Bench, the appearance is entered with the filaser of the county where the action is brought; and upon a summons, attachment or distringus, it should be entered on or before the quarto die post of the return of the writ k. So, in the Common Pleas, the appearance by original is entered with the proper filacer 1: and the defendant in that court, must appear upon a summons, attachment, or distringas, within four days after the return, which are reckoned inclusive both of the return day and quarto die post m.

The appearance of the defendant is triable by the record a: and in the How triable; Common Pleas it is a rule b, that "all appearances for defendants, upon writs of capias, alias and pluries, issuing out of that court, ought to be entered of record, or otherwise they are not warranted by the course of the court; neither can the defendant, if he have been arrested, plead comperuit ad diem, in discharge of the sheriff's bond taken for his appearance." By that rule, the appearance is required to be entered with the proper filucers; but there does not seem to be any appearance roll, or entry of the defendant's appearance, except the statement of it on the recognizance roll, or on the imparlance, plea, or issue roll, and the entries in the filacer's books; which entries however cannot be considered as records.

Bail to the action are common or special. In the King's Bench by bill, Common, or common bail must be filed in all cases where special bail is not necessary, or has been dispensed with by the court; and they are particularly required in cjectment, for the casual ejector c, and to authorize judgments by warrant of attorney, default, or non sum informatus d. These bail are merely nominal. In the Common Pleas, there is no common bail; but in that court, and also in the King's Bench by original, a common appearance is entered for the defendant, in cases where special bail is not necessary.

Before the making of the statute 12 Geo. I. c. 29. the defendant being History of. always arrested upon process against his person, it was discretionary in the courts to discharge him upon common bail, or a common appearance, or hold him to special bail f. Anciently, if the cause of action were for a sum under twenty pounds, or for uncertain damages g, the courts let the defendant out of custody upon common bail; but if it were for a sum certain above twenty pounds, they made him find special bail h. Afterwards, the sum was reduced to ien pounds: And now, by the statute 7 & 8 By stat. 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 71 k. " no person shall be held to special bail, upon any pro-" cess issuing out of any court, where the cause of action shall not have " originally amounted to the sum of twenty pounds or upwards, over and " above and exclusive of any costs, charges and expenses, that may have " been incurred, recovered, or become chargeable, in or about the suing " for or recovering the same, or any part thereof." So that special or Governed by common bail is no longer discretionary in the court, but is governed by

Common bail or appearance, when and how filed, or entered, by defendant. arrested, he may be holden to special bail; and e converso, that whenever the defendant cannot be arrested, common bail is sufficient.

Common bail may be filed, or a common appearance entered by the defendant or his attorney, or by the plaintiff according to the statutes; and it may be filed or entered by the defendant originally, or in consequence of a rule of court b, or judge's order, for discharging him out of custody, on filing or entering it. In the King's Bench, where the defendant has been served with the copy of a bill of Middlesex, or other process thereon, he should file common bail at the return of it, or within eight days after such return c, which are reckoned exclusively; and Sunday is not accounted as one of them, if it happen to be the last d. These bail are entered on a piece of parchment, called a bail-piece e, which is filed with the clerk of the common bails; who is required to mark the bail-pieces numerically, as they are received f. The defendant, having been served with a copy of a capias, or other process by original, in the King's Bench, should enter a common appearance with the filacer of the county where the action is laid, within eight days after the appearance day, or quarto die post of the return of the process s. In the Common Pleas, the eight days are reckoned from the return day, and not from the quarto die post of the return of the writh; and the appearance is entered with the filacer of the county to which the writ is directed, upon a præcipe or note of appearance being made out and delivered to him, on unstamped paper, which he enters in a book kept for that purpose. In an action against husband and wife, when the kusband alone has been arrested, special bail may justify for him only, on his filing common bail for his wife k; but when the husband alone has been served with process, he ought regularly to file common bail, or enter an appearance, for himself and his wife 1. Yet, where he entered an appearance for himself only, the court of Common Pleas held it to be so far regular, as that the plaintiff could not sign judgment, without demanding a pleam. And where, in a similar case, an appearance was entered for the husband only, by his attorney, who expressly disclaimed any interference for the wife, and the latter not appearing, an appearance was entered for her by the plaintiff according to the statute, upon which the plaintiff declared against the husband and wife jointly, and the former pleaded for himself only; the court of Exchequer held, that an interlocutory judgment signed against both, for want of a joint plea, was regular .

When an attorney of either court has accepted a warrant, or subscribed. By defendant's a process, declaration, or warrant to appear, the rule in the King's Bench is, that "he shall be compelled to cause an appearance, or liable to an attachment, or put out of the roll, as the case requires; and the party is not to be received to countermand such appearance, after his retainer b." And in the Common Pleas it is a rule, that "every attorney accepting es. subscribing any warrant to appear for any defendant, to any writ issuing out of that court, shall within four days after the appearance day to the return of every such writ in London or Middlesex, and within eight days after the appearance day in any other county, enter the appearance of such defendant with the proper officer; and if he do not, he shall be liable to an attachment, and not discharged therefrom till he hath paid full costs to the plaintiff; and the defendant, when he appears, shall be compelled to plead as of the time when he should have pleaded, if his appearance had been duly entered c." The usual mode of proceeding against an attorney, for not filing common bail, or entering an appearance, pursuant to his undertaking, is by attachment d; and if an attorney undertake to appear, the courts will oblige him to do it in a proper manner: therefore, if he undertake to appear for an infant, he must appear by guardian. And though he may have been imposed upon by the sheriff's officer, vet they will oblige him to fulfil his undertaking f. But a general undertaking by an atterney to appear to process, does not oblige him to put in special bail to bailable process s. And where the attorney for the defendants, on their being sued by the plaintiff, undertook, by letter, to procure their signature to a cognovit for payment of the debt and costs, which he failed to do, but the plaintiff afterwards said that he would proceed with the action; the court of Common Pleas held, that this was virtually a waiver of the attorney's undertaking, and that he could not be called on by the court to perform it h.

Before the statute 12 Geo. I. c. 29. common bail could only have been By plaintiff, acfiled, or a common appearance entered, by the defendant, or his attorney. 12 Geo. I. c. 29. But now, by that statute i, as altered by the 5 Geo. II. c. 27. "for entering common appearances, or his deputy, fand which affidavit "shall be filed gratis,) may enter a common appearance, or file common " bail, for the defendant, and proceed thereon, as if such defendant had se entered his appearance, or filed common bail." The affidavit required by these statutes cannot be dispensed with a; nor can it be taken, in the King's Bench, before a commissioner who is concerned as attorney for the plaintiff: but in the Common Pleas it is otherwise b. And common bail cannot be filed, or a common appearance entered, by the plaintiff, till the winth day after the return of the writ; the defendant having all the eighth to file or enter it c. Common bail however should be filed, or a common appearance entered, by the plaintiff for the defendant, of the term in which the writ is returnable d: but it may be filed or entered as of that term, in the term next after the return of the write, or before the quarto die post of the first return of the following term; it being holden that till then, common had may be filed or an appearance entered, as of the preceding term . In practice, it is usual for the plaintiff to file common bail, or enter a common appearance, for the defendant, according to the statute, at any time before judgment is signed; though, if filed or entered in a subsequent term, it must be filed or entered as of the term in which the writ was returnable. And though judgment has been irregularly signed, without filing common bail for the defendant according to the statute, till after the term saccceding that in which the writ was returnable, and after the judgment itself has been entered up, yet the defendant, having given a cognovity is estopped from objecting to the irregularity, if the plaintiff has filed common bail nuncepro tunc, before the time of making the objection g. If the defendant be sued by a wrong name, and do not appear, the plaintin cannot rectify the mistake, by appearing for him in his right name, according to the statute h: nor can he appear for him in the name by which he is sued, and afterwards declare against him in his right name 1. But, in the Common Pleas, if the writ and declaration be against the defendant in his right name, an appearance entered for him by the plaintiff according to the statute, in a wrong name, may be amended k. Where the plaintiff, having sued out a writ against four defendants, for separate causes of action, and filed separate declarations against three of them conditionally, and given three separate rules to plead, afterwards entered a common appearance, according to the statute, for all the three defendants, and signed three separate interlocutory judgments for want of a plea, the court of King's Bench held this to be irregular: For, by declaring sepa-

OF SPECIAL BAIL.

Special bail, or ball above.

Paying money into court, in lieu of special ball.

Defendant having deposited money with sheriff, may, instead of perfecting special bail, allow deposit to be paid into court.

Or, if he remain in custody, or give bail to the sheriff, may pay the debt into court, with twenty pounds, to answer costs, and die common init.

When the defendant has been arrested, and discharged out of custody, upon giving bail to the sheriff for his appearance at the return of the writ, or upon depositing with the sheriff the sum for which he was arrested, together with 101 in addition for costs, he should regularly appear, if not surrendered to and in custody of the sheriff a, find put in and perfect special bail to the action, or bail above? so called, in contradistinction to sheriff's bail, or bail below. Or, instead of putting in and perfecting special bail, the defendant may, under the statute 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 71. deposit and pay into court the sum indorsed upon the writ, together with an additional sum, as a security for costs, to abide the event of the suit. By the above statute b, reciting that by an act passed in the 43d year of the reign of his late majesty, persons arrested upon mesne process were enabled, in lieu of giving bail to the sheriff, to deposit in his hands the sum indorsed upon the writ, together with ten pounds in addition, to answer the costs which might accrue up to the time of the return of the writ, and also such further sum. if any, as should have been paid for the king's fine upon any original writ, and should thereupon be discharged from such arrest; and that it was expedient to extend the provisions of the said act, and to enable persons who have been arrested, to deposit or pay into the court in which the writ shall be returnable, the sum indorsed upon the writ, together with an additional sum as a security for costs, to abide the event of the suit, instead of putting in and perfecting bail in the said action; it was enacted, that "in all cases in which any defendant shall have been discharged from " arrest, upon making such deposit as was required by the said recited act, " and the sum so deposited shall have been paid into court, it shall be law-" ful for such defendant, instead of putting in and perfecting special bail " in the action, according to the course and practice of the court, to allow " the sum so deposited with the sheriff, and by him paid into court as " aforesaid, together with the additional sum of ten pounds, to be paid into " court by such defendant, as a further security for the costs of the action, " to remain in the court, to abide the event of the suit: And in all cases " where any defendant shall have been arrested and given bail to the she-" riff, or shall have been arrested and remain in custody, it shall be lawful " for such last mentioned defendant, instead of putting in and perfecting " special bail, to deposit and pay into the said court, the sum indorsed on " the writ, together with the amount of the king's fine, if any, upon the " original writ, and the further sum of twenty pounds as a security for "the costs of the action, there to remain, to abide the event of the suit; " and thereupon the said defendant may, and he is thereby required, to " enter a common appearance, or file common bail in the action, within " such time as he would have been required to have put in and perfected " special hail in the action, according to the course of the said court; or in default thereof, the plaintiff in the action is thereby empowered to " enter such common appearance, or file common bail, for the said defend-" ant; and the cause may proceed, as if the defendant had put in and 7 Durat. &

King's Beuch, or warden of the Fleet prison. One bail is not deemed sufficient, even for the purpose of rendering the defendant b; but there must be two bail at least, and in general there are two only: though, in the King's Bench c, and Exchequer d, where the debt is large, the court will allow three or four persons to become bail, in different sums, amounting altogether to the requisite sum. In the Common Pleas, however, it is said that notice given to justify three bail is irregular e: And, in the Exchequer, if more than two persons are meant to be bail to a large amount, leave should be first asked of the court to permit them to justify; for they will not be allowed to do so, on motion merely in the ordinary course. In cases of felony, it is said to be an invariable rule to require four bail, in order to discharge a prisoner on a habeas corpus.

By whom put in.

Special bail may be put in by the defendant, or by his attorney, in pursuance of his undertaking; or by the sheriff c, or his bail d, for their own indemnity: And the sheriff, or his bail, may put in or justify bail above, by their own attorney?: In practice however it is usual for the attorney, employed by the sheriff or his bail to put in and justify bail above, to describe himself as the defendant's attorney in the notice, though he be not actually employed by the defendant f. It is no objection to bail, that they were put in by an uncertificated attorney g: Nor does it seem to be a ground for an attachment against the sheriff, that bail had been put in by a new attorney, without an order for the former attorney being changed h. But where two notices are given by different attornies, one on behalf of the defendent, and the other for the sheriff, of two different sets of bail, and the buil put in for the sheriff have already justified, the defendant is entitled to have his bail justified, and allowed i. If a defendant be arrested by process of the King's Bench, and removed by habeas corpus to the Common Pleas, he may put in and justify bail in either court k.

General qualification of bail. The general qualification of bail above is, that they should be howse-keepers, or freeholders; and, except where there are more than two bail, that they are respectively worth double the amount of the sum sworn to, or one thousand pounds beyond that sum, if it exceed one thousand pounds m, after payment of all their debts. A person resident in England has been admitted to be bail, in respect of mortgage money secured on an estate in Ireland n: and, in the Common Pleas, it seems that the court will permit the bail to justify as tenant by the curtesy of lands in the Isle of Man, without an affidavit or other evidence that the law of tenancy by the curtesy prevails there o. But a copyhold estate of the bail, in right of his wife, is not sufficient to qualify him to become bail p. And though it has been appled in the bail court, that long beneficial leases, at small rents, are sufficient to entitle bail to justify , yet this point does not seem to be settled b. A peer of the realm, or member of the house of commons, is not allowed to be bail, as not being liable to the ordinary process of the court. And a servant in the King's household, liable to be called upon to attend the person of his majesty, cannot justify as bail; for his person cannot be taken in execution. It is also a rule in both courts, that "no attorney shall be bail, in any action or suit depending therein f." This rule, which was calculated for the benefit of attornies, and intended to protect them against the importunity of their clients, has been extended to their clerksg. And, in the King's Bench, a conveyancer, engaged in partnership with an attorney of this court, and sharing the general profits of the business of the office, though he did not himself practise as an attorney, was not allowed to justify as bail h. But the sixty sworn clerks, of the six clerks in Chancery, do not come within the operation of the rule, which prohibits attornics from being bail. And an attorney, or his clerk, may be put in as bail, though he cannot justify k; and if not excepted to, he is liable to be sued on his recognizance. So, he has been allowed to become bail, in order to surrender the defendant immediately, without justification m. It is also a rule, founded on principles of prudent jealousy, that "no sheriff's officer, bailiff, or other person concerned in the execution of process, shall, in either court, be permitted to be bail, in any action or suit depending therein' " which latter rule has been applied to the keeper of the Poultry compter, a turnkey of the King's Bench prison, and marshalsea court officers q. Bankrupts, who have not obtained their certificates, are not allowed to be bail, for want of property ; or such as have been twice bankrupts, and not paid fifteen shillings in the pound under the second commission. And for the same reason, insolvent debtors, discharged under any of the general insolvent acts t, are disqualified from being bail; as their

And if added bail be excepted to, on the ground that the original bail were afternies' clerks, the court will give time to put in and justify fresh bail c.

Where a verdict has been found for the plaintiff, in a larger sum than in the judge's order to hold to bail, the defendant, in order to obtain his discharge out of custody, must justify bail in such larger sum; unless a rule has been made absolute for a new trial, in which case it is sufficient for the bail to justify in the smaller sum . And, after final judgment has been signed, the defendant's bail may put in fresh bail, for the purpose of rendering him k.

Time for putting in, in K. B.

In the King's Bench, if the defendant be arrested in London or Middle-sex, special bail should be put in within four days exclusive, or, if in any other county, within six days after the return of the process, or quarto die post by original m: And if either the fourth or sixth day fall on a Sunday, the defendant has all the Monday following to put in bail n. But, excepting Sunday, bail above may be put in on a dies non juridicus, as on the second of February, which is considered as a day for such business as is transacted at a judge's chambers o. In the Common Pleas, on process returnable the first return of the term, special bail should be put in within four days, in London or Middleser, or, in any other city or county,

How put in, before a judge in town, in K. B.

In the King's Bench, special bail are put in, before a judge in town, at his chambers; and, in actions by bill, their recognizance is taken by the judge's clerk, on a bail-pieced, made out by the defendant's attorney; stating the term, the county into which the writ issued e, and the names of the parties, together with the names and additions of the bail, and the sum sworn to. In actions by original, in the King's Bench, special bail are put in before a judge in town, with the filacer or his clerk, who enters it of the county into which the capius issued f; the defendant's attorney first making out and delivering to him a note in writing, answering to the bail-piece by bill g: and bail must likewise be put in in that county, on a testatum capias h. But where the defendant had been arrested on a testatum capias from Middlesex to Kent, and bail was put in in the latter county, Kent being inserted in the bail-piece, but in the margin these words, " Testatum from Middlesex," the court held, that the notice in the margin made it regular ! And where the defendant, by mistake, put in bail in the Common Pleas, to an action in the King's Bench, and thereby misled the plaintiff, who declared without discovering the mistake, the court ordered the defendant to rectify the same, by putting in and perfecting hail in the King's Bench, of the proper term k. The recognizance of bail by bill, in the King's Bench, if taken before judgment, is general, that if the defendant be condemned in the action, he shall satisfy the costs and condemnation money, or render himself to the custody of the marshal; or that the bail will pay the costs and condemnation money for him m: And

The entry of bail in the filacer's book is of the term generally, which of course relates to the first day of it; and therefore, in an action on a bail bond, if the issue depend on the date of the appearance, the court, upon an application by the plaintiff, will order the day of appearance to be entered in the filacer's book; although issue has been already joined on the plea of comperuit ad diem'. Formerly, the Recognizance defendant, in the Common Pleas, might have entered into the recognizance of bail himself; and in that case he was bound in double the sum sworn to, and each of the bail in the single sum only k; but now, by a late rule l, " in all actions requiring bail, the defendant shall not be permitted to enter into the recognizance; but the bail shall each of them enter into a recognizance, in double the sum sworn to, or, by a subsequent rule m, one thousand pounds beyond that sum, if it exceed one thousand pounds. the Exchequer, there is a similar rule n: And, in that court, the form of a recognizance of bail after judgment, and before the defendant has been charged in execution, is to render him to the prison of the Fleet, on or before the fourth day of the next following term o.

Time for trans-

piece, in K. B.

In C. P.

When, and with whom, bail-piece must be filed.

Misnomer of parties, on putting in bail.

Lordon, and it appeared on the face of the ball-piece, that they had been put in at Lancaster, the court held that the boil-piece was wrong, and that it should have been taken as upon a testatum from London into the county palatine . In both courts, an affidavit of the due taking of the bail should be made, either before the judge to whom the bail-piece is transmitted, or before a commissioner for taking affidavits b; which affidavit is in general made before a commissioner, (not being the person who took the bail,) and annexed to the bail-piece c: but no such affidayit is necessary upon the transmission, when the bail is taken by a judge of as-The rules of court require the bail-piece to be transsize in his circuit. mitted to the chief-justice, or other judge of the court of King's Bench, in eight days, if taken within forty miles of London or Westminster, or, if taken above that distance, in fifteen days after the taking thereof; and in the Common Pleas, the bail, if taken within forty miles of London, should be transmitted within ten days, or, if taken above that distance, within imenty days after the taking thereof d; unless all the judges are on their circuits, and then as soon as any one of them is returned e. But it is said that, notwithstanding these rules, the bail-piece must actually be filed with one of the judges, on the sixth day after the return of the writ in the King's Bench, or eighth day in the Common Pleas, or the bail-bond may be assigned f. And where the action is by original, in the King's Bench or Common Pleas, the bail-piece being transmitted and allowed by the judge, should be filed with the filacer of the county where the action is laid g.

In putting in special bail, the parties to the suit should be named as in the process, unless the defendant be called therein by a wrong name, and mean to avail himself of the misnomer; in which case he should put in bail in his right name, stating that he was arrested or sued by the name in the writ: For if a defendant, sued by a wrong name, appear and perfect bail by his right name, without identifying himself as the person sued by the other name, the plaintiff may treat the bail as a nullity, and attach the sheriff h. And if the defendant, after being arrested, were to put in bail above in a wrong name, it would estop him from pleading the misnomer in abatement; even though he were himself no party to the recognizance k. But where the plaintiff sued out an original writ against the defendant in his wrong name, the pracipe being right, and the defendant put in bail in his right name, the court set aside an attachment obtained against the sheriff, for not bringing in the body, but without costs on either side 1: And where the defendant was named in the notice of bail by his right name, as

If the parties be rightly named in the recognizance of bail, it is sufficient, where there is no exception, though they are mismaned in the affidavits of sufficiency, and acknowledgment of the bail b.

And when they are taken de bene esse, the de- Notice of bail. fendant's attorney should give notice thereof in writing, without delay, to the plaintiff's attorney f. Formerly, the defendant's attorney was re- In K. B. quired to give notice of bail, in the King's Bench, to the plaintiff's attorney, before it was put in 8; and the plaintiff's attorney, on such notice being given to him, was obliged to attend before a judge, to accept of, or except to the bail h: But notice of bail is not now given, until after it is put in; and though it should regularly be given before the time for putting in bail is expired, yet if it be not given in time, the plaintiff cannot, after notice, regularly take an assignment of the bail bond i. In the In C. P. Common Pleas, where bail was put in in due time, the defendant was not formerly bound to give notice thereof, but the plaintiff must have searched in the filacer's book k; though it was otherwise, if they had not been put in in due time1: But now, by a late rule of court m, "when special bail is put in for the defendant, a notice in writing of such bail being so put in, must be forthwith given to the plaintiff's attorney or agent; and special bail shall not be considered as put in, until such notice shall be given."

The notice of bail in town is, that they are put in "; or, if taken before Form of. a commissioner, that the bail-piece is filed, with an affidavit of the due taking thereof, at a judge's chambers; or, in actions by original, in the King's Bench or Common Pleas, that the bail has been allowed by a judge, and the bail-piece and affidavit are filed with the filacer. The origin of bail de bene esse is thus related by Glyn, Ch. J. " A bishop, (says he,) having arrested a man for a large debt, he tendered bail to chief justice Richardson, who took it in his chamber; and the bail being insufficient, the bishop represented the matter to parliament, and prayed their remedy for it: upon which it was enacted, that no bail, taken before a judge in his chamber, should bind the plaintiff, without his assent thereto, or the confirmation of such bail taken by all the court." 2 Sid. 91. should set forth with trith and certainty, their names places of abode ; and degrees or mysteries , in order that the plaintiff may have an opportunity of inquiring after them d: And if the bail above are the same persons as were bail to the sheriff, it is usually so expressed in the notice.

In setting out their places of abode.

In setting out the places of abode of the bail, it seems sufficient to describe them in the notice, by their place of business . But the parish wherein they live, without the street, or other certain place of their residence, is too vague a description f: And a mistake in the number of the house in which the bail resides, is a ground of rejection s. So, it is not sufficient to describe the bail generally, as of a large town, such as Liverpool h, Lancaster 1, Leeds k, Leicester k, Birmingham 1, or the town and county of the town of Nottingham m, without any further description, to direct the plaintiff in his enquiries as to their sufficiency: In all large towns, the street ought to be mentioned in the notice n. And a description of bail as of one of the large villages near London, such as Claphamo, or Walworth P, or Battle Bridge 4, is too general, if there be a known and particular designation of the place where the bail resides. But when the plaintiff has had a long time to inquire after the bail r, or has in fact found them 4, the court will not reject the bail, on account of a generality of description, which would otherwise have been fatal: And, in the Common Pleas, the court will not take judicial notice of the size of the place, where the bail are described as residing; and if it be too large, that fact must be shewn by affidavit t. As to the degree or mystery of the bail, a schoolmaster 4, or clerk in the custom-house x, is holden to be well described as a gentleman: but the description of bail as a gentleman, when it appears he is a servant , or clerk in a mercantile house , or has recently been a butcher, and is about to set up again in that trade s, is insufficient; and though the bail has been found, yet the objection is not aided . So, where a baker was described in the notice as a gentleman, the court of Common Pleas rejected him; and desired it might be understood in future, as a general rule, that a false addition to the name of the bail, should be considered as a ground of rejection *. But it is not a sufficient ground for rejecting a

It seems that shopkeeper is in general a sufficient description of bail b; though bail so described have, under particular circumstances, been rejected b. The notice of bail should regularly. Service of nobe served, either upon the plaintiff's attorney personally, or upon some clerk or servant in his office: but when the attorney cannot be met with, and his office is not open, it is sufficient to stick up a copy of the notice in the King's Bench office, and put another under the attorney's door c. And service of notice of bail, by leaving the same at a stationer's, where the plaintiff's attorney's papers are usually left for him, has been deemed sufficient d.

The plaintiff or his attorney, upon being served with this notice, either Acceptance of accepts of, or excepts to the bail. If he accept of them, the defendant's bail-piece. attorney, in the King's Bench, should cause the bail-piece to be filed with the master, within twenty days after such acceptance e: or if the plaintiff do not except to the bail for insufficiency, within twenty days next after notice thereof given to him or his attorney, then, upon an affidavit in writing of such notice on the back of the bail-piece, for which affidavit no fee shall be taken, the bail-piece shall be filed by the defendant's attorney, within four days next after the end of the twenty days. But if the plaintiff be not satisfied with the bail, he may except to them in either court, and thereby compel a justification. If the bail to the sheriff become bail After assignabove, the plaintiff, in the King's Bench, is not at liberty to except to them, after he has taken an assignment of the bail bond g; for by so doing, he has admitted them to be sufficient: but if exception be taken to the bail before the bond is assigned, they are bound to justify, notwithstanding such assignment h: and in the Common Pleas it is a rule, that "in all In C. P. cases wherein bail bonds shall be taken, and the same bail is put in above, the plaintiff may except against such bail i." The delivery of a declaration After delivery of in chief before special bail put in, is holden, in both courts, to be a waiver of the bail; and, before justification, it is an acceptance of them k: But the plaintiff may declare de bene esse, or conditionally, provided good bail be put in, or the bail already put in do justify 1; though the demand or acceptance of a plea will even then, in general, be deemed a waiver of the bail, or justification m. But when bail above is not put in at the time of ruling the sheriff to return the writ, or bring in the body, he must put in and perfect bail at his peril, or reader the defendant, within four days in a town cause, or six days in a country cause, without any exception; for otherwise, if the plaintiff excepted, the sheriff would have four days after exception to perfect bail, and by that means would have more than the time allowed him, by the practice of the court, to return the writ aid bring in the body.

Title of notice.

In the King's Bench, the exception to bail, if put in in due time, should be entered in the bail book at the judge's chambers by bill'd, or in the filacer's book by originale, within twenty days after notice of bail put in or filed, and not afterwards. If it be not entered within that time, the bail becomes absolute h; and the bail-piece should be filed by the defendant's attorney, within four days after the end of the twenty days i. But if bail above be not put in in due time, they must be justified, though not excepted to by the plaintiff k. The exception being entered, notice thereof should be given in writing, without delay, to the defendant's attorney?: and "if the notice be given in term-time, the defendant shall procure his " bail to justify in four days exclusive after such notice; or shall add other " bail, who shall justify within the said four days; but if such exception " be entered in vacation, and notice thereof given in like manner, the bail " put în, or other additional bail, shall justify upon the first day of the " subsequent term "." The notice of exception to bail should be entitled in the cause; and if not so entitled, it is a nullity, although served upon the defendant's attorney at the same time as the declaration n. And notice of exception to bail, entitled by mistake "In the Lord Mayor's court," instead of "In the King's Bench," is a nullity; and an attachment against the sheriff was in consequence set aside o.

the bail already put in intend to justify, one day's previous notice of justification, or notice for the next day, is deemed sufficient?; unless Sunday interrene, and then notice must be given on Saturday for Monday. But where other bail are added to those already put in there must be two days' previous notice of justification, one inclusive and the other exclusive, as Monday for Wednesday , or, if Sunday intervene, Saturday for Tuesday, &c. In the Common Pleas, two days' notice of justification must be given, as well where the bail already put in intend to justify, as in the case of added bail't. And Sunday is not reckoned a day for this purpose: therefore, notice of added bail on Saturday for Monday is not sufficient. If the time allowed for justifying expire on a day in term, which happens to be Midsummer day, or any other holyday when the court does not sit, the notice of justification, in the King's Bench, should be for the day they ought to justify, to prevent an assignment of the bail bond; and the bail may justify the next day as a matter of course e: but, in the Common Pleas, the natice ought to be given for the bail to justify on the following day f. In the Exchequer, the clerk in court must sign all the proceedings: It is not sufficient that it be done by the attorney or agent g: Therefore, bail in that court were not allowed to justify, when the notice of justification was signed by a person describing himself as the defendant's agent, not being an attorney of the Exchequer, or clerk in court h. And a notice to justify bail on a day on which the court sits in equity, is holden to be a bad notice i.

When bail above is put in, and exception entered in vacation, the defendant's attorney, in the King's Bench, must, within four days after the exception, give notice of justification of the same bail for the first day of the next term; or the plaintiff may take an assignment of the bail bondk: It is not necessary, however, that the same bail should justify; the rule of court 1 requiring, that if the exception be entered in vacation, and notice thereof given, the bail put in, or other additional bail, shall justify on the first day of the subsequent term: and therefore, where bail were excepted to in vacation, and the defendant gave four days notice of justification for the first day of the next term, but two days before that time gave notice of added bail, the court of King's Bench held, that the latter bail were entitled to justify m. In the Common Pleas, notice of justification may be given at any time in vacation, so as there be two days notice before the first day of the next term n: And, in that court, two days notice of bail is not required on an attachment, but renegrable notice is sufficient a. In In Exchequer. the Exchequer, when an exception is entered in vacation, notice of justification for the first day of the ensuing term, must be given within four days after such exception b; and the bail cannot regularly justify at chambers in vacation, without consent, except in the case of a prisoner c.

The notice of justification of bail, like the notice of putting it in d, must Service of notice be personally served, either upon the plaintiff's attorney, or upon some clerk or servant in his office e. And service of the notice of justification on the master of a house, in which the attorney had an office, is not sufficient, unless some privity be shewn to exist between them ? attorney be not at chambers in office hours, service on a person with whom his papers are directed to be left, is deemed sufficient g: and notice of justification may be stuck up in the King's Bench office, for the plaintiff's attorney, who had no known place of residence or business h. must have been formerly served before ten o'clock at night, in the King's Bench ; or nine o'clock at night, in the Common Pleas k. And, in the former court, it was holden, that an affidavit that the office door was shut, and the notice left there, before ten o'clock at night, would not suffice 1, unless the plaintiff's attorney had afterwards acknowledged the receipt of it m; and that service of the notice of justification after ten o'clock was bad, though the person on whom it was served read, or even retained it ". But where notice of bail was served in due time, by leaving it at the office of the plaintiff's attorney, who returned it the next day in a letter, saying that he should not accept the notice, because he had taken an assignment of the bail bond, but the letter did not state the time when the notice was received, this was deemed a sufficient acknowledgment to render the service of the notice effectual o. And now, it is a rule in all the courts p, that " every notice for justifying bail in person, shall be served before cleven o'clock in the forenoon of the day on which, according to the present practice, such notice ought to be served; except in case of an order of the court for further time, in which case it shall be sufficient to serve the notice before three o'clock in the afternoon of the day on which such order shall be granted: and in all the cases aforesaid, the affidavit of service shall specify the time of day at which such notice shall be served." This rule, however, does not seem to apply to country bail, who are justified by affidavit.

OF SPECIAL BAIL.

Bail court, in K. B.

The court in which bail are added and justified, in the King's Bench, (commonly called the bail court,) is now usually holden before one of the judges of that court, in pursuance of the statute 57 Geo. III. c. 11. by which it is declared to be lawful "for any one of the judges of the King's " Bench, when occasion shall so require, to sit apart from the other " judges of the same court, in some place in or near to Westminster hall, " for the business of adding and justifying special bail, in causes depend-" ing in the same court, whilst others of the judges are at the same time " proceeding in the dispatch of the other business of the same court in " bank, in its usual place of sitting for that purpose in Westminster hall; " and the proceedings so had by and before such one of the judges, so sit-" ting apart for those purposes, are made as good and effectual in the law, " to all intents and purposes, as if the same were had before the court as-" sembled and sitting as usual, in its ordinary place of sitting in West-" minster hall." In the Common Pleas and Exchequer, there is no distinct or separate court for the justification of bail.

No bail court in C. P. or Exchequer. Time of justifying bail, in K. B.

It was formerly a rule a, made in consequence of the obstruction of access to Westminster hall during Mr. Hastings's trial, that the court of King's Bench should sit in Serjeant's Inn hall, every morning during term, from half past eight o'clock till ten, for the purpose of taking justifications of bail, and hearing motions of course, and discharging insolvent debtors; and that it should adjourn on Mondays, Fridays and Saturdays, from Serjeant's Inn to Westminster hall, to transact the usual business, except the justifying of bail and discharging insolvent debtors, which business was directed to be transacted entirely at Serjeant's Inn hall; and it was ordered, that the bail should attend before half past nine, and that if they did not, they should not be permitted to justify. This rule was repealed by a subsequent one b, ordering, that the sittings of the court in Serjeant's Inn hall, should be discontinued; and that the business there transacted should be done in the court of King's Bench at Westminster, where one of the judges would sit, during term-time, every morning at half past nine o'clock, for the purpose of taking the justification of bail, and discharging insolvent debtors; and it was directed, that no bail should be permitted to justify after ten o'clock: And accordingly, when the bail court was established, Mr. Justice Bayley, sitting in that court, directed it to be understood in future, that bail intended for justification, must be in Westminster hall, by half past nine o'clock in the morning; and that if the bail were not ready, and the papers delivered to counsel by ten o'clock, no bail would be taken after that hour c. When there are but few bail, it is necessary that they should be very punctual in the time of their attendance; for if they are not ready when the judge takes his seat, he will not wait for them till ten o'clock; but when the bail are numerous, the exact time of their attendance is not so material: And, on the last day of term, bail are still allowed to justify, as formerly, in full court, at its rising, whether by affidavit or otherwise. In the Common Pleas, it is a In C. P. rule? that "bail shall justify at the sitting of the court only, and at no other time, except on the last day of term, when bail, who may have been prevented from attending at the sitting of the court, shall be permitted to justify at the rising of the court." And, in the Exchequer, the junior In Exchequer. baron attends in court alone, a few minutes before ten o'clock, every morning during term, for the purpose of taking the justification of bail, and such motions as are merely of course; and it is expected that all such matters should be then brought on, in order that they may be disposed of before the court is full, that they may not interfere with the more important business b. This, however, does not extend to the justification of bail by affidavit c. But no bail will be permitted to justify in person, unless they are in attendance, and counsel instructed, by half past ten o'clock at the latest d.

The justification of bail is either in person or by affidavit. When the Justification of bail are put in before a judge in town, whether by bill or original, they must personally appear in court; or, by consent e, before a judge at his chambers: and in order to justify themselves, must swear that they are housekeepers, or freeholders, and, if more than Iwo, that they are respectively worth double the sum sworn to, or 1000l. beyond that sum, if it exceed 10001f., after all their debts are paid, or over and above all debts or demands due from them to any person or persons whomsoeverg; it not being sufficient for bail to swear they are worth a certain sum, exclusive of their debts h. Bail put in before a commissioner must justify themselves in the How, when put same manner, where they live in London or Westminster, or within ten miles thereof: But where they live at a greater distance, they may be justified, without their personal attendance, by affidavit, duly taken before the commissioner, of their being housekeepers, &c. k; and they may be so justified, though the defendant has been arrested in London, in a town cause 1; nor is it necessary that, in bail by affidavit, both the bail should justify before the same commissioner m. The affidavit of justification must Affidavit of jusstate the addition of the degree or mystery, as well as the names and places of residence of the bail n; and it is usually annexed to the bail-piece, and a copy of it delivered to the plaintiff's attorney, at the time of giving him notice of the bail-piece being filed; after which, if an exception be entered, which seldom happens, the affidavit must be produced and read in court as a justification, upon notice given thereof, and an affidavit of the service of such notice. An affidavit that A. and B., and each of them, were worth double the sum sworn to in the affidavit to hold to bail, exclusive of all debts due to any other person, is sufficient a. And the affidavit of justification need not be sworn before the same commissioner, as the affidavit of taking the bail b. In the Exchequer, the affidavit of justification of country bail ought to be taken before the bail commissioner; and the affidavit of caption, before a commissioner for taking affidavits, or the baron to whom the bail is transmitted c.

Affidavit of service of notice of justification.

Justifying, or opposing bail.

When the bail are to be justified in court, an affidavit must be made of the service of notice of justification d; which should state the manner in which the notice of justification was served c. And where the notice of justification was served, and affidavit of the scrvice thereof made, by different attornies, without a rule to change the former attorney, the bail were This affidavit should be properly entitled s: and is delivered to counsel in the King's Bench, or a serjeant in the Common Pleas, with a brief or motion paper, indorsed "to move to justify the within bail:" And at the time appointed by the notice of justification, they are allowed to justify, if present, as a matter of course; unless they are opposed by counsel vivâ voce, or, if taken before a commissioner, upon cross affidavits h. If bail are to be added, they ought to attend for the purpose, in the King's Bench, before the judge goes into the bail court, otherwise they are themselves delayed, and the business is impeded: and care should be taken, in actions by bill, to have the bail-piece in court, otherwise the bail cannot justify : In actions by original, the filacer attends with his book. And when bail are opposed in two actions, they must be opposed in each separately k. In the King's Bench, opposition to bail must be before justification; and a mistake of counsel, in not opposing in time, will not be a ground for being afterwards permitted to examine them 1. So, in the Common Pleas, if bail justify, without the observation of counsel instructed to oppose them, the court will not require them to come up again, and justify de novo m.

Grounds of opposing. Defect in bailpiece.

The common grounds of opposing bail are first, that there is some defect in the bail-piece. But where the bail-piece was not entitled of the court, or in the cause n, or it did not appear thereby, that the person before whom the bail was taken was a commissioner o, time was given, in the King's Bench, to amend the defect. And when bail has been put in by a wrong name, a misnomer in the bail-piece may be amended, if the bail be rightly named in the notice.

Secondly, It is a good ground of opposition, that there is some defect in Defect in notice the notice of bail; which should truly and accurately describe the persons of bail. intended to justify, so that the plaintiff may not be misled: and therefore, where one of the bail was described as the housekeeper, and it turned out that his father was really the occupier of the house, the bail court would not permit him to justify, nor grant time to add and justify another, without an affidavit repelling all intention to mislead. So, notice given of bail as put in before one judge, when in fact they were put in before another. is irregular c: And, in the King's Bench, any material defect in the notice of bail, as that it is not properly entitled d, or that it does not set forth with truth and certainty, the names of places of abode f, and degrees or mysteries & of the bail, will be a good ground for opposing them; provided it be verified by affidavit, that the defendant's attorney has not from that cause been able to find them, and make the requisite enquiries into their sufficiency: But where that is not the case, and there is no ground to suspect fraud, objections of this sort are in general overruled, or the court will give time to correct them.

Thirdly, Bail may be opposed, on account of some defect in the form, or In notice of jusirregularity in the service, of notice of justification; or in the affidavit of such service h. In the King's Bench, we have seen i, the christian and surnames of the bail should regularly be inserted in the notice of justification, as well as in the notice of their being put in k: And it is a good ground of rejection, that one of the bail referred to in the notice, as the bail put in before, is described by a different christian name from that which was before given him 1. But it is no ground for rejecting bail, that the plaintiff's and defendant's names are transposed, in the notice of justification m. It is said, that the notice of justification ought to contain the addition of the bail n: but this, it is conceived, only applies to added bail; for it seems that, in the King's Bench, when the same bail are regularly put in and excepted to, the defendant need not describe them in his notice of justification o. And where the notice of justification did not state the addition of the bail, but described him, contrary to the fact, as bail of whom notice had before been given, time was allowed to justify, on condition that the defendant should produce an affidavit that the error was accidental P. In the Common Pleas, we have seen a that, by a late rule of court, the names and descriptions of the original, or added, bail must in all cases be inserted in the notice of justification. And bail by affidavit were rejected in that court, on the ground that one of them was described in the notice of justification as J. M. generally, but in the affidavit of justification, as J. M. the younger b. But, previously to the above rule, where bail had been misnamed in the notice of justification, and was sworn accordingly, the court of Common Pleas permitted him to justify, on his swearing that he had sufficient property; it appearing that he had been foundaby the party inquiring after him, with reference to his becoming bail c: And the want of a description in the notice of justification of bail already put in, was holden to be waived by the plaintiff's having excepted to them; as he must have seen, when he entered his exception in the filacer's book, where the bail lived, so as to give him an opportunity of inquiring after themd. When there is a wrong christian name in the notice of justification, the bail court will allow turn to ascend and justify e: And where, in the case of bail by affidavit, the magnes of the bail were omitted in the notice of justification, through the neglect of the attorney in the country, the court gave two days' time to serve fresh notice, there being no suggestion that the omission was for the purpose of delay f. But the bail court will not allow time to correct a misnomer, in the notice of justification of bail by habeas corpus s. In the King's Bench, notice of justification by three bail, has been holden good h; though it is otherwise in the Common Pleas i: but notice that A. B. and C., or two of them, will justify, is irregular k. And, in the latter court, special bail are allowed to justify, although they did not actually become bail, before the notice of their justification was delivered to the plaintiff's attorney or agent 1.

In service of notice of justification, or affidavit of such service. It has been already shewn, in what manner the notice of justification should be served m: and if the service of such notice, or the affidavit thereof, be defective, the bail will be rejected; unless time be asked by counsel to rectify the mistake, which is in general granted, on condition of putting the plaintiff in the same situation as he would have been in, if the mistake had not happened. Indeed, this is quite a matter of course, if the bail be not opposed, and the objection arise from a mere mistake or clerical error, as where the affidavit of service is not properly entitled n. And where there were two different notices of justification, one being of added bail, and the affidavit of service did not designate which of the notices had been served on the plaintiff's attorney, it was holden, that the affidavit was defective, and must be amended and re-sworn, before the bail could justify o. fendant eight to have known that directimatance; before notice was given. But an attorney or his clerk, we have seen b, may be put in as bail, though he is not in general allowed to justify; and an attorney who had not practised for six years, has been permitted to justify as bail. So, the husband of a defendant, who had married after the arrest, and before the return of the writ, has been allowed to be bail.

Indemnified by defendant's attorney, &c. Sixthly, It is a rule in the Common Pleas e, and has become the settled practice of the King's Bench f, that "no person shall be permitted to justify himself as good and sufficient bail, if he shall have been indemnified for so doing, by the attorney concerned for the defendant." Under this rule, the court of Common Pleas rejected bail, who had received a verbal promise of indemnity from the defendant's attorney; though they allowed the defendant time to put in fresh bail g: In the King's Bench, bail was rejected, where he was to receive a commission on the amount for which he proposed to justify h. And where it appeared, after bail had justified, that money had been given to one of them for his trouble and loss of time in coming up to justify, the court, though they did not set aside the allowance of bail, imposed terms upon the defendant, of producing an affidavit of merits, bringing the sum sworn to into court, and taking short notice of trial! But it is no objection to bail, that they are indemnified by the sheriff's officer k, or a third person!

Objection to bail, that they are not housekeepers, or freeholders, in K. B.

Seventhly, One of the principal objections to bail is, that they are not housekeepers, or freeholders in. And bail cannot justify as a housekeeper, in respect of a house which he has taken, if prevented from obtaining possession by a death in the family of the former tenant n; or who has ceased to be a house-keeper, since he agreed to become bail o: nor the occupier of a tap connected with a tavern, the licence being taken out in the name of the tavern-keeper p; nor the occupier, under a lease of every room in a house except one, which is reserved for his landlord, who pays the taxes q: Also, bail was rejected, who had rented a house, and underlet the same to another, who paid the taxes, and let the first floor to the bail; but the landlord refusing to accept the undertenant, the rent for the whole house was paid by the latter to the bail, who paid it over to the landlord. If the bail however are housekeepers, the rent of their houses is immaterial, though it be under ten pounds *; nor is it necessary that they should have been assessed to the poor's rate t: though bail have been rejected, for not paying arrears of king's taxes ". In the Common Pleas, the court allowed a person to justify as bail, in respect of a house kept by him and his partner, who carried on husiness therein, where the rent and taxes were paid by them jointly, and his partner resided in the house, though he lodged himself at a considerable distance therefrom :: And where a person had taken a house, occupied by several tenants or lodgers, from one of whom he had received rent, he was holden to be qualified to justify as bail, although he had not occupied the house himself b. The plaintiff also, in that court, may waive the qualification of the bail being housekeepers, &c. in which case they only swear, in justifying, to the amount of their property c. In the Exchequer, a person employed by the commissioners In Exchequer. in the repair of water-works, who was allowed a house to live in during the period of his employment, for which he paid no rent or taxes, was permitted to justify as bail d. But a person living in lodgings in London, was not allowed to justify as bail, although he was a housekeeper in Scotland. Where a bail has ceased to be a housekeeper, at the time he comes up to justify, the bail court will give time to add and justify another in his stead f: but where notice had been given of bail, one of whom was notoriously not a housekeeper, and had refused to become bail on that ground, after he had agreed to do so, the bail court refused time to add and justify another g.

Time to add and justify.

Eighthly, It is a good objection to the sufficiency of bail, that they are not respectively worth double the amount of the sum sworn to, or one thousand pounds beyond that sum, if it exceed one thousand pounds, after payment of all their debts. To this head may be referred bankrupts, who have not obtained their certificates h, or such as have been twice bankrupts, and not paid fifteen shillings in the pound under the second commission i, and insolvent debtors, discharged under the general insolvent act, who are not allowed to be bail, until they have paid all their debts k. And a bail who had been recently a bankrupt, was not permitted to justify, although he swore that he had since acquired property, by the bounty of his friends, to the requisite amount ! So, where one of the bail admitted on examination that he was a certificated bankrupt, but had since been arrested, and could not remember how often, but admitted that it was at least six times, the court rejected both, and would not grant further time to add and justify other bail m. And a bail was not permitted to justify, who had recently been bankrupt, and obtained his certificate, but did not know whether his estate had paid any dividend n; or who could not say whether, during the interval between his bankruptcy and certificate, he had or had not justified as bail o. But bankruptcy is not of itself an objection, when the party has obtained his certificate; and an insolvent debtor, discharged under the insolvent act, may be ball, after he has paid all his debts b.

Other grounds of insufficiency.

A bail has also been rejected, on the ground of insufficiency, who admitted that he had been bail before, but did not know in how many actions, or for what sums e; or swore, that he did not know whether he had been arrested or not, during the space of two years d; or who had suffered his father to receive parochial relief, or his children to be in the workhouse, without assigning a sufficient reason f; or because his name was on the books of the King's Bench prison as a prisoner, and the action, though supersedeable, was not actually superseded s. And it seems, that when the court orders the bail to submit their property to inspection, in order to ascertain its sufficiency to enable them to justify, the plaintiff may cause it to be appraised by a broker h. But it is no objection to bail, that he had been transported thirty years before i. And it seems, that the circumstance of not knowing the defendant, being only a mark of suspicion, may be explained away k. So, it is no objection to bail, that they are liable as indorsers of the bill of exchange on which the action is brought 1. But it is said to be a general rule, that so long as there are outstanding dishonoured bills which are not renewed, nor the right of proceeding upon them suspended, a person liable thereon cannot justify as bail m. And a bail was rejected, who had been bail to the sheriff in a former action, and not excepted to, it appearing that his property was not sufficient for both actions n; though time was allowed to add and justify another bail n. It has been doubted, in the Common Pleas, whether it is a sufficient objection to bail, that he lives within the verge of the court o; but it seems that this, without other suspicious circumstances, such as his being much in debt and the like, is not sufficient p. In the case of bail by affidavit, they will not be allowed to justify, if an affidavit be produced on the part of the plaintiff, that they have declared themselves to be insufficient q.

Liable on outstanding bills.

Living within verge of court, &c.

Foreigners, when allowed to be bail, and when not. Ninthly, Foreigners, it seems, are not admitted to be bail, merely in respect of property abroad, which is not liable to the process of the court; though it has been said, that merely having no property in England, is not of itself a sufficient objection, without other auxiliary circumstances. had for two years before traded between London and Portugal, and was then gone to Cadiz, whence she was expected to return, and was insured in London; the court of King's Bench permitted the bail to justify, although he did not swear to any effects in England a. So, bail Bail, having have been allowed to justify, in respect of property consisting partly of property abroad. cash, and partly of a freehold house at Gibraltar b. And the distinction seems to be between foreigners, and British subjects resident in this country: The former are not allowed to justify, in respect of property abroad; but with regard to the latter, it is said that the circumstance of their not having property in this country, subject to the process of the court, constitutes no objection to their becoming bail c.

Lastly, it is a rule in the King's Bench, that "whenever two or more Costs, on two notices of justification of bail shall have been given, before the notice on or more notices which bail shall appear to justify, no bail shall be permitted to justify, in K. B. without first paying, or securing to the satisfaction of the plaintiff, his attorney or agent, the reasonable costs incurred by such prior notices, although the names of the persons intended to justify, or any of them, may not have been changed, and whether the bail mentioned in any such prior notices shall not have appeared, or shall have been rejected d." Prior to the above rule, which does not apply to country bail o, the costs of the former oppositions were not allowed, although there had been three notices of justification, where one of the notices was merely of bail put in for the purpose of a render f. And where, upon the removal of a cause by habeas. corpus from an inferior court, three notices were given of the same bail, to justify in vacation, before different judges, and the plaintiff had incurred the expense of three oppositions, the bail court held that, on their appearing to justify upon a fourth notice, they had no authority to compel the payment of the costs incurred in consequence of the former notices; though it might be the subject of an application to the court, against the attorney, for vexatious proceedings g., In the Common Pleas, bail were not permit- In C. justify, till they had paid certain costs, the court permitted them to fastify on their own motion a. In the Exchequer, a too general description of bail, although a sufficient ground for opposing their justification, is not of itself enough to call upon the court to fix the defendant with the costs of the opposition at the time; but the consideration of costs will be reserved till the bail justify b.

Bail not justifying, out of court. Further time to justify. Motion for, must be supported by affidavit

Contents of affidavit, in K. B.

In C. P.

In what cases further time allowed, and in what not.

If the bail do not attend to justify at the time appointed, and no further time be given, they are said to be out of court. But further time is sometimes given, on the motion or suggestion of counsel, either to justify the same bail, or to add and justify others. And it is a rule, in the King's Bench d, that " when a motion is made for further time to justify bail, it must be supported by an affidavit of the special faces alleged in excuse of the bail not attending at the time mentioned in the notice of justification; or, in case further time be given upon suggestion of counsel, then the bail shall not be permitted afterwards to justify, unless, at the given time, such an affidavit be produced as before described." davit in such case should state, in the King's Bench, that the persons not attending had consented to become bail, and were believed to be competent to justify e; but that for some reason they had not been able to attend, or that the reason of their non-attendance is unknown: in the latter case, it is not unusual for the judge in the bail court to suspend giving time, till an affidavit satisfactorily explaining the non-attendance, has been laid before him f. And when the court granted indulgence for a particular day, to add and justify bail, and the party do not attend on that day, he cannot justify on a subsequent one, so as to prevent proceedings on the bail bond, or against the sheriff, for any previous default, without a fresh rule for that purpose g. In the Common Pleas, where bail were put in in time, but did not come to justify pursuant to notice, and the defendant's attorney gave a new notice for the next day, the court in one case permitted the bail to justify, on payment of the costs of the first attendance h. But from subsequent cases it seems, that nothing but the act of God, such as sudden illness, or some unforeseen accident, of a serious nature, will be deemed a sufficient excuse for the non-attendance of the bail, or a good ground for allowing time to substitute other persons in their stead i.

When an error or defect is discovered in the bail-piece, or notice of bail, or in the notice of justification k, or service thereof, or in the affidavit of such service, the court, we have seen 1, will give time to amend, or rectify the proceedings: And time is frequently granted for rectifying mistakes in country affidavits, of the caption of justification of bail; as where the jurat omits to name all the deponents, or contains any interlineation or erasures, or, in the case of an illiterate person, does not notice that the affidavit was read to the deponent, and that he seemed perfectly to understand its contents, and wrote his signature in the presence of the commissioners a. But the court, in these cases, will sometimes require an affidavit of merits b. So, when bail are prevented from justifying, by circumstances happening after they were put in, as by their subsequent bankruptcy c, or insolvency d, or by their kaying given up housekeeping e, &c. the court will in general allow further time to add and justify other And, in the Common Pleas, when the court give time to one of the bail to justify before a judge at chambers in vacation, a judge's summons for further time, returnable before the original time has expired, operates as a stay of proceedings g. and rule for fur- judge's order for time : And a mistake in drawing up a rule for further time to justify bail on a wrong day, is immaterial

The bail may be opposed, either by their personal examination or by affidavit. When the former method is adopted, the counsel, should endeavour, by a rigid examination, to obtain from the bail an acknowledgement of their real situation. When the latter mode is pursued, an affidavit should be produced, disclosing such facts as will convince the court, that there has been some irregularity or defect in the proceedings, or that the bail are incapable of fulfilling their engagement. be sworn and examined by an interpreter b. And, in opposing bail, they may be asked any questions respecting their qualifications as housekeepers, &c. and the nature and amount of their property, to the extent of the sum for which they are required to be answerable, but no further; and questions are not allowed to be asked, which will unnecessarily expose the circumstances of the bail, or of other persons. But where one of the bail was asked, whether he had not stood in the pillory for perjury, which question was objected to as tending to criminate him, the court overruled the objection, saying there was no impropriety in the question, as the answer could not subject him to any punishment; and the bail admitting the fact, he was of course rejected c. In opposing bail by affidavit, the affidavit must be put in and read, before they are examined; as it is a settled rule, that an affidavit impugning their sufficiency cannot be read, or the substance stated to the court, after any questions have been asked them d. It must set forth the particular objection intended to be relied ou, with certainty and precision; merely suggesting matters of report and general opinion, without alleging any particular fact, from which a distinct inference of incompetency can be collected, will be of no availe. Affidavits containing general statements of slanderous matter, injurious to the character of the bail, cannot be received f. And, in the Common Pleas, if the justification of bail by affidavit be opposed by another affidavit, stating the insolvency of one of the bail, the court will not allow the matters of the latter affidavit to be answered s.

When the bail, on cross examination, are guilty of gross prevarication, they may be committed to the custody of the marshal h, or to Newgate i, for a contempt of the court; and if they forswear themselves, they may be indicted for perjury k. But the court of Common Pleas will not set aside the justification of bail, on account of perjury subsequently discovered, but will leave the party to his indictment for perjury 1. "for false bail," and to be brought into the courts of King's Bench, Common Pleas and Exchequer; and this, upon his confession, was recorded in court, without other proceedings against him a. And, where For assuming bail had assumed feigned names, the court of Common Pleas ordered them and the attorney to be set in the pillory b. Also, by the statute 21 Jac. Personating I. c. 26. § 2. And, where bail had been personated, the court of King's Bench made the attorney pay costs to the plaintiff, and to the personated bail, and procure good bail, besides setting aside the execution that had issued against the personated bail . But the courts will not vacate the proceedings against the party personated, until the offender be convicted d; nor can a conviction take place, until the bail-piece be filed e.

When bail are opposed, they are either rejected, or allowed by the court, Rejection of unless further time be given to justify, or inquire into their circumstances f: And bail may be rejected, after having been permitted to pass, before the rule of allowance is drawn up, if sufficient cause be shewn, as that they were afterwards rejected in another action 8. The rejection of one bail is a rejection of both: therefore, where one bail only had been rejected, and notice was given of adding and justifying another, the court held, that the original notice was a nullity, and that there should have been a fresh notice of putting in and justifying de novoh. And, when bail are rejected, the plaintiff is at liberty to take an assignment of the bail bond, or proceed against the sheriff by attachment for not bringing in the body; unless further time be given to add and justify other bail. But bail who Bail rejected have been rejected are still competent to render the defendant, in the King's Bench, so long as they remain on the bail-piece i; though it is otherwise in the Common Pleas, where they must enter into a fresh recognizance, before they can render the defendant k. To detect frauds by hired baff offering themselves to justify, after they have been rejected in other actions, a book is kept by the master in the King's Bench; in which the names and descriptions of rejected bail are entered: And it is an established rule, that if bail has been once rejected, and entered in the master's book, the circumstances under which the rejection took place, cannot, on a subsequent occasion, be inquired into; and consequently, the party afterwards continues incompetent to become bail a. So, bail were rejected in the King's Bench, it appearing that one of them had been before rejected in the Palace court b. And where bail, of whom notice had been given, having been rejected in another cause on the day in which they were intended to justify, were not offered for justification, according to the notice; and on the next day, the defendant applied for time to add and justify, and to stay proceedings against the bail below; the bail court held that this could not be done, in the absence of the plaintiff, who was unapprized of the motion c. The general rule, however, that bail once rejected are always rejected, must be understood to apply only to cases where they have been rejected for insufficiency of property, or other good cause; and therefore, where bail had been rejected on a former occasion, merely the ground of their having been indemnified by the defendant's attorney, they were allowed to, justify a.

When bail are allowed, a rule or order of allowance should be drawn up, with the clerk of the rules in the King's Benche, or secondaries in the Common Pleas f, and a copy of it served on the plaintiff's attorney, or on the plaintiff himself, if he has not appointed an attorney: And where a plaintiff sued in person, and his residence was unknown to the defendant, and his servant refused to disclose it, the court of Common Pleas ordered, that the affixing a copy of the rule of allowance, and of that order, in the prothonotaries' office, should be deemed good service g. The rule of allowance, in the King's Bench, must be served on the plaintiff's attorney, even though he has opposed the justification of bail h; or though the bail justified after opposition of counsel, in the presence of the plaintiff's attorney i. and if it be not served, he may take an assignment of the bail bond k, or proceed by attachment against the sheriff! When bail justify at chambers by consent, the practice of the court requires that the defendant should serve a rule for their allowance, or at least give notice that they have justified m. And where a bail described himself as having property to a great amount, and the court directed an inquiry, which the bail eluded by running away, they would not permit the rule of allowance to be entitled of the term he came up to justify, but discharged the application with costs n. And a rule for the allowance of bail was discharged with costs, to be paid by the defendant, on an affidavit that the bail had perjured himself on his justification, in swearing that an action in which he had been bail, had been compromised b. It also seems, that the justification of bail may be set aside in that court, under circumstances of gross imposition and fraud, on the part of the bail c; and where the defendant's attorney is privy to their misconduct, the court will make him pay the costs of the application d. But if the, bail have sworn to a false account of their property, without the privity of the defendant or his attorney, the plaintiff it seems has no other remedy than by indictment for perjury e; though if the plaintiff can by any means connect the defendant, or his attorney, with the false swearing of the bail, the court will punish them; and they have the means to do so, for the one is, a suitor, and the other the officer of the court e.

but by original, it is entered by the filacer, after a recital of the process. And in this court, the course is always to enter it as taken in court, though it be actually taken by a judge in his chamber b, or by a commissioner in the country; neither is it a record till entered b: And if, in a joint action against two defendants, the recognizance of bail be entered by mistake as in an action against one only, and the plaintiff, after two writs of scire facias against the bail, and nihil returned to them, sign judgment against the bail, and take out execution, the court will set aside the judgment and execution for irregularity c. In the Common Pleas, the filacementers the recognizance on the roll d, and dockets it: And in that court, when it is taken by a judge in his chamber, or by a commissioner in the country, it may be entered specially; it being a record immediately upon the first caption, and binds the lands, before it is filed at Westminster e. Where the plaintiff was called by a wrong name in the recognizance roll, the court would not rectify the mistake, but gave judgment for the defendants, on an issue of nul tiet record f. So, they would not amend a clerical error, in the speller of the plaintiff's name in the recognizance, without the consent of the bail's: And where an original capias was issued into a county palatine, and the defendant was arrested and put in bail as upon a testatum, which was entered in Middlescx, and a declaration was afterwards delivered, in which the venue was laid in Lincolnshire, the court refused to interfere, after a considerable length of time, at the instance of the bail, by ordering the entry of the recognizance to be made conformable to the facts of the case h. But, in scire facias against bail, if there be a failure of record, through a misprision of the officer, the court will permit the entry of the recognizance to be amended i. And, in a subsequent case, the entry was amended, at the instance of the bail, where the plaintiff's name had been mis-stated k.

Such are the means of putting in and perfecting bail above, when the defendant is at large, in order to prevent an assignment of the bail-bond, or proceedings against the shcriff. Bail above may also be put in and perfected, at any time pending the action, where the defendant is in custody of the shcriff, or of the marshal of the King's Bench, or warden of the Fleet prison. And it may even be put in, for liberating the defendant, after final judgment against him, and before he is charged in execution 1;

But bail who have Fresh bail-piece rendered the defendant in their discharge, cannot afterwards justify, so as to release him from imprisonment, without entering into a fresh bailpiece. debt, or damages, and costs recovered, or render his body to the custody of the marshal of the King's Bench, or warden of the Fleet prison: and therefore, if the plaintiff declare in due time, for the cause of action expressed in the process and affidavit to hold to bail, and proceed thereon to judgment against the defendant, whether by confession, non sum informatus, or nihil dicit, or on demurrer, nul tiel record, or werdict, the bail are in general liable to pay the condemnation money, or render the defendant.

Extent of liability, in K. B.

In the King's Bench, the ancient course of the court was, that if a man became bail for another upon a latitat, &c. in any sum of money, however triffing, he was bail for him in all actions brought by the same mathtiff, during the same term, were the sums ever so great b. To rectify this extraordinary practice, a rule was made, that if the plaintiff should declare against the defendant, upon any bail by him put in, for a greater sum than was expressed in the process upon which the defendant was arrested, then the ball so put in should not be chargeable in that action. Still, however, the bail were liable to all actions, wherein the plaintiff declared for and recovered a less sum than was expressed in the process d; and where he declared for and recovered a greater sum, the bail were totally discharged c. At length it was resolved, that as on the one hand, there was no colour to subject the bail to more than they were bound in, let the plaintiff's demand be ever so much more; so, on the other hand, there was no reason why the plaintiff should suffer by his moderation in taking bail; but the recognizance should be considered as an agreement to pay to the extent of the sum sworn to and costs, or render the defendant f. And accordingly it is now settled, in the King's Bench, that where the plaintiff declares for or recovers a greater sum than is expressed in the process upon which he declares, the bail shall not be discharged; but be liable for so much as is sworn to, and indorsed on the process, or for any less sum, which the plaintiff in such action shall recover g, together with the costs of the original action h. And there is no distinction in practice, between actions commenced by bill and by original writ; but the court, in either case, will enter an exoneretur on the bail-piece, on payment of the sum sworn to and costs, though less than the sum acknowledged to be due i. The bail, however, are not liable to pay the costs of a writ of error k; nor is the plaintiff entitled to levy equitable costs, out of the penalty of the recognizance. In the Common Pleas, each of the bail is separately liable for the sum recovered, to the full extent of the penalty of the recognizance,

After judgment, it was anciently the course of the courts not to allow a After judgment, render, subsequently to the return of non est inventus to a capias ad satisfaciendumb. But great mischief resulted from this practice; for the facias. plaintiff would sue out a capias returnable the next day, so that the bail had little or no time to bring in the bodyc: To remedy which, when the plaintiff proceeded by scire facias, the judges indulged the bail so far, as to permit them to render the body, upon the return of the first scire facias, if the capias were returnable de die in diema; but if it were returnable the next term, the bail were strictly holden to render the principal by the return of it e. Popham Ch. J. extended this indulgence still farther; and permitted the bail to render any time before the return of the second scire facias, or upon the return, sedente curia. This practice, however, appears to have been disallowed by lord Cokes: but it was soon after revived, in the time of Croke Ch. J.h: and accordingly, it is now fully settled, that in the King's Bench, the render may be made at any time before the rising of the court, on the return day of the second scire facias, or of the first, when scire feci is returned, by bill1; or by original in that court, as well as in the Common Pleas, at any time before the rising of the court on the appearance day, or quarto die post of the return, of the second scire faciask, or of the first, where scire feci is returned, and not after m. Before the return of the capias ad satisfaciendum, the render is When matter of a matter of right, and may be pleaded. But afterwards it is allowed by the grace and favour of the courts o, and not ex debito justitiæ; for the condition of the recognizance is broken, upon the return of non est inventus to the capias: and therefore a subsequent render cannot be pleaded p; though, if made in time, the bail may be relieved by motion p. If the bail, at any time after the return of the capias, render the principal at a judge's chambers, and he be committed to a tipstaff, from whom he escapes or is rescued, that will not be a good render q; for the courts will not suffer the plaintiff to be prejudiced, by their indulgence to the bail.

in full term, next after the return of the latitat, or other process against the beila: and an intervening Sunday is to be reckoned as one of the eight days allowed for rendering the defendant b. If there be not the full number of days in the same term, they must be made up in the following one: And if an action be brought here against bail, on a recognizance taken in the Common Pleas, they have the same time allowed them for rendering the principal, as if the recognizance had been taken in this court c. Where an action was commenced, and afterwards discontinued, and then the bail rendered the principal before the bringing of a new action, the court held the render to be good, it being before the return of the process in this suit; and it was the fault of the plaintiff not to begin right at first d. So, where the plaintiff sued the bail on their recognizance, who did not render the principal within eight days, and then the plaintiff died, and his executors brought another action against the bail, it was ruled that the bail had eight days from the return of the process in the second action, to ren ler the principal e. In the Common Pleas, the render must be made before the rising of the court f, on the quarto die post of the return of the process g; which must be served on the bail four days at least before the return h. And in that court, they are allowed the same time for rendering the defendant on an attachment of privilege, as on a common capias i. And if a bail be served with process on his recognizance, and die before the quarto die post, and fresh process issue against his executors, they have until the quarto die post of the return of the second writ, to surrender the principal k. In the Exchequer, only four days are allowed the bail to surrender their principal, when the plaintiff proceeds by subpæna1; though eight days are allowed, when the proceeding is by quo minus m: In calculating the four days, one is reckoned inclusive, and the other exclusiven. And if an action be brought in this court, against bail, upon their recognizance entered into in the King's Bench, they must render their principal, as if the recognizance had been taken in the Exchequer o.

But in a later case b, time was allowed for the bail to surrender their principal, where, the latter being in custody under the process of another court, it appeared, on the return made to a habeas corpus issued by the bail in order to render him, that he could not be removed out of such custody, without danger to his life, and that such impossibility still continued. And where the return to a writ of latitat stated, that the defendant was insane, and could not be removed without great danger, and continued so till the return of the writ, the court refused an attachment against the sheriff c. So, where the principal has become bankrupt, the courts will enlarge the time for surrendering him, till after he has finished his last examination d. So, where the defendant was in the criminal custody of the court of King's Bench for a conspiracy, the court of Common Pleas, though they would not take him out of such custody, enlarged the time for the bail to render him in their discharge o. And time has been enlarged, in the Exchequer, for the bail to surrender their principal, till a week after the expiration of the term of his imprisonment in a county gaol, under a conviction, and sentence for a misdemca-The court of King's Bench, however, will not grant a rule for that purpose, unless it be sworn that the application is made by the bail s.

cipal is taken, one of the bail, it is said, must always remain with him; for they cannot depute their right of custody to another, without the defendant's consent in writing, till he be rendered :; but it has been determined, that a third person may assist the bail in taking their principal, and may lawfully detain him, although the bail do not continue present b. A render may be made by the party himself, without an attorney : and it is not necessary that the defendant should be taken to a judge's chambers, for the purpose of rendering him in discharge of his bail, unless he desire it *; nor that a committitur should be entered, when a principal is rendered in discharge of his bail, but the bail may enter an exoneretur, and be discharged . In the King's Bench it is a rule, that "under every commitment should be entered the state of the cause, at the time of the render: If before declaration, the sum sworn to on the arrest; but if after declaration, these words should be added, declaration filed or delivered, issue, or interlocutory judgment signed, as the case is f: If after final judgment in debt, the debt and damages; in other cases, the quantum of the damagess." In the Common Pleas, the filacer attends with his book, at the judge's chambers, and takes the render ! And where it was made on the last day, the court ordered the hour of the day, or true time of the defendant's surrender, to be entered by the filacer, in order that it might appear whether the surrender was made before or after the rising of the court h.

When defendant is in custody, on civil process.

When the defendant is in custody on civil process, there must be a habeas corpus cum causa for bringing him up, in order to render him in discharge of his bail. This writ may be issued in term or vacation, returnable immediate'; and the judge will, on the defendant's being brought up, either commit him to the custody of the marshal in the King's Bench, or warden of the Fleet, in the Common Pleas and Exchequer, or remand him to his former custody. In general, when the crown is not concerned, the court will commit the defendant to the custody of the marshal, or warden: But where an impressed man, not being liable to be taken out of the king's service, by any process, other than for some criminal matter, was brought up by the keeper of the Sayoy, to be surrendered in discharge of his bail, the court of King's Bench first committed him to the custody of the marshal, and then ordered him to be delivered instanters to the keeper of the Savoy; which was done; and an exoneretur entered on the bail-piece k. A certiorari will not lie, to remove the record of a judgment obtained against a defendant in the county palatine of Durham, for the purpose of enabling his bail to render him in the King's Bench, though he be a prisoner for debt in the custody of the marshal !.

When the defendant is in custody on a criminal account, the court of On criminal ac-King's Bench will in some cases grant a habeas corpus ad subjiciendum, for bringing him up; as where he is in custody under a charge of felony, or of obtaining money under false pretences b, or has been committed to prison by commissioners of bankrupt, for not answering questions to their satisfaction c. The habeas corpus, in these cases, must be issued on the crown side of the court of King's Bench; on which side also must be taken out the subsequent rule for the defendant's surrender in the action, his commitment pro forma to the marshal, and his recommitment to his former custody, charged with the several matters against him d: And under this writ, the court will remand him to his former custody e. But if a defendant be in the criminal custody of the court of King's Bench, the court of Common Pleas will not take him out of such custody, in order to surrender him in discharge of his bail ; though, if the imprisonment in such case were only temporary, the court would it seems relieve the bail, by enlarging the time for surrendering the principal, until after the time of his imprisonment has expired g.

Unnecessary, in C. P.

Exoneretur on bail-piece, in K. B.

The defendant being rendered, notice thereof should be given, without delay, to the plaintiff's attorney b; to the end that the plaintiff, if he think proper, may charge the defendant in execution, or at least that he may not be at any further trouble or expense in proceeding against the bail. If the plaintiff therefore, through want of notice, continue to proceed against the bail, though this will not vitiate the render, yet they shall not be relieved until they have paid the charges. But the notice need not be given before the rising of the court, on the day of render d: And if the principal be surrendered in time, but the bail omit to give regular notice of it to the plaintiff, in consequence of which he proceeds upon the bail bond, or against the sheriff, the bail may apply to set aside the proceedings, on payment of costs, even after the execution levied, and the money is in the After due notice of the render of the principal, the plaintiff still proceeded against one of the bail, in an action of debt on the recognizance, because no offer was made to pay the costs in the suit against him, nor any rule obtained to stay proceedings on payment of costs; and the court of King's Bench, held the subjuent proceedings to be irregular, being contrary to the rule of Trin: 1 Ann, which declares that on such notice of render, all further proceedings against the bail shall cease f. In the King's Bench, an affidavit is required to be made of the service of notice of render c; but this seems to be only for the purpose of getting the bail-piece from the judge's chambers, and not necessary in order to make the render complete, so as to discharge the bail below, and prevent an attachment against the sheriff g: Therefore, an attachment issued after notice of render, but before affidavit thereof, is irregular, in the King's Bench h; and, in the Common Pleas, an affidavit of the service of notice of render is altogether unnecessary i.

The next step to be taken, in order to discharge the bail, in the King's Bench, is to enter an exoneretur on the bail-piece: to effect which, the bail-piece, if not already got, should be obtained from the judge's chambers, and a certificate k from the prison, that the defendant is in custody. These being carried to the master, he will enter an exoneretur on the bail-piece, which should then be filed with the signer of the writs; for if the hail-piece be filed without an exonerctur, the bail remain liable, though the defendant be actually in prison. Yet, where the bail-piece has been previously delivered out to be filed, to the plaintiff's attorney, who neglects to file it, he cannot proceed against the bail, for want of an exoneretur b: And where the render is in other respects regular, the court will not order an exoneretur to be entered on the bail-piece, upon paying the costs that have accrued subsequent to the render. In the Common Pleas, the exoncretur is entered in the filacer's book, on making the render at the judge's chambers d. And where judgment having been entered up against a defendant in the Common Pleas, he brought a writ of error in the King's Bench, where the judgment was affirmed, and afterwards brought a writ of error in the House of Lords, and pending such writ surrendered himself in discharge of his bail to the King's Bench prison; the court of Common Pleas held, that the bail were entitled to have an cxoneretur entered on the bail-piece; as the recognizance of bail still remained in that court, where the action was originally commenced; and that the defendant having been rendered to the King Bench prison, the terms of the recogmizance could not be complied with, as that court would not allow him to be delivered up or transferred to any other custody e. It was formerly Entry of render, usual to make an entry of the render in the marshal's book, kept in the book, unneces-King's Bench office f; but this is now holden to be unnecessary s: the sary. practice being, when the bail bring the defendant to the judge's chambers to be rendered, for the judge to make out a committitur, which is delivered, together with the prisoner, to the tipstaff, who carries him to the King's Bench prison, and there delivers the prisoner, with the committitur, to the marshal or his officer h; and it is the duty of the clerk of the papers there, to make an entry in the marshal's book h.

OF SPECIAL BAIL

Discharge of ball, by death, or insanity, of principal.

Principal being made a peer, &c.

Bankruptcy, or discharge under insolvent act, &c.

When and how discharged, by bankruptcy and certificate of principal, in K. B. & C. P.

In Exchequer.

When not discharged, in C. P.

When the defendant dies before the return of the capies ad satisfaciendum, as it is impossible for the bail to render him, they are discharged from their recognizance: But if the death happen after the return of the capies ad satisfaciendum, and before it is filed, the bail are fixed. And the pourts, we have seen b, will not discharge them, on the ground of the insanity of their principal; although a commission of lunacy may have issued, under which he has been found a lunatic. In like manner, if the defendant be made a peer of the realm c, or member of the house of commons d, or become bankrupt and obtain his certificate c, or be discharged under an insolvent debtors' act f, &c. at any time before the bail are fixed, they are in consequence discharged: And, in any of the above cases, the courts, on motion, will order an exonerctur to be entered on the bail-piece, or in the filacer's book.

When the defendant has become bankrupt and obtained his certificate, before the expiration of the time allowed to the bail, by the indulgence of the court, he surrendering him, that is, (when the plaintiff proceeds by scire facies.) before the rising of the court on the return day of the second scire facias g, or of the first, when wire feci is returned, by bill in the King's Bench h; or by original in that court, as well as in the Common Pleas, before the rising of the court on the appearance day, or quarto die post of the return of the second scire facias, or of the first, when scire feci is returned h; or, when the plaintiff proceeds by action of debt on the recognizance in the King's Bench, within the space of cight entire days in full term next after the return of the latitat or other process against the bail i, or, in the Common Pleas, before the rising of the court on the quarto die post of the return of the process k; the court on motion, supported by an affidavit of the facts, will order an exoneretur to be entered on the bail-piece by bill, or in the filacer's book by original. And, in the Exchequer, proceedings were stayed in an action against bail, and an cxoncretur ordered to be entered on the bail-piece, after the defendant had obtained his certificate, on payment of the costs of the action, and of the application; although the recognizance had been entered into for his discharge out of custody, after final judgment, and the certificate had not been allowed by the chancellor, till after the expiration of the time stipulated for making the render m. But the court of Common Pleas would not relieve the bail of a bankrupt who were fixed after the appearance day, or quanto die post of the return of the second scire Jucius, which happened between the signature of the bankrupt's certificate by his creditors and the commissioners, and the time of its allowance by the Lord Chancellor. And, in that court, where an action was commenced, and the defendant became bankrupt and obtained his certificate, and afterwards permitted judgment to be signed for want of a plea, after which the plaintiff proceeded against the bail, the court of Common Pleas would not relieve the bail on motion b. And it seems that in such case, they could in no way take advantage of the bankruptcy and certificate b.

The court of King's Bench would not relieve the bail, on the ground In what cases that the debt was contracted while the defendant was resident in a foreign country, and before he became a bankrupt by the laws of that country, relief. though he might have obtained his certificate there c. And where the defendant became bankrupt, before the statute 49 Geo. III. c. 121. § 14. and the plaintiff proved his debt under the commission, but did not otherwise proceed under it, the court held that the bail were liable; though the plaintiff had lain by two years before he brought his scire facias against them d. But now, since the making of the above statute, if a plaintiff, after judgment obtained, prove his debt under a commission of bankrupt sued out against the defendant, and also proceed against the bail, the latter are thereby entitled to their discharge; and the court on motion will order an exoneretur to be entered on the bail-piece . Bail to the sheriff however, we have seen f, were not considered as sureties, or liable for the debt of a bankrupt, within the meaning of the statute 49 Geo. III. c. 121. § 8. And therefore, where such bail, being fixed with the debt and having paid it, sucd the principal and obtained judgment, after a commission of bankrupt had issued against him, but before he had obtained his certificate, and after he had obtained it the bail in the second action applied to be exonerated, on the ground that the plaintiffs, the bail in the original action, might prove their debt under the commission, by virtue of the last-mentioned statute, the court of Common Pleas refused to interfere in a summary way, but left the bail to their writ of audita querelag; upon which the bail rendered the defendant, and the court, on a subsequent application, refused to discharge him h. But this case is now provided for; and the bail to the sheriff, having paid the debt, or part of it in discharge of the whole, are entitled to relief under the commission, by the statute 6 Geo. IV. c. 16. § 52.

The bail cannot plead the bankruptcy and certificate of their principal, Mode of relief. in their own discharge; but must apply to the court on that ground, to

And formerly, if the defendant had become be relieved on motion a. bankrupt and obtained his certificate, before the bail were fixed, the method was, for the bail to surrender him; and then for the defendant to apply to be discharged, upon an affidavit, stating his having become bankrupt since the cause of action arose, and obtained a certificate of his conformity under the commission b. But of late, when a bankrupt is clearly entitled to his discharge, the court on motion, or a judge on summons, to avoid circuity, have ordered an exoneretur to be entered on the bail-piece; or in the filacer's book, without the form of a regular surrender by his bail . And the court of King's Bench will relieve the bail on motion, without directing an issue to try the fact of the bankrupt's being a trader; the certificate, by the statute 6 Geo. IV. c. 16d. being made sufficient evidence of the trading, &c. e But the court of Common Pleas would not exonerate the bail, upon the defendant's having become bankrupt and obtained his certificate, without giving the plaintiff an opportunity of trying, by an issue, whether the certificate were fairly obtained f. If the bail do not apply to enter an exoneretur on the bail-piece, till after proceedings have been had against them, they can only be relieved on payment of costs g.

When principal is under sentence of transportation.

Impressed.

Sent abroad, under alién act, &c.

Where the defendant was under sentence of transportation for a felony, the court permitted an exonerctur to be entered on the bail-piece h. where the defendant being a seaman, and having been holden to bail on mesne process, for a debt under 201., was impressed into the king's service, the court, on application of the bail, ordered an exonerctur to be entered 1. So, whilst the alien act k remained in force, if a defendant had been sent out of the kingdom under that act, the court of King's Bench would have ordered the bail bond to be delivered up to be cancelled, or permitted the bail above to enter an exoneretur; unless they were indemnified, or had money in their hands belonging to the defendant, sufficient to answer the plaintiff's demand m. But where the defendant was in custody under a charge of murder committed in Ireland, where a bill was found by the grand jury against him, and application had been made to the secretary of state, to send him over there, in order to take his trial; the court of King's Bench, though they granted a habeas corpus to bring him up, in order that he might be surrendered by his bail, would not, without an actual surrender, allow an exonerctur to be entered on the bail-piece . So, where the defendant was in custody of a messenger under an order of the secretary of state, for the purpose of being sent out of the kingdom by virtue of the alien act b, the court of King's Bench refused to issue a habcas corpus, on the application of his bail, to bring him up, that they might render him in their own discharge, on account of the public inconvenience, and of the probable risk of his passage, which had been taken in a ship immediately about to sail to his destined port: and they also refused, while he was still in the kingdom, and might possibly be set at large again, to enter an exoneretur on the bail-piece; but they said that they would remember that the situation of the bail was without any fault of theirs, if any proceedings were taken against them in the meantime '.

The general rule by which the courts are governed, in the exercise of General rule, as an equitable interference in these cases, is said to be this: that wherever by the act of the law, a total impossibility or temporary impracticability by act of law. to render a defendant has been occasioned, the courts will relieve the bail from the unforescen consequences of having become bound for a party whose condition has been so changed, by operation of law, as to put it out of their power to perform the alternative of their obligation, without any default, laches, or possible collusion on their part d. The practical modes Practical modes of relief which the courts have adopted for that purpose, are these three: first, in cases of total impossibility, it is effected by ordering an exonerctur to be entered upon the bail-piece, on motion for that purpose; or, in the case of bail below, that the bail bond be delivered up to be cancelled e: That mode is consistent with the jurisdiction of all the three courts. second mode, (which is necessarily confined to the court of King's Bench',) has been, in cases of temporary impracticability arising from the defendant being, at the time when he should be rendered, in legal criminal custody, by ordering him to be brought up by habeas corpus, in order that he may be formally rendered in discharge of his bail. 'A third mode is, by the courts enlarging the time for making the render: This also is within the power, and may be resorted to by all the courts 6. And the short re- Result of decisult of all the determinations seems to be, that wherever the court cannot absolutely exonerate the bail, and, either from the constitution of the court itself or the circumstances of the particular case, cannot enable them at once to make a formal render, they will, in all practicable cases of a temporary impossibility occasioned by act of law, and even perhaps in other cases under special circumstances, enlarge the time for making the render, in order to give the bail an opportunity of rendering their principal, as soon as it shall be in their power to do so'h.

It remains to be considered, in what cases the bail are excused from the Excuse of perperformance of the condition of their recognizance, by the act or default of the plaintiff. If the plaintiff do not declare against the defendant in due time, so that the cause is out of courts, his bail are discharged. And it seems, that where there has been a great and unnecessary delay in proceeding to trial, the bail may be relieved, on their own application; though the court will not discharge them, at the instance of the defendant b. where the plaintiff declares by original, in the King's Bench, in a different county from that where the action is brought, his bail are discharged c: But in the King's Bench by bill, or in the Common Pleas d, the declaring in a different county from that in which the writ issued, is not deemed a waiver of bail. So, the bail are discharged, if the plaintiff declare against the defendant for a different cause of action from what is expressed in the process e. But, in the Common Pleas, a variance between the writ and count, (the ac etiam being in case on promises, but the declaration in debt,) is not a ground for entering an exonerctur on the bail-piece, where the sum sworn to is under 40/f. The affidavit to hold to bail must also correspond in substance with the process s: and therefore, if the plaintiff declare against the defendant for a different cause of action from what is expressed in the affidavit, his bail are discharged h: But a trifling variance in the names of the parties is not material, provided there be no doubt as to their And it is too late to move to enter an exonerctur on the bailpiece, on the ground of a variance between the declaration and affidavit to hold to bail, after bail put in and justified, declaration delivered, plea demanded, and time allowed for pleading k. In the Common Pleas, bail are not liable, where the declaration consists of several counts, unless the plaintiff recover for the cause of action specified in the affidavit 1. in that court, where the affidavit was for a certain sum, on a bill of exchange only, and the plaintiff recovered a greater sum, as well on the bill as for goods sold, the bail were holden to be liable only for so much as was recovered on the bill of exchange m. to discharge the bail, but left them to move to set aside any proceedings which might be taken against them a.

It was formerly holden, that a cognovit by the principal, without notice to the bail, did not discharge them b: And accordingly, where the defendant in the action gave a cognovit for the debt and costs, payable by seven taking cognovit. instalments, and afterwards the principal was discharged under an insolveut debtors' act, which related to a certain day, when three only of the instalments were payable; it was holden, that the bail, who had been fixed before the passing of the act, though after the day to which it related, were liable for the whole condemnation money, the entire debt, quà debt, being due instanter; with a stay of execution only for certain portions, at certain times c. But where the plaintiff had taken a cognovit from the defendant, with an agreement to receive the debt by instalments, of which no notice was given to the bail, the court of King's Bench set aside an execution against them, sucd out above a year after the judgment, without a scirc facias to revive itd: And in general, although the bail are not discharged by the plaintiff's taking a cognovit from the principal without their consent, where judgment is to be entered up thereon instanter e, or the debt is payable by instalments, within the time in which the plaintiff would have been entitled to judgment and execution, had he gone to trial in the original cause f; yet where that is not the case, as where one or more of the instalments are not payable till after the expiration of that time, it is now settled, in both courts, that the bail are discharged s. This doctrine was first introduced in courts of equity; and is founded on this principle, that every surety has a right to come into a court of equity, and require to be permitted to sue in the name of the original creditor: But if the creditor give time to the original debtor, he thereby prevents the surety from using his name with effect. In like manner, the courts of law have held, that the bail are entitled to surrender the principal at any time, whenever the plaintiff himself would not be precluded from taking a proceeding against him: But if the creditor give time to the principal, he cannot during that time take or proceed against him; neither during the same period can the bail, who are therefore discharged h: And this doctrine applies to bail to the sheriff, as well as bail above i. It is no ground Not discharged, however, for setting aside a judgment which has been signed against bail, that the plaintiff has accepted a composition from the defendant, and sus- &c. pended the execution of a capias ad satisfaciendum which had been issued against him, though it were without the knowledge or consent of the bail;

So, where a plaintiff receives bills of exchange from a defendant, with an agreement that he shall not be precluded from proceeding while the bills are running, the bail are not thereby discharged. Of Proceedings against Bail to the Sheriff, upon the BAIL BOND; and against the Sheriff, to compel him to return the WRIT, and bring in the Body.

IF bail above, when necessary, be not put in and perfected in due time, Forfeiture of, the bail bond is forfeited: and the plaintiff may either take an assignment of it 2, and proceed thereon against the defendant, and his bail to the sheriff; or he may proceed against the sheriff himself, to compel him to return the writ, and bring in the body of the defendant b.

If the bail below be sufficient, it is usual for the plaintiff to take an assignment of the bail bond; which it seems he may do, even after service of the rule to bring in the body c, or moving for an attachment; but after he has sued out an attachment against the sheriff, he has made his election, and cannot afterwards, whilst the attachment remains in force, take an assignment of the bail bond d: And, in the Common Pleas, if bail above be put in and justified in due time after the sheriff is ruled to bring in the body, the court will set aside the proceedings in an action upon the bail bond, commenced previous to the time of justification e: So that the plaintiff, in that court, is not at liberty to proceed on the bail bond, pending the rule to bring in the body. But where the sheriff's officer, on the attachment being lodged, prevailed on the plaintiffs to withdraw it, and take an assignment of the bail bond, which the plaintiffs, in order to relieve the sheriff, accordingly took, and commenced an action thereon, the court of King's Bench held, that the plaintiffs might abandon their attachment in this case, and then take an assignment, and proceed on the bail bond f. And, in the Exchequer, where the attachment against the sheriff has been set aside for irregularity, it is no bar to an assignment of the bail bond g.

court would have amerced him a: and the old way was, first to give a rule for the sheriff to bring in the body, before the plaintiff could take an assignment of the bail bond b. Another mischief at common law was, that after an assignment of the bail bond, the action thereupon must have been brought in the name of the sheriff, who might have released it, and thereby driven the plaintiff into a court of equity c. To remedy these inconveniences, it was enacted by the above statute, that " if any person or per-" sons shall be arrested, by any writ, bill or process, issuing out of any of " the courts of record at Westminster, at the suit of any common person, " and the sheriff or other officer take bail from such person, against whom " such writ, bill or process is taken out, the sheriff or other officer, at the " request and costs of the plaintiff in such action or suit, or his lawful at-"torney, shall assign to the plaintiff in such action, the bail bond or " other security taken from such bail, by indorsing the same, and attest-" ing it under his hand and seal, in the presence of two or more credible " witnesses, which may be done without any stamp: and if the said bail " bond er assignment, or other security taken for bail, be forfeited, the " plaintiff in such action, after such assignment made, may bring an ac-" tion and suit thereupon in his own name; and the court where the " action is brought may, by rule or rules of the same court, give such re-" lief to the plaintiff and defendant in the original action, and to the bail, " upon the said bond or other security taken from such bail, as is agree-" able to justice and reason; and that such rule or rules of the said court " shall have the nature and effect of a defeazance to such bail bond, or " other security for bail." This act, and all the statutes of jeofails, are extended by the 24th section, to all courts of record in the counties palatine of Lancaster, Chester, and Durham, and the principality of Wales, and to all other courts of record within this kingdom d. And, by the statute 6 Geo. IV. c. 108. § 99. where persons arrested by capias, at the king's suit, give bail, the sheriff is required to assign the bail bond to the king, at the request of the prosecutor.

To the king.

And, in the King's Bench, if the bail do not justify in four days after exception, the plaintiff is at liberty to proceed upon the bail bond; although, from the bail having been put in sooner than was necessary, the rule for bringing in the body has not expired, and the sheriff is not liable to an attachment. And, in that court, it has been holden, that if the fourth day for perfecting bail be the last day of term, and the bail be not perfected before the rising of the court on that day, an assignment of the bail bond to the plaintiff, in the evening of that day, is regular. In the Common Pleas it is a rule, that

After default made in putting in special bail in time, it is not enough that bail are afterwards put in: but the plaintiff may take an assignment of the bail bond, and proceed thereon, unless the bail be also justified, though not before excepted to b. And where the defendant had neglected to put in and perfect bail above, the court of King's Bench held that the plaintiff was not out of court, by omitting to declare in the original action, within two terms after the return of the writ; but he might still take an assignment of the bail bond c: for he was not bound to declare de bene esse, within the time limited for the defendant's appearance, and after that time he could not declare, until the defendant had actually appeared. But where the plaintiff is completely After cause is out of court, by not declaring in the original action within a year after the return of the writ, or, in the Common Pleas, before the end of the vacation of the second term after it is returnable, it seems that he cannot afterwards regularly take an assignment of the bail bond d: And, in the latter court, though the assignment of the bail bond be regular, as being taken while the action was pending, yet if the plaintiff be afterwards guilty of laches, to the prejudice of the bail, the court will stay the proceedings thereon . The plaintiff, however, may proceed against the bail, although the action be out of court, if it do not appear that it was out of court before the plaintiff took an assignment of the bail bond f. In the In Exchequer. Exchequer, the court on motion will stay proceedings against bail, on payment of costs, although the plaintiff has neglected to proceed against them on the bond, as early as he might have done, if the bail had any reason to think that the plaintiff did not mean to proceed in the action, such as the bankruptcy of the defendant. The assignment may be made by the high sheriff, or by the under-sheriff in his name, and even by the under-sheriff's clerk in his office b: And as the assignment may be made, so the action may be brought, in any county. It was formerly usual for the plaintiff to bring several actions, against the principal and his bail, upon the bail bond; but this practice *being considered unnecessary and oppressive, was discountenanced by the court of King's Bench in a recent case d, where the assignee of a bail bond brought separate actions thereon, without suggesting any sufficient reason for so doing; and the court, under the discretionary power vested in them by the statute 4 & 5 Ann. c. 16. § 20. stayed the proceedings in all the Must be brought actions, upon payment of the costs of one of them. The action upon the bail bond must necessarily be brought in the same court whence the process issued, on which the bond was taken e; otherwise the parties could not have the relief intended by the statute. The proceedings on the bail bond may be set aside, with costs, if irregular; or stayed, if regular, upon terms, at the instance of the defendant, or of the sheriff or his bail, in order that there may be a trial in the original action. And the rule for staying the proceedings may be obtained on the same day that the bail justified m. The causes of irregularity are as various as the different proceedings out of which they arise. In general, the irregularity is in the writ, as that it was returnable on a day out of term n, &c.; or in the affidavit to hold to bail, arrest, bail bond, or exception to bail; or that the bond was put in suit before it was forfeited.

When a bail bond has been improperly taken, the court will order it to be delivered up to be cancelled: And the assignment of a bail bond was set aside, as having been made pending a rule to set aside proceedings for irregularity, and to stay proceedings in the mean time; the proceedings being suspended thereby for all purposes, till the rule was discharged a. So, the proceedings on the bail bond were set aside where the assignment was taken after the defendant had given a cognovit, without the knowledge of the bail, for payment of the debt and costs b. But when a defendant obtains a rule which stays the plaintiff's proceedings, he is not entitled, after it is discharged, to the same time for the purpose of taking the next step, as he had when he obtained the rule; though the defendant in such case should have a reasonable time allowed him, for the purpose of taking his next proceeding; and it has been determined, that the whole of the day on which the rule is disposed of, is a reasonable time for that purpose c. Where the plaintiff took an assignment of the bail bond, and afterwards gave notice of exception to the bail, without entering it, the court of King's Bench held that the plaintiff's irregularity, in not entering an exception, was not waived by the defendant's having given two notices of justification, under one of which the bail had justified, and therefore held that the proceedings should be stayed a; but they would not order the bail bond to be delivered up to be cancelled d.

When the defendant has been arrested by a wrong name, the courts When defendant will order the bail bond to be delivered up to be cancelled. it cannot be cancelled, in the King's Bench, on the ground of the plaintiff's &c. attorney having neglected to take out his certificate f; or because the place where the affidavit to hold to bail was sworn, is not mentioned in the jurat s. So, if a non-commissioned officer has been arrested and given In C. P. bail, the court of Common Pleas will not, after judgment recovered against the bail, set aside the proceedings, and cancel the bail bond h: And, in that court, if the plaintiff sue out writs into two counties, and arrest the defendant, who gives bail to the sheriff in both, the plaintiff may regularly proceed on the first bail bond . In the Exchequer, when In Exchequer. the bail do not appear to justify on the day mentioned in the notice, but on a subsequent day according to further notice, and the plaintiff, on the morning of the latter day, take an assignment of the bail bond, and sue out process thereon, the proceedings are regular, although the rule for the allowance of bail be served on the same day; nor is it a waiver of the assignment, that the plaintiff attended to oppose the justification of bail k.

Staying proceedings, when regular, in K. B.

In the King's Bench, by a modern rule of court's, "no rule can be drawn up for staying proceedings regularly commenced on the assignment of a bail bond, unless the application for such rule, if made on the part of the original defendant, be grounded upon an affidavit of merits b; or, if made on the part of the sheriff or bail c, or any officer of the sheriff d, be grounded upon an affidavit, shewing that such application is really and wruly made on the part of the sheriff or bail, or officer of the sheriff, (as the case may be,) at his or their own expense, and for his or their only indemnity, and without collusion with the original defendant." This rule, it will be observed, only applies to staying proceedings regularly commenced on the assignment of a bail bond: And they cannot be stayed, where the motion is made on behalf of the defendant, without an affidavit of merits, although the plaintiff has opposed the justification of bail, and received the costs of opposition e. The affidavit, if made on behalf of the defendant, must expressly state, that he has a good defence to the action upon the merits; an affidavit that he has a good defence to the action merely, not being sufficient f: And if the application be made by the bail, after notice of render has been given, the affidavit must state that the application is made bond fide, on their behalf 8: But when an affidavit of merits is produced, it is not necessary to state on whose behalf the motion is made h. In the Common Pleas, on motion by the bail to stay proceedings on the bail bond, or against the sheriff, on payment of costs, the court do not require the bail to swear to merits; nor is there any distinction in this respect, whether a trial has been lost or not i. In the Exchequer, when a trial has not been lost, the court on motion will stay proceedings on an assignment of a bail bond, the defendant having since put in and perfected bail, without payment of costs, or any affidavit of merits, or that the application is made in ease of the sheriff, or bail k; nor will they order the bail bond in such case to stand as a security, but only require that the plaintiff shall be put in the same situation as if the hail had justified in due time! And they refused to order a bail bond to stand as a security, where the plaintiff had lost a trial by his own conduct, in not accepting reasonable terms offered him by the defendant m. But when a trial has been lost, the bail bond must stand as a security n.

tification has expired, the court of King's Bench, we have seen, will stay the proceedings on the bail bond, upon payment of costs . But when the proceedings are regular, and the defendant, not having been surrendered by his bail above, applies to stay them upon terms, he must in general put in and perfect bail above, before the application is made b: Yet, upon particular occasions, the rule to stay the proceedings may be, upon condition that the defendant shall put in and perfect bail c. And, whenever the defendant is guilty of a neglect, in not putting in bail in due time, by which the bail bond becomes forfeited, the notice, in case the party mean to put in bail, (in order to stay the proceedings upon the bail bond,) should be, that he will put in and perfect bail on such a day; when the plaintiff may oppose them in court, without its being a waiver of the bail bond d.

Bail above, when necessary, being put in and perfected, the court should Motion, or apbe moved in term time, or an application made to a judge in vacation e, for a rule or summons to stay the proceedings on the bail bond, on payment of costs, and that in the mean time all proceedings be stayed; and it is usual to draw up the rule for the allowance of bail, with the rule or summons for staying the proceedings, and serve them both together. In the Common Pleas, notice of the intended motion should be given to the plaintiff's attorney, and "why in the mean time all proceedings should not be stayed;" otherwise the court will not add these words to the rule f. When the plaintiff has not lost a trial, the court in term time, or a judge On what terms. in vacation, will stay the proceedings on the bail bond, upon putting in and perfecting bail above, and paying the costs incurred by the assignment of the bail bond, to be taxed by the master in the King's Bench, or prothonotaries in the Common Pleas; and also, if necessary, or the state of the cause require it $\epsilon$, upon receiving a declaration in the original action, pleading issuably, and taking short notice of trial, so that the cause may be tried the same term h. But if the plaintiff has lost a trial, the court When trial has or a judge will further require the bail to consent, that the bail bond shall stand as a security, even when the defendant has been surrendered by his bail i. By losing a trial is meant, that the plaintiff has been prevented, by the neglect of the defendant to put in or perfect bail in due time, from trying his cause in, and obtaining judgment of the same term in which the writ was returnable k. The plaintiff therefore, in opposing the rule for setting aside the precedings on the bail bond, or for an attachment against the sheriff, must shew distinctly in his affidavit, the time when his writ was returnable, and declaration delivered b, or filed, &c. And it is observable, that there is a difference in this respect, between actions by bill, and by original writ: In the former, the jury process being returnable on a day certain, the plaintiff may obtain judgment of the term, when the cause is tried at the last sitting; but in the latter, the jury process can only be made returnable on a general return; and therefore, when the cause is tried at the last sitting, which happens after the last general return, the plaintiff cannot have judgment till the following term.

What may be pleaded after, and what not.

In the King's Bench, when the application is to set aside the proceedings upon the ball bond, for an irregularity in assigning it, or, if regular, to stay them upon terms, the rule or summons and affidavit should it is said be entitled in the original cause d: but when the application is to stay the proceedings, for some irregularity in the process in the action upon the bail bond, the rule or summons and affidavit ought to be entitled in that action, and not in the original cause . So, in the Common Pleas, the true and proper distinction seems to be, that if a bail bond has been irregularly assigned, the affidavit to set aside the proceedings upon it must be entitled in the original action; but if it has been assigned regularly, then in the action on the bail bond f: And, in that court, the judgment in the original action, as well as the judgments in the actions against the bail, may be set aside upon one motion and affigurit, entitled in the original action s. When the rule for staying the proceedings is made absolute, or a judge's order obtained upon the summons, it is incumbent on the defendant immediately to get an appointment thereon from the master in the King's Bench, or prothonotaries in the Common Pleas, to tax the costs, and to serve a copy of it upon the plaintiff's attorney; and when the costs are taxed, to pay the same without delay h, otherwise the rule or order will not operate as a stay of proceedings. After the proceedings have been stayed on the bail bond, the defendant cannot plead in abatement in the original action i; nor a plea of bankruptcy puis darrein continuance k. But, in the Common Pleas, though it was formerly usual to give judgment, on staying proceedings in an action on the bail bond, when the ball consented that it should stand as a security, and execution only was stayed ", yet it is now holden, that the bail in such case are at liberty to plead to the action on the bail bond; and consequently are entitled to a rule to plead, and demand of a plea, before judgment can be signed against them b. The sheriff's bail are liable to pay what is really due to the plaintiff, though beyond the sum sworn to and costs, to the full extent of the pemalty of the bond c: and they are liable for their own costs, as well as those of the original action. And where several actions are brought upon the bail bond, it is usual, in suing out execution, to apportion the debt and costs in the original action, amongst the different defendants, so as to levy a part on each, together with his own costs d. Rule to return

In what cases it cannot be had.

If there be no bail bond, or the plaintiff be dissatisfied with the bail taken by the sheriff, it is usual to rule him to return the write; and in the King's Bench, we have seen b, if the bail to the sheriff become bail above, the plaintiff cannot except to them, after he has taken an assignment of the bail bond; though it is otherwise in the Common Pleas: In the King's Bench therefore, if the plaintiff be dissatisfied with the bail taken by the sheriff, he can only proceed by ruling him to return the writ, and bring in the body; for if he were to take an assignment of the bail bond, he would admit the sufficiency of the bail to the sheriff, and if they were afterwards put in as bail above, he could not except to them. a rule to return the writ cannot be had, after the plaintiff has taken an assignment of the bail bond, if valid; for, by taking such assignment, he discharges the sheriff; though if the bail bond be void, it is otherwise d. And where there were three defendants, two of whom were arrested and bailed, and the plaintiff took assignments of the bail bonds, and as to the third, the shoriff returned non est inventus, the court, under these circumstances, discharged the rule to bring in the body e. So it has been holden, that if the sheriff appoint a special bailiff to arrest the defendant, at the request of the plaintiff or his agent, he cannot be ruled to return the writ': but he is notwithstanding responsible for the safe custody of the defendant, after the arrest made s. The proper course seems to be for the sheriff, when ruled to return the writ after a special bailiff has been appointed, instead of making a return, to move the court to set aside the rule to return it h.

In C. P.

By stat. 20 Geo. II. c. 37. The rule to return the writ is a side-bar or treasury rule. In the King's Bench, it is obtained from the clerk of the rules; and usually taken out on the return day of the writ by bill, or quarto die post by original, in order that it may keep pace with the time to put in bail: But it cannot regularly be taken out before, though dated on the return day i, or quarto die post by original k. In the Common Pleas, the rule to return the writ is obtained from the secondaries, and usually taken out on the first day of term, when the process is returnable on the first return; or if returnable on the second, or any subsequent return, it may be taken out on the return day of the process; being the periods from which the time for putting in bail is reckoned. But, by statute 20 Geo. II. c. 37. § 2.

"no sheriff shall be liable to be called upon to make a return of any writ or process, unless he be required so to do, within six months after the expiration of his office." Upon which statute it has been holden, in ease of sheriffs, that the months are lunar months i; that the day of the sheriff's quitting his office is to be reckoned as one a; and that the sheriff cannot be ruled to return the writ, after the expiration of six months, though requested before b. In the courts of Great Sessions in Wales, the prothonotaries are authorized, by a late act of parliament c, to grant rules for sheriffs to return writs in vacation.

The rule to return the writ, being intended to bring the sheriff into Service of. contempt, must be personally served on the sheriff himself, or his undersheriff<sup>d</sup>; except in London, Middlesex, and Surrey, where service on the deputy secondary of the compters, sheriff's deputy, or under-sheriff's agent in town, is deemed sufficiente: for as six days only are allowed, after service of the rule, to return the writ, it might otherwise be impossible to obey the rule in distant counties. In the King's Bench, the rule to return the writ expires in four days after service, in London or Middlesex?; and in six days, in any other city or county s. And the writ should regularly be returned by the sheriff, on the day on which the rule for returning it expires, if in term: but when the rule expires in vacation, the sheriff need not return it till the first day of the ensuing term, and has the whole of that day to file his return h. In the Common Pleas, the she- In C. P. riff had formerly in all cases six days after service of the rule, to return the writ; but the time for returning it, in town causes, was afterwards reduced to four days k; so that now it is the same in both courts. But, in the Common Pleas, when the rule to return a writ expires in vacation, the sheriff must file it at the return, and cannot wait till the ensuing term; the Common Pleas office being open during the vacation 1: And In Exchequer. this is also the practice in the Exchequer m.

The sheriff being ruled to return the writ, either does, or does not re- Returning writ. turn it. And where the writ is executed by the old sheriff while in office, he ought to make his return to the same, and hand such writ and return over to the new sheriff, who comes into office before the return day; and such new sheriff will return the writ, with the old sheriff's return thereon: and if the old sheriff, after arresting a defendant, suffer him to escape, and go out of office before the return day, he is answerable for the escape ". If there be no return, it is a contempt; for which the court, on Attachment, for a proper affidavito, will grant a rule for an attachment p: and this is the constant mode of proceeding against the late sheriff q, as well as the present one; for, as to the former, he ought in strictness to have returned the writ before he was out of office, and therefore the contempt was actually committed whilst he was a servant of the court q. being ruled to return a writ, gave notice to the plaintiff that the writ was lost, and that the defendant was in custody, the plaintiff should have proceeded as if the sheriff had returned cepi corpus; and the court of Common Pleas set aside an attachment issued against the sheriff, for not returning the writ 2. The writ should regularly be returned by the sheriff, on the day on which the rule for returning it expires; and in default thereof, the plaintiff may move for an attachment on the next day's: or, if the rule expire on the last day of term, he may move for an attachment at the rising of the court on that day; and the rule for the attachment is regular, though the sheriff make his return on a subsequent day in vacation, before he is actually served with the rule c. In order to ascertain the time of making the return, in the King's Bench, the custos brevium is required to indorse on every writ, on what day, and at what hour, the same was filed d.

Returns to mesne process.

The shorlff's return to a capias ad respondendum is either that the defendant is not found in his bailiwick e, or that he has taken him; and, in the latter case, it is either that he has him ready f, or in custody g, to answer the plaintiff; or, by way of excuse, that he is sick h, (languidus est,) or has escaped, or been rescued; or that the sheriff has discharged him, or delivered him over to another custody, by direction of the plaintiff k, or by order of the court1; or that he has been discharged from the arrest, under the statute 43 Geo. III. c. 46. § 2. on depositing in the sheriff's hands, the sum indorsed on the writ, with ten pounds in addition, to answer costs, &c. And where the return to a writ of latitat stated, that the defendant was insane, and could not be removed without great danger, and continued so till the return of the writ, the court, we have seen m, refused an attachment against the sheriff. But where the return to a writ of latitat stated that the defendant, upon being arrested in his own house, was confined to his bed by illness, and could not be removed without danger to his life, and continued so ill at and after the return of the writ, and for such cause the custody of the defendant was relinquished; the court were of opinion that this return was bad, though they allowed the sheriff time to amend it, upon payment of costs ". And where the sheriff returned as follows, "I have taken the body of M. N., and kept and detained her in custody, till it appeared to me, that she had surrendered, in discharge of her bail, into the custody of the marshal, and was in his custody, to all intents and purposes, by virtue of the act for indemnifying the marshal for escapes in consequence of prisons being burnt o," the court quashed the

So, where the sheriff had untruly returned to a capias, that he had taken the defendant, whose body remained in prison under his custody, the court of Common Pleas refused to allow him to amend his return, by striking it out, and making another, according to the fact b. If the sheriff return non est in- Proceedings ventus, where he has or might have taken the defendant, he is liable to an action for a false return c; and if he return cepi corpus, et paratum habeo, where he has taken the defendant, and let him go at large without bail, he is liable to an action, if the defendant be not in custody, or bail above be not put in and perfected, at the return of the writ d. But when the sheriff has taken bail, he is not liable to an action, upon the return of cepi corpus, et paratum habeo e; for it was his duty to take bail: and though the latter part of the return be not strictly true, yet this, which was the ancient return, is not altered by the statute 23 Hen. VI. c. 9. Still, however, he might have been amerced by the courts, upon such return, for not bringing in the body, or putting in and perfecting bail above f: and in the beginning of the reign of George the Second, the practice of amercing the sheriff appears to have given way to the proceeding by attachment g.

In the first case, the plaintiff is entitled to a non omittas, by the statute Westm. 2. c. 39 i: In the second, if the return be false, the bailiff is liable to an action; the sheriff not being answerable at common law, for the fulse return of the bailiff k: In the last case, the ancient mode of proceeding was by distringas1; but it seems, that the bailiff may now be called upon by rule, to bring in the body m. and if there be no bail bond, or the plaintiff be dissatisfied with the bail taken by the sheriff, it is usual, and necessary in the King's Bench, for the plaintiff to rule him to bring in the body . But where, on the return of cepi corpus, the plaintiff brought an action against the sheriff for an escape, and recovered damages, the court of King's Bench held, that he could not afterwards rule the sheriff to bring in the body, with a view to proceed in the original action for costs b. The rule to bring in the body is a four day rule in London or Middlesex, and a six day rule in any other city or county c; and should be served in like manner as the rule to return the writ. In the King's Bench, it is a side-bar rule, and obtained from the clerk of the rules d; but, in the Common Pleas, it is given by the filacer who issued the process e, on a note or extract of the writ and return from the custos brevium, after which the rule is drawn up by the secondaries f and served s. And there should be no delay in giving the rule: for where the sheriff had returned cepi corpus to a bailable writ in Hilary term, upon which the plaintiff proceeded no further till Michaelmas term following, and in the mean time the bail became insolvent, and the defendant absconded, the court of King's Bench thought it unreasonable that the shcriff should be called upon to bring in the body after such delay; and they set aside an attachment which had issued against him for not doing it h.

The intent of this rule, when the defendant is not in custody, is to compel the sheriff to put in and perfect bail above 1: And it cannot in general be taken out, until the time for putting in bail has expired k; for it is necessary that the proceedings against the sheriff should keep pace with the times allowed for putting in and perfecting bail; otherwise this inconvenience might ensue, that the sheriff might be fixed with the payment of the debt and costs, and upon his bringing an action against the defendant or his bail, upon the bail bond, they might plead comperuit ad diem. In the King's Bench, where the rule to return the writ is given on the return day, a rule to bring in the body, dated on the day of the return by the sheriff of cepi corpus, though issuing afterwards in the vacation, is irregular<sup>1</sup>. But where the writ, in a country cause, was returnable on the first of June, and the sheriff was ruled to return it on the second, and on the eighth he returned cepi corpus, upon which the plaintiff, on the same day, served him with a rule to bring in the body, and on the fifteenth obtained an attachment, the court held the proceedings to be regular; although it was objected, that the sheriff had all the eighth to return the writ, and consequently that the rule to bring in the body should not have been served till the ninth; for in this case, the time for putting in ball had expired, before the service of the rule to bring in the body . Agreeably to which it is now settled, that in all cases where the time for putting in bail has expired, the sheriff may be ruled to bring in the body, on the same day that he returns cepi corpus b.

When the sheriff is called upon to bring in the body, he must either Sheriff's duty bring it into court c, or put in and perfect bail above, within the time allowed him by the rule d: otherwise it is a contempt, for which the court will grant an attachment, on an affidavit of the service of the rule e, and that no bail has been put in; or that bail has been put in, but not perfeeted f: an affidavit that the plaintiff's attorney had received notice of bail, not being sufficient g: And where, on a joint cause of action against two defendants, the sheriff was served with two different rules to bring in the bodies; the court of Common Pleas held, that two writs of attachment should be issued against the sheriff, on his non-compliance with such rulesh. But the contempt is not incurred till the day is past, on which the rule to bring in the body expires; for the shcriff has the whole of that day to bring it in, and therefore an attachment cannot be moved for till the next day 1: And, in the King's Bench, the sheriff, we have seen k, is not liable to an attachment, where the defendant is rendered at any time before the expiration of the day allowed for bringing in the body; or even after the rule for bringing it in has expired. The sheriff however is not entitled, in that court, to the benefit of a render made after the original time for putting in bail has expired k: And where two days' time to justify is given, if bail are not justified on the last of the two days, an attachment may issue on that day 1.

In the King's Bench, the plaintiff may move for an attachment against the sheriff, at any time after the expiration of the rule to bring in the body; and if it be obtained before the service of the rule for the allowance of bail, the sheriff is fixed. But an attachment obtained after a summons to attend before a judge, for payment of debt and costs, which was not attended by the plaintiff's attorney, is irregular m: And, in the Common Pleas, though In C. bail be brought up on the same day on which an attachment has been obtained against the sheriff, the court will permit them to justify, and set it aside b. But the plaintiff in such case is entitled to the costs of moving for the attachment. So, if the plaintiff has incurred the costs of instructing counsel to move for an attachment, before the defendant gives notice of his render, though he render before it is actually obtained, the court of Common Pleas will order the costs of those instructions to be paid by the defendant, upon setting aside the attachment d. When a rule to bring in the body expires on the last day of term, the plaintiff is at liberty, at the rising of the court on that day, to move for an attachment in the King's Bench e, as well as in the Common Pleas f, for not bringing into court the body of the defendant: and such attachment may be accordingly issued on the following day, provided bail shall not then be perfected, or the defendant rendered in their discharge. bring in the body had not expired before he went out of office. If it had, the contempt being then complete, an attachment was deemed the proper process : But now, by rule of that court b, " where any sheriff, before his going out of office, shall arrest any defendant, and a cepi corpus shall afterwards be returned, he shall and may, within the time allowed by law, be called upon to bring in the body, by a rule for that purpose, notwithstanding he may be out of office, before such rule shall be granted." A similar practice has also prevailed in the Common Pleas: And in that: court, a sheriff who is ruled on the last day of term, but goes out of office before the next term, is liable to an attachment, for not bringing in the body d.

The distringus against the late sheriff was a judicial writ, issuing out of By distringus. the King's Bench office by bill, or filacer's office by original, and directed to his successor; commanding him to distrain the late sheriff, by all his lands, &c. so that he might have the defendant's body in court, to answer the plaintiff. This writ must have been made returnable on a day certain or general return, according to the former proceedings f; and must have lain four days exclusive in the sheriff's office: but it need not have been left there before the return, it being deemed sufficient to leave it on the return day s. Upon the first distringus, the sheriff, to whom it was directed, levied issues to the amount of forty shillings, which the plaintiff moved to increase; and if the debt were small, the court would order the whole of it to be levied, with costs, upon an alias distringus; but otherwise the plaintiff moved again to increase the issues, and sued out a pluries distringus, &c.: and when issues were returned, to the amount of the debt and costs, the plaintiff moved for a sale of them, under the statute 10 Geo. On this statute, a rule for an attachment against an under-sheriff, on the death of the sheriff during his year, is not absolute in the first instance. Habeas corpora, on return of cepi corpora.

The attachment d is a criminal process, directed to the coroner, when it issues against the present sheriff; or when against the late one, to his successor: and, in the King's Bench, it must be made returnable on a general return, though the original process was at a day certain e. The attachment may be moved for on the last day of term f; and until it be granted, the proceedings, in the King's Bench, are on the plequide of the court, and must be entitled with the names of the parties: But as soon as the attachment is granted, the proceedings are on the crown side, and from that time the king is to be named as the prosecutor s. If the coroner or sheriff, being called upon by rule h, neglect to return the attachment, he may be attached himself; and the attachment against the coroner should be directed to elisors, named by the master in the King's Bench, or prothonotaries in the Common Pleas i. If cepi corpora be returned to the attachment, the mode of proceeding, for obtaining payment of the debt and costs, is by moving the court for writs of habeas corpora k, to bring up the bodies of the sheriffs, before one of the judges at chambers, to answer to such matters as shall be there alleged against them 1; which is a motion of course, and may be made without an affidavit 1.

When the sheriff is fixed for a contempt, he is liable, in like manner as Liability of sheriff upon the bail bond, to the payment of what is really due to the plaintiff, though beyond the sum sworn to and costs, to the full extent of the penalty of the bond. And he cannot relieve himself, by payment of the debt sworn to and indorsed on the writ, since the statute 43 Geo. III. c. 46. § 2. having neglected to take the money at the time of the arrest, as directed by that act; but must pay the whole debt and costs b: neither can he be relieved on the ground of the defendant's death, after the contempt was incurred, and before the attachment issued. But he is not liable beyond the penalty of the bond. And where an attachment issues in an action against the acceptor of a bill of exchange, the sheriff is not liable thereon, to pay the costs in actions against the drawer or indorsers. If a party has a right to enforce payment of his debt against the sheriff, he must pursue it within a reasonable time, and not lay by so long as that by his laches the sheriff shall be deprived of his remedy over against the debtor: Therefore, where the rule for an attachment against the sheriff, for not bringing in the body, was obtained on the 11th of February, which attachment was returnable on the 4th of May, and the plaintiff did not issue the attachment till the 3d of May, and in the mean time the defendant became bankrupt on the 19th of March, by which means the sheriff lost his opportunity of paying the debt, and proving it under the commission, the attachment was set aside for such laches f: And on a similar ground, it is holden that a cognovit, for payment of the debt and costs by instalments, discharges the sheriff; although it was agreed that the right of moving for an attachment against him should remain with the plaintiff as a security, in case any of the instalments should not be paid g. But where the plaintiff, at the desire of the sheriff's officer, forbore to enforce an attachment in the first instance, and two days afterwards applied to the sheriff for the debt and costs; the court of Common Pleas held, that the sheriff was not discharged by the indulgence given to the officer h. So, where the rule to bring in the body, served on the 5th July, expired on the second day of Michaelmas term, two judges of that court held that the sheriff was not discharged, by the plaintiff's having, on the 7th July preceding, and previously to the justification of bail, consented to an order to stay proceedings, on payment of debt and costs within a month i.

M. MENANOCERDINGRINGS.

And in general, the court will not set uside an attachment against the sheriff on the ground of delay, unless there have been gross laches on the part of the plaintiff, to the prejudice of the sheriff.

. If the proceedings against the sheriff are irregular, they may be set aside, with costs b; or, if regular, may be set uside or stayed upon terms, by the favour and indulgence of the court, in order to let in a trial of the merits, for the benefit of the sheriff, or of the defendant, or his bail d. But, in the King's Bench, by a late rule of court e, " no rule can be drawn up for setting aside an attachment regularly obtained against a sheriff, for not bringing in the body, unless the application for such rule, if made on the part of the original defendant, be grounded upon an affidavit of merits f; or, if made on the part of the sheriff or bail g, or any officer of the sheriffs, be grounded upon an affidavit, shewing that such application is really and truly made on the part of the sheriff or bail, or officer of the sheriff, (as the case may be,) at his or their own expense, and for his or their only indemnity, and without collusion with the original defendant." This rule applies only to motions for setting aside attachments regularly obtained h: And if the affidavit be made on behalf of the sheriff or bail, it must comply with the terms of the rule: Therefore, an affidavit which did not state that the application was made at the expense of the bail, and for their only indemnity, was deemed insufficient. The affidavit in such case should regularly be made by the defendant himself k. And, the court will not set aside an attachment against the sheriff, for not bringing in the body, on payment of costs, upon an affidavit that the plaintiff purposely prevented the defendant's being re-taken after a rescue, and that the application was by the shcriff himself, without negativing the fact of his having an indemnity 1. If an affidavit of merits however be produced, it is not necessary to state on whose behalf the motion is made m.

Rule for setting aside, on what terms.

The practice, when the sheriff has been fixed, is to move for a rule to shew cause why, on putting in bail, the proceedings against him should not be set aside; and to have the bail ready to justify, when the rule is disposed of <sup>n</sup>. If the plaintiff has not lost a trial, the court will set aside the proceedings, upon putting in and perfecting bail above, and payment of costs . But if a trial has been lost, the court will further require, that the attachment shall remain in the office, and stand as a security to the plaintiff for the sum recovered b: And it seems, that the attachment shall stand as a security, as well as the bail bond, where a trial has been lost, although the defendant has been surrendered in discharge of his bail. On setting aside a regular attachment, on payment of costs, the question whether or not the attachment shall stand as a security, depending supon the fact whether a trial has been lost, it is for the plaintiff, who seeks to qualify the rule, to shew by his affidavit the necessary facts, such as the day of the delivery of the declaration, &c. which may entitle him so to dod: And where the court ordered an attachment against the sheriff, of which he had regular notice, to stand as a security to the plaintiff for the debt and costs, and the sheriff, in the next term, applied to discharge that part of the rule which related to the attachment standing as a security, urging that he was no party to the rule, the court held the application to be too late e.

When the sheriff has been guilty of a breach of duty, in discharging the defendant out of custody, without the plaintiff's assent, upon his own undertaking to appear and put in bail, or by taking money from him, instead of a bail bond, the court will not assist the sheriff, by staying the proceedings in an action for an escape, or by setting aside the attachment upon an affidavit of merits, and payment of costs f; and it is now decided, that he cannot, after paying the debt and costs, maintain an action against the defendant, for money paid s. But, if he has taken a bail bond, he may resort to the defendant or his bail, by putting it in suit against them; though, in general, the money is paid by the officer, on issuing the attachment, and he brings the action on the bail bond, in the sheriff's name h. In an action on a bail bond, if the issue depend on the date of the appearance, the court of Common Pleas, upon an application by the plaintiff, will order the day of the appearance to be entered in the filacer's book; although, before the application to the court, issue has been joined on the plea of comperuit ad diem i: And where bail above were put in but not justified, and the sheriff, being fixed, brought an action on the bail bond,

CHAP. XIV.

Of the Proceedings in Actions, by and against At-TORNIES and Officers, in the Courts of King's Bench, Common Pleas, and Exchequer; and of the RECOVERY and TAXATION of their Costs.

THE proceedings in actions against defendants when at large, and mode Proceedings in of bringing them into court, in ordinary cases, having already been considered; I shall next proceed to shew whatever is peculiar to the proceedings in actions by and against attornies, who are supposed to be already in court, and against prisoners in the actual custody of the sheriff, &c. or of the marshal of the King's Bench, or warden of the Fleet prison.

Attornies, we have seen, may sue by attachment of privilege, and must By attachment be sued by bill a. In the King's Bench, the attachment of privilege, at bill. of privilege, or the suit of an attorney, is in nature of a latitat b: therefore, in replying Attachment of it to a plea of the statute of limitations, the plaintiff must set forth the K. B. what. continuances c. And an attachment of privilege is not a continuance of a bill of Middlesex, so as to avoid the statute of limitations d. In the King's Pracipe for. Bench, it is a rule, that "every attorney shall leave a præcipe e with the " signer of the writs, containing the defendant's names, not exceeding " four in each writ, with the return, and day of signing such writ, and " the agent's or attorney's name who sued out the same: and that all " such pracipes shall be entered on the roll, where the pracipes of latitats, " and all other writs issuing out of this court, are entered; and the of- Signing-" ficer that signs the writs in this court, shall not sign such attachment, "till a pracipe be left with him for that purpose ." But when an at. Indorsement of torney sues by attachment of privilege, his name need not be indorsed on on. the writ: for the 2 Geo. II. c. 23. § 22. which requires the name of the plaintiff's attorney to be indorsed on the writ, only extends to cases where the attorney sues for another person g. And an attorney, plaintiff, may sue by common process, and indorse his own name on the copy as the at-

If an attorney sue by attachment of privilege, for words spoken in Wales, and the venue be laid there, and the plaintiff do not recover a verdict for ten pounds, it may be suggested on the roll, that the defendant was resident in Wales. &c. in order to entitle the defendant to enter a nonsuit, under the statute 13 Geo. Attachment of privilege in C. P. what.

Præcipe for.

Arrest on.

In the Common Pleas, an attachment of privilege is in nature of an original writ c; and must have fifteen days between the teste and return c. Teste and return. This writ should regularly be returnable on a day certain, in full term e: But where it was made returnable after the essoin day, and before the quarto die post, the court allowed it to be amended, on payment of costs. And, being in nature of an original writ, it is sufficient, when replied to a plea of the statute of limitations, to shew the teste of it, without 'the contimuances?. It is a rule in this court s, that " no attorney shall sue out an attachment of privilege at his own suit, nor shall the same be sealed, unless it be first stamped or signed by the clerk of the warrants or his deputy, for which no fee is to be paid, to the intent to shew that such person is an attorney of this court, duly entered and continued on the roll of And there is another rule h, similar to that in the King's Ben'h, that "every attorney, who shall sue out a writ of privilege against any defendant, shall leave a præcipe i at the prothonotaries' office, with the defendant's names, not exceeding four in the whole, and the return day thereto, and the day of signing the same, together with the agent's or attorney's name who sues out the same; and that such pracipe shall be entered by the prothonotaries upon a remembrance roll, in their respective offices, to be kept for that purpose, without fee or reward; and that the prothonotaries do not sign any attachment of privilege, without such præcipe be left in the office, at the time of signing thereof." therefore, as governed by these rules, is to take the præcipe and writ to the prothonotaries' clerk, who will sign the writ gratis, keeping the præcipe; after which the writ is marked by the clerk of the warrants, and then sealed.

An attorney was formerly permitted to hold the defendant to special bail, upon an attachment of privilege, for fees or disbursements, however trifling k. But now, since the statutes for preventing frivolous and vexatious arrests, the defendant cannot be arrested and holden to special bail, upon an attachment of privilege, or any other process, unless the cause of action amount to twenty pounds or upwards. Where it is under that amount,

Formerly, no bill could have been filed against an attorney or officer of the Common Pleas, to be called in court, in order to a forejudger, until the bill was actually entered upon record, and a number roll put thereon d. This rule however appears to be disused e: and at present, the practice is to prepare a bill f against the defendant, which is delivered to one of the criers, by whom the defendant is to be thrice called in open court, with an Calling defendintimation that he will be forejudged, if he do not appear; after which, the bill is entered with the prothonotaries: and a rule being given thereon by the secondaries, for the defendant's appearance, the bill should be filed in the prothonotaries' office till the rule is out, and afterwards with the custos brevium s. Proceedings against him, for escape, on stat. 59 Geo. III. c. 64.

If the defendant do not appear in due time, the proceedings are entered on a roll, which is obtained from the prothonotaries, and their clerk will sign the judgment of forejudger, on an incipitur being first made thereon. The roll is then taken to the clerk of the warrants, who will strike the defendant off the roll of attornies; after which he may be proceeded against by the plaintiff, or any one else a, as a common person: and he cannot be restored, unless he pay the debt and costs: But when he has made satisfaction to the plaintiff, he may obtain a rule of court in term time, or judge's summons in vacation, to shew cause why he should not be restored; and if it appear that the plaintiff has been satisfied, a rule or order will be made, for the clerk of the warrants to restore him b.

It was formerly holden, that a bill could not be filed in vacation, against the warden of the Flect, for an escape c. But now, by the statute 59 Geo. III. c. 64. And, for the better ascertaining as well the time of filing such " bill, as of delivering such copy thereof as aforesaid, the proper officer of " the court in which such bill shall be filed, or his lawful deputy, shall, " at the time of filing the same, indorse thereon a memorandum of the " time of filing such bill; and the said warden or his deputy, or the " turnkey or porter of the said prison, shall, at the time of receiving such " copy of the said bill, indorse upon such copy a memorandum of the time " of receiving the same." In the construction of this statute it has been holden, that the interval between the essoin day and first day of the court's actually sitting, must be taken as part of the term: and therefore, a bill may be filed against the warden of the Fleet for an escape, on the day after the essoin day, entitled as of the term generally; and if the plaintiff give a rule to plead on the first day the court sits, he will substantially comply with the requisition of the statute 8 & 9 W. Upon this statute it was a good plea, to an action brought by an attorney for his fees, that no bill had been delivered to the defendant s; or the statute might have been given in evidence, on non assumpsit h. But if an attorney had delivered his bill to the defendant, after the arrest and before the bill filed, it was well enough i: and this statute did not extend to attornies in inferior courts, but only to those in the courts at Westminster 4. It should also seem, that an attorney's bill could not have been taxed, unless an action was depending thereon, nor without bringing the amount of it into court m.

The provisions of the above statute are confined to actions for the recovery of fees, charges or disbursements, at law or in equity. But though the statute applies only to particular cases, and to bills of a particular description, yet the court it seems still retains, and has always exercised, a right, as at common law, to direct the taxation of other bills of costs; and such is said to be the constant practice a. In making out an attorney's bill on this statute, it is not sufficient to charge the costs of an action brought by the attorney for his client, at one sum in the aggregate, although the costs in that action had been taxed at that sum, as between party and party b: But the plaintiff may nevertheless recover the residue of his bill, as to which the provisions of the statute had been complied with c.

In what cases bills are taxable, at common law.

"thing therein contained, shall not extend to any bill of fees, charges and disbursements, due from any attorney or solicitor, to any other attorney or solicitor, or clerk in court; but every such attorney, solicitor, or clerk in court, may use such remedies, for the recovery of his fees charges and disbursements, against such other attorney or solicitor, as he might have done before the making of the said act."

For conveyancing, &c.

If the whole bill be for conveyancing a, it cannot be taxed. But if any part of an attorney's bill, which has been delivered, be for business done in court, the bill must be delivered a month before the action is brought, otherwise the plaintiff cannot recover b. And a warrant of attorney c, or dedimus potestatem d, charged in an attorney's bill, is a sufficient item to enable the court to refer the bill for taxation; though, with this exception, it be entirely for conveyancing. So, where one of the charges was for drawing and engrossing an affidavit of debt, in order to hold a party to bail, which appeared to have been sworn, the court of King's Bench held this to be a charge for business done in court, which made the bill taxable e. And a charge in an attorney's bill, for attending at a lock up house, and obtaining the defendant's release, and filling up a bail bond, will render the bill subject to taxation f. But a charge for preparing an affidavit of the petitioning creditor's debt and bond to the Chancellor, in order to obtain a commission of bankruptcy, was holden not to be a taxable item within the statute, as being a charge at law or in equity, the affidavit not having been sworn, nor a commission issued g. So, charges for searching to see whether satisfaction of a judgment was entered, or whether an issue was entered and docketed, will not constitute taxable items in an attorney's bill, so as to make it necessary to deliver it signed before action brought h. And where an attorney had paid money, in consequence of his undertaking to pay the debt and costs, this was holden not to be a disbursement by him as an attorney, within the meaning of the statute i.

When part is taxable, and part not.

It has been made a question, whether an attorney may recover for charges or disbursements not taxable, when part of his demand is for business done in court; and the distinction that has been taken is, that he may, where he has delivered no bill at all k; but that where he has delivered a bill irregularly, he cannot l. And accordingly, in a modern case m, an attorney not having delivered any bill to his client before action brought, but having afterwards delivered a bill of particulars under a judge's order, was held to be entitled to recover charges for money paid for his client's use, having no reference to his business of an attorney, although other items in the bill of particulars were taxable. An attorney having delivered two separate bills, one of which was for fees and disbursements in causes, and the other for making conveyances, a rule was made, in the King's Bench, for taxing both *. And so, where it was moved that the master might be directed to tax those articles in an attorney's bill which related to conveyancing and parliamentary business, the rest being for management of causes in the court of King's Bench, Lord Mansfield said, "there was no doubt but the master might tax the whole; that he recollected a case, where the fees paid to a proctor, for business done in the ecclesiastical court, made part of the bill; and it was determined, that as the whole bill had been referred to the master, he might tax that part of it b." So, where an attorney had delivered three several bills, one for business done as an attorney, another as agent, and a third for fees due to him as steward of a manor, for admittances and holding courts, the court held, that the taxable items in the bill, for business done as an attorney, would draw after them the fees due to him as steward of the manor, so as to subject all the bills to taxation c.

The court of King's Bench will refer an attorney's bill to be taxed, For business though all the business was done at the Quarter Sessions d, or in the insolvent debtors' courte; and in these cases, an action cannot be maintained for the amount of the bill, unless it be signed, and delivered a month before the bringing of the action f. And a bill was referred to be taxed, for busi- In court of ness done in a criminal suit, in the court of Great Sessions at Carmarthen: and though it was objected that it would be impossible for the master to tax the costs in Wales, not knowing the practice there, yet the court held that he could as well tax these costs, as costs in the spiritual court; and if he were at a loss, he might call in assistance s. In the Exchequer, a crown In Exchequer. solicitor's bill of costs, for business done under an extent, is taxable h: And if, on the taxation of his bill, a considerable sum be disallowed, the court will not only order the costs of the taxation to be paid to the defendant by the solicitor, but, if he have received the whole amount of his bill by sums paid him on account, they will order him to pay interest on the balance reported to be due from him !. But the court cannot order a solicitor's bill In House of of costs, for business wholly done in the House of Lords, in the prosecution of an appeal, to be referred for taxation; because their officer has no means whereby he may be enabled to tax such a bill k: and great difficulty is said directly to tax a solicitor's bill. This however has been done, under the recognizance; and the House has called in the assistance of a master, to determine what the amount ought to be: but that has been considered only as putting the recognizance in force, not as a taxation independent of it, by virtue of any inherent authority possessed by the House. For establishing a taxation of costs on private bills in the House of Lords, it is enacted, by the statute 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 64. § 1, 2. that on application made to the clerk of the parliaments, as to the costs and expenses of such bills, he shall direct the same to be taxed, by such persons as he shall appoint; and in actions against persons liable to pay the costs, the speaker's certificate shall have the effect of a warrant to confess judgment. And there is a similar provision for the taxation of costs on private bills, &c. in the House of Commons, by the statute 6 Geo. IV. c. 123. § 1, 2.

In House of Commons.

In Chancery.

In Chancery, an order for taxing a bill of costs, entitled in the cause, if obtained by a worty to the cause, is regular, under the general jurisdiction; but a person not a party to the cause must apply ex parte, under the statute 2 Geo. II. c. 23. § 23 b. Whether a party, having obtained such an order in a cause, may pursue it under the statute, is questionable; but if the order be acted upon, the irregularity is waived b. An order has been made in bankruptcy, for taxing a solicitor's bill, for striking the docket, and previous business relating to the bankruptcy c; and also, for business done in bankruptcy and otherwise d. But it has been decided, that a solicitor's bill of fees, for business done for a royal foundation, the office of visitor being exercised by the Lord Chancellor, is not within the statute 2 Geo. II. c. 23. § 23.; it not being for proceedings in law or equity, and it is not in the court of Chancery that the king's visitatorial power is to be exercised, but by the Lord Chancellor c. It has also been decided, that the jurisdiction of the court of Chancery does not extend to taxing a solicitor's bill of costs, for obtaining an act of parliament f. Where the plaintiff was employed as a solicitor, to carry on proceedings in Chancery, after which the defendant married one of the parties to the suit, and eventually received a proportionate part of the property in dispute, in right of his wife, under an order of that court; the court of Common Pleas held, that he was liable to pay the plaintiff his proportion of his bill of costs, after taxation by the master, although there had been no retainer of the plaintiff by the defendant, and although the bill had not been delivered to the latter, but to a co-defendant, who had suffered judgment by default s.

Under commission of bankrupt.

By the statute 6 Geo. IV. c. 16. § 14.h "the petitioning creditor or creditors shall, at his or their own costs, sue forth and prosecute the commission, until the choice of assignees; and the commissioners shall, at the meeting for such choice, ascertain such costs, and by writing under their hands direct the assignees, (who are thereby thereto required,) to

" reimburse such petitioning creditor or creditors such costs, out of the first " money that shall be got under the commission; and all bills of fees or " disbursements of any solicitor or attorney employed under any commis-" sion, for business done after the choice of assignees, shall be settled by " the commissioners, except that so much of such bills as contain any " charge respecting any action at law or suit in equity, shall be settled " by the proper officer of the court in which such business shall have been " transacted; and the same, so settled, shall be paid by the assignees to " such solicitor or attorney: Provided, that any creditor who shall have " proved to the amount of twenty pounds or upwards, if he be dissatisfied " with such settlement by the commissioners, may have any such costs and " bills settled by a master in Chancery; who shall receive for such settle-" ment, and the certificate thereof, twenty shillings, and no more." former part of this clause appears to have been taken from the statute 5 Geo. II. c. 30. § 25. upon which it has been holden, that the petitioning creditor is liable to the solicitor, for the expense of conducting the commission, up to the choice of assignees a. But, as between the solicitor and messenger, there is no implied contract on the part of the former, to pay him his expenses b. The solicitor is an agent merely, and is not to be regarded as a principal, as respects the messenger; and although he make himself responsible to the messenger, the petitioning creditor will not therefore be exonerated, without the express consent of the messenger to discharge him . And the messenger under a commission of bankrupt, may recover from the petitioning creditor, his fees for his services before the party be declared a bankrupt; although the party was duly declared a bankrupt, and the messenger's bill ordered by the commissioners to be paid by the assignee out of the estate d. The latter part of the above clause of the statute 6 Geo. IV. c. 16. § 14. appears to have been taken from the statute 5 Geo. II. c. 30. § 47. upon which it has been determined, that the bill of costs of a solicitor, under a commission of bankruptcy, is taxable, though approved by the commissioners, and stated and allowed in the accounts of the assignees c. And an attorney's bill, for obtaining a bankrupt's certificate, must be signed and delivered a month before he can sue thereon f. But an action may be maintained by a solicitor against an assignee, for business done under a commission of bankrupt, one month after he has delivered a copy of his bill, although it has not been taxed by a master in Chancery g.

The statute 2 Geo. II. c. 23. § 23. does not, we have seen h, extend "to Agent's bill. any bill of fees, &c. due from any attorney or solicitor, to any other attorney or solicitor, or clerk in court; but every such attorney, solicitor or clerk in court, may use such remedies, for the recovery of his fees, &c. against such other attorney or solicitor, as he might have done before the making of the said act." And there is a case in Wilson's Reports a, where a judge of the King's Bench having made an order to refer an agent's bill to be taxed, and the master not having obeyed it, the court was applied to, and held that the order was irregular; the master declaring, that he had never taxed a bill for agency. It is now the uniform practice, however, of all the courts b, to refer an agent's bill to be taxed, on the application of his employer, and upon his bringing into court the sum claimed by the plaintiff. But the bill of an agent to the attorney employed by the party, in respect of whose business the agency charges have been incurred, cannot be taxed, on the application of the client. It is not necessary that an agent's bill should be signed or delivered, before the commencement of an action d. And where business has been done by an attorney, for a client who afterwards tecomes himself an attorney, the former need not deliver a bill signed. in order to recover his costs e.

Bill due to executors, or administrators. It is not necessary for the executor or administrator of an attorney to deliver a bill of costs, for business done by his testator or intestate, before the commencement of an action f; the statute 2 Geo. II. c. 23. § 23. being confined to actions brought by the attorney himself, and not extending to his personal representatives: But such a bill may be referred to be taxed, on the defendant's undertaking to pay what is due s. An attorney delivered his bill, and after his death application was made to tax it, and above a sixth part was taken off; it was moved that the executrix might pay the costs; but the court of King's Bench held that she should not: for the words of the act, 2 Geo. II. c. 23. § 23. impose them upon the attorney or solicitor only, and the executrix is not to blame, if she stand upon his bill, or make out one from his books h.

Taxation before, or after settlement of bill. Before an attorney's bill has been settled and paid, it may be taxed as a matter of course, at any distance of time. But after it has been settled and paid, and the payment has been long acquiesced under, the courts will not refer it to be taxed as a matter of course; nor, as it seems, unless a gross error or imposition be pointed out. So, where a bond had been given for the debt five years before, and the vouchers had been delivered up, the court of Common Pleas would not refer the bill to be taxed; saying, an attorney at this rate could never be safe. But though an attorney ney's bill has been settled and paid, yet the courts, under special circumstances, will refer it to be taxed; for the client may by affidavit shew that the business charged was never performed, or that the charges are fraudulent: and where that is the case, neither payment, nor a release, nor a judgment for the money due, will preclude the court from having the bill But overcharges alone, without circumstances shewing fraud, do not seem to be sufficient b. An attorney's bill may also be taxed, though there was a special agreement, between the attorney and his client, that the former should be paid for his time, at a certain rate by the day, besides his expenses c: or though he has obtained a warrant of attorney from his client, for confessing judgment for the money due upon his bill, and has entered up judgment thereupon d. But the plaintiff, having paid to an attorney the amount of his bill, cannot, after a reduction of the bill by taxation, maintain an action for the difference. And when a rule has been served for taxing an attorney's bill, the court of King's Bench will not grant an attachment against the attorney, for not paying the balance due to his client, until the costs have been taxed, though the balance is admitted, and it has been agreed to dispense with the taxation f.

Where an action is brought on an attorney's bill, the court will order it After action to be taxed, at any time before trial, though after plea pleaded, and issue joined s. But it is a general rule, that an attorney's bill cannot be taxed, Not allowed, at at the trial of an action brought upon it h; nor after judgment by default, and a writ of inquiry executed i: for if the business was really done, (which must be proved at the trial,) the delay of the defendant for more than a month, in objecting to the quantum, is an admission that he thinks it to be reasonable. In a modern case however, an attorney's bill was referred to the master for taxation, after an action had been brought upon it and a verdict recovered, on a suggestion that some of the items in the bill would not have been allowed by the master, had it been originally referred to him for taxation; but upon the terms of the defendant paying the costs of the application, and of the taxation, with the costs of the cause as between attorney and client, the plaintiff being at liberty to take out the money forthwith, which had been paid into court k.

The statute 2 Geo. II. c. 23. § 23. only requires the delivery of a bill, Delivery of bill for the bringing of an action; and therefore, though an attorney cannot bring an action on his bill, till it has been delivered a month, that circumstance is not necessary to enable him to set it off. But he must not produce it at the trial by surprise: It is sufficient in such case, to deliver

How far conclusive against further charges.

Mistake in.

Arrest on, after delivery of unsigned bill.

When, to whom, and how delivered. The delivery of a former bill is conclusive evidence against an increase of charge in a subsequent bill, on any of the items contained in it, and strong presumptive evidence against any additional items; but if there were any real errors or omissions in the former bill, they may be rectified b. And a mistake in the date of items in an attorney's bill, which does not mislead, will not vitiate the delivery. If a defendant be arrested by an attorney for fees, after a bill of costs has been delivered to him, without being signed, he cannot be discharged out of custody on entering a common appearance, in the Common Pleas; as the want of such signature will be a defence to the action, on producing the bill at the trial d.

The statute requires the bill to be delivered one month or more before the commencement of the action; which is construed to be a lunar month's. And where a bill of costs is delivered to the party, it must be left with him, and not taken back again f. When two persons are liable to an attorney, for business done on their joint retainer, it is sufficient for him to deliver a copy of his bill to one of them, from whom he received his instructions, and to whom the management of the business was left by the other g: but it seems, that the delivery of a copy of the bill in such case, to the one who did not intermeddle, would not be sufficient; for he cannot be considered as having authority to receive it for both, nor is he likely to know what foundation there is for the charges in the bill h. And where a party in a cause having changed his attorney in the progress of it, a judge's order was afterwards obtained by the second attorney, for the delivery of a bill signed by the first, of his fees and disbursements, which delivery was accordingly made to the second attorney, this was holden, by a majority of the judges of the King's Bench, to be a sufficient delivery of the bill, to the party to be charged therewith, within the words and meaning of the statute, so as to enable the first attorney to bring his action against the client, for the amount of such bill i. So, the delivery of a bill to the attorney of the party to be charged, is deemed sufficient, if the party himself attend the taxation, or the bill be shewn to have come to his hands k. If the bill be not delivered to the party, it must be left for him at his dwelling house, or last place of abode; leaving it at the compting house not being deemed sufficient 1.

Evidence in ac-

In an action on an attorney's bill, it is sufficient to give in evidence a judge's order to tax the bill, the defendant's undertaking to pay what should appear to be due, and the master's allocatur thereupon m; and the defendant will not be permitted to question the reasonableness of the items before a jurya. In such an action, the nisi prius record is good prima facie evidence, to shew that the action was not commenced till the expiration of a month after the delivery of the bill b. And where it is material for the defendant to shew that the action was commenced earlier than it appears to have been by the nisi prius record, the declaration delivered by the plaintiff is admissible evidence. When an attorney has regularly delivered a bill signed, he may give a copy of it in evidence, without proof of notice to produce the original des It may indeed be in-, ferred from one case e, that unless a duplicate of the bill be kept, the plaintiff cannot give parol evidence of its contents, without a notice to produce it: But in a subsequent case it was decided, that a copy of an attorney's bill, not signed by the attorney, the original of which, duly signed, has been delivered to the defendant, is admissible in evidence, without proof of notice to produce the original f.

If an attorney refuse to deliver a signed bill to his client, the latter may compel him, by taking out a summons before a judge, entitled in one of the causes in which he was concerned; and, in the King's Bench, if the attorney, on being served therewith, do not attend, an order will be made for delivering it within a reasonable time. In the Common Pleas, three In C. P. summonses are necessary, in case of non-attendance, before an order can be obtained s. And, in either court, if the attorney still neglect to deliver it, the order should be made a rule of court; and on personal service of the rule b, and making attidavit thereof, the court on motion will grant an attachment. The bill being delivered, a judge's summons may be obtained for the attorney to shew cause, why it should not be referred to the master in the King's Bench, or one of the prothonotaries in the Common Pleas, to be taxed; upon which, if the attorney attend, and the judge think it reasonable, he will make an order of course for taxing it, on an undertaking signed by the client or his attorney, in the judge's book, to pay what shall appear to be due upon such taxation i: And, in the King's In K. B. Bench, a peremptory order will be made in like manner, upon the first summons, in case of non-attendance k; but, in the Common Pleas, if the In C. P. attorney do not attend, there must be three summonses taken out, and an affidavit made of the service and attendance thereon, before the judge will make an order ex parte 1. But in neither court can the client have a summons for delivery of the bill, and taxing it together m. In the Exche-Rule for atquer, the rule for an attachment against an attorney, for not delivering his bill of costs, is not absolute in the first instance, but only a rule nisin: in Exchequer.

and where it appeared, on shewing cause, that the bill had been delivered since the rule was served, and illness was assigned in the affidavit, as the cause of not obeying the order, the rule was discharged, without costs.

Appointment for, and taxation of.

When the order is made, a copy of it should be served, with the master's or prothonotary's appointment thereon, to tax the costs; and there is a rule in the King's Bench b, that "on every appointment to be made by the master, the party on whom the same is served, shall attend such appointment, without waiting for a second; or in default thereof, the master shall proceed ex parte, on the first appointment." But, in the Common Pleas, it is said there must be three appointments, in case of non-attendance, be fore the prothonotary can proceed ex parte. And that court will not stay proceedings, in an action on an attorney's bill, brought subsequent to the order of the judge of another court for its taxation, but previous to its being taxed d: Nor will they require the attendance of a third person before the prothemotary, on the taxation of a bill of costs, which had been referred to him in aid of a master in Chancery, to whom the reference had been previously made . And where, more than one sixth part of an attorney's bill having been taken off on taxation, the defendant presented a petition to the Vice Chancellor, to allow the costs of taxation, and, pending this proceeding, the attorney brought his action for the residue of his bill, the court of King's Bench held, that the action was well brought; the statute 2 Geo. II. c. 23. § 23. having only prohibited an action being brought pending the reference and taxation f.

Costs of taxa-

If a sixth part of the bill be taken off, the attorney is to pay the costs of taxation; but if less, the costs are in the discretion of the court s. In the exercise of this discretion however, the courts are governed by the statute: and accordingly, the costs of taxation have been always reciprocally given to the client or attorney, as a sixth part has, or has not been taken off h. But, in the Common Pleas, an attorney is not liable to pay the costs of taxing his bill, where the deduction of one sixth is occasioned, not by the particular items being taxed, but by a whole branch of it being disallowed. And where an attorney is entitled to the costs occasioned by the taxation of his bill, he ought to apply for them at the time; and cannot recover them by motion, after making a subsequent settlement k. If a client, in the course of a cause, advance money to his attorney, for specific disbursements in the cause, those disbursements must nevertheless be included in the bill of costs: Therefore, where a sum was deducted upon taxation, less than one sixth of the amount of the bill delivered, including those disbursements, the court of Common Pleas ordered the client to pay the costs of the taxation 2. And in that court, where an order is obtained for taxing an attorney's bill, and delivering up all papers, &c. upon the back of which the prothonotary, according to the usual practice, indorses his allocatur, the attorney is entitled in the first instance to the possession of it, for the purpose of enforcing payment of his bill b.

To assist the attorney in secovering his costs, he has a lien for the Lien of attoramount of his bill, upon the deeds, papers and writings of his client, which come to his hands in the course of his professional employment; and until his bill be paid, the court will not order them, to be delivered up c: nor can an action of trover or detinue be maintained for them. Therefore, where A. gave his attorney a specific sum, for the purpose of satisfying a debt, for which an execution had issued against his goods, at the suit of B., and the attorney paid the money to B., who thereupon delivered to him a lease which had been deposited by A. with B. as a security for the debt, the court held, that the attorney had a lien on it for his general balance due from A.; and that such lien was not extinguished, by his having taken acceptances from A. for the amount of that balance; before the lease came to his hands, some of those acceptances having been previously dishonoured, and one of them taken up by the attorney d. An attorney has a lien upon papers belonging to a bankrupt, not only for his bill for business done, but for the costs of an action brought against the bankrupt, subsequently to the issuing of the commission, to recover the amount of his bill. And an agent for an attorney dying intestate and insolvent, pending a suit wherein he was plaintiff, has a lieu for his costs upon a postea, of which the agent has obtained possession after the death of the intestate f. But the lien which an attorney has on the papers in his hands, is only commensurate with the right which the party delivering them has therein: and therefore, where the delivery is unauthorized, the attorney cannot detain them g. And a solicitor has no lien in equity against a remainder-man, on deeds put into his hands by tenant for life h.

An attorney has also a lien on the money recovered by his client, for On sum recohis bill of costs. If the money come to his hands, he may retain it to the amount of his bill: he may stop it in transitu, if he can lay hold of it:

If he apply to the court, they will prevent its being paid over, till his demand be satisfied. And Lord Mansfield declared he was inclined to go still farther; and to hold, that if the attorney give notice to the defendnot to pay the money recovered by his client, till his bill be satisfied, a payment by the defendant, after such notice, would be in his own wrong, and like paying a debt which has been assigned after notice . Accordingly it has been holden, that if the defendant's attorney pay to the plaintiff the debt and costs recovered, after notice from the plaintiff's attorney not to do so, till his bill has been first satisfied, the former is liable to pay over again to the latter, the amount of his lien on such debt and costs of the suit . An attorney has also a lien upon a sum awarded in fayour of his effent, as well as if recovered by judgment: and if, after notice to the defendant, the latter pay it over to the plaintiff, the plaintiff's attorney may compel a repayment of it to himself; and he will not be prejudiced by a collusive release from the plaintiff to the defendant d. But the courts will not go beyond these limits: and therefore, where the defendant, not having had any notice to the contrary, compromised the debt and costs with the plaintiff, before his attorncy had been paid, the court of King's Bench would not oblige the defendant to pay him . In the Common Pleas, if the defendant, after action brought, pay the debt to the plaintiff, without knowledge of the attorney, and without discharging the costs, the plaintiff has a right to proceed in the action for the recovery of them ! And if a plaintiff collude with the defendant's bail and attorney, to deprive the plaintiff's attorney of his costs, by settling the debt and accepting a part payment, without the intervention of the latter, the court of Common Pleas will not restrain him from proceeding against the bail, in order to recover such costs g. But where there is no fraud, the plaintiff is allowed to compromise the action with the defendant, in that court, as well as in the King's Bench, without consulting his attorney h. And if the plaintiff and defendant collusively settle the debt and costs upon an execution, in order to defraud the plaintiff's attorney of his costs, the latter cannot sue out a second execution on the same judgment, to levy his costs, but must apply to the court i. So, where the defendant had been discharged out of custody of the sheriff, with the consent of the plaintiff, notwithstanding a notice from the plaintiff's attorney to the sheriff's officer, not to release the defendant, until the costs were paid, the court held, that the sheriff was not liable to pay those costs, nor bound to retain the defendant, after the plaintiff was satisfied k. So where an attorney, without a regular authority from the plaintiff, commenced an action of replevin, and the plaintiff, knowing of the proceedings, suffered the cause

And where the plaintiff's attorney was indebted to the plaintiff, in a greater sum than the amount of the attorney's costs in the cause, the court of Common Pleas held that the agent, to whom the plaintiff's attorney was indebted on a general account, in a sum greater than the amount of such costs, could not, as against the plaintiff, retain out of the sum recovered by the latter, more than the charge for agency in that particular cause b. As a further Further security security to the attorney, he cannot be changed by his client, without leave of the court, or order of a judge, on payment of his bill, to be taxed by the proper officer c.

And, in the King's Bench, it has been holden, that an attorney has a lien on the judgment obtained by his client against the opposite party, to the extent of his costs of that cause only f; and the plaintiff, in that court, may set off interlocutory costs in the same cause, payable by him to the defendant, against the debt and costs recovered by him on the final result of the cause; notwithstanding the objection of the defendant's attorney, on the ground of his lien, which only attaches on the general result of the costs, &c. of the causes. So where a defendant, being sued by bill as an attorney of that court, pleaded by an attorney or agent who had not filed any warrant to defend, and the plaintiff, being nonsuited, moved to stay the proceedings in the action, undertaking to set off the defendant's costs against a judgment debt due from him to the plaintiff, the court held, that the defendant's attorney or agent had no lien upon the costs, for his own costs in defending the suit h. Of the Proceedings in Actions against Prisoners, in Custody of the Sheriff, &c.; and of the Marshal of the King's Bench, or Warden of the Fleet Prison: with the Relief they are entitled to, under the Lords' Act, &c.

PRISONERS in general may be considered as they are in custody on a Proceedings civil or criminal account: and on a civil account, they are either taken or detained in custody of the sheriff, &c. on mesne process before, or final process after judgment; or they are committed to the custody of the marshal of the King's Bench, or warden of the Fleet prison, on a cepi corpusa, or habeas corpus, or surrender in discharge of bail.

In treating of prisoners, I shall consider, first, the mode of proceeding General division in actions against them, when in actual custody of the sheriff, &c. previous to the plea; secondly, the writ of habeas corpus, and manner of removing prisoners under it, into the custody of the marshal of the King's Bench, or warden of the Fleet prison; thirdly, the bill against prisoners, in the actual or supposed custody of the marshal, and how far it is considered as the commencement of the suit; fourthly, the proceedings in actions against prisoners, in the actual custody of the marshal or warden, previous to the plea; fifthly, the proceedings in actions against them, when in actual custody of the sheriff, &c. or of the marshal or warden, subsequent to the plea; and lastly, the relief they are entitled to under the Lords' act, and other acts for the discharge of insolvent debtors.

But new, by the bove statute's, which was passed to relieve plaintiff from the trouble and expense of bringing up prisoners by habeas corpus, "if any defendant be taken or charged in custody, at the suit of " any person, upon any writ out of any of the courts at Westminster, and " imprisoned for want of sureties for his appearance, the plaintiff is such " writ may, before the end of the next term after such writ is returnable, " declare against such prisoner, in the court out of which the writ issued, " whereupon the said prisoner was taken and imprisoned, or charged in " custody; and may cause a true copy thereof to be delivered to such pri-" soner, or to the gioler or keeper of the prison of gaol in whose custody " such prisoner shall be or remain; to which declaration the said prisoner " shall appear and plead; and if such prisoner shall not appear and plead " to the same, the plaintiff in such case shall have judgment, in such " manner as if the prisoner had appeared, and refused to answer or plead "to such declaration."

If the declaration therefore do not allege, either expressly or by implication, in what custody the defendant is detained, and at whose suit e, it will be bad on a general demurrer. This allegation however is only necessary, where the plaintiff proceeds upon a bill of Middlesex or latitat, &c. or by attachment of privilege, in the King's Bench; and not where he proceeds by original writ in that court, or by action in the Common Pleas. And, in a declaration in debt, it is unnecessary to state at whose suit the defendant is in custody; the words "of a plea that he render, &c." being a sufficient allegation, that he is in custody at the plaintiff's suit '.

The statute expressly provides, that the plaintiff may declare against a Time for declardefendant in custody of the sheriff, &c. before the end of the next term after the process is returnable: But a subsequent rule, of the court of King's Bench e, having rather ambiguously required, that if the defendant should remain in custody for two terms, and the plaintiff should not declare against him within that time, the defendant should be discharged out of custody, after the end of the second term after such imprisonment; the judges of that court, in favour of liberty, determined, that where a defendant was arrested in one term, on a writ returnable the next, the term in which the defendant was arrested should be reckoned as one of the two terms; and consequently, that the defendant should be discharged, for want of a declaration, after the end of the same term in which the writ was returnable f. This practice however has been since altered; and it is now settled, agreeably to the letter and intention of the statute, that " in all cases where a prisoner is taken or charged in custody, by mesne " process issuing out of the King's Bench, the plaintiff may declare " against him, before the end of the next term after the return of the " process, by virtue whereof he was taken or charged in custody g." And a plaintiff need not declare against a prisoner, until the term next after the return of the writ, even though there was time in the term in which the writ was sued out, to have made it returnable in that term, and it be not in fact made returnable until the next term h. The term however, in which the process whereon the defendant was arrested is returnable, is still secounted one of the two terms; although it be returnable on the last day of the term i: and the plaintiff cannot declare before the return of the process, upon which the defendant was taken or charged in custody k.

The plaintiff having declared, an affidavit should be made, and filed with the clerk of the rules, in the King's Bench, before the first day of the ensuing term s; stating the delivery of a copy of the declaration, and the time when, and person to whom, the same was delivered h; if to a gaoler or turnkey, that he acknowledged the defendant was then a prisoner in his custody i; and that the defendant was arrested, or charged in custody, by process of this court, returnable before the delivery of the copy k. The time when such affidavit was filed should be entered thereon, by the clerk of the rules, and a copy of it produced to the master in the King's Bench, or clerk of the pleas in the Exchequer l, before judgment k. When a defendant, being a prisoner in custody of the marshal, apon mesne process, shall be taken and detained in custody of any sheriff by virtue of a judge's warrant for an escape, the plaintiff shall declare against him in custody of such sheriff, before the end of the second term after such taking and detaining; otherwise a supersedear may be made for such defendant and the previously rendered to the Fleet prison, the court held, that the time of his recaption, or coming again into prison, should be logical upon as the time of the render d.

Times for appearing, and pleading.

The times for appearing and pleading, when the defendant is in custody of the sheriff, &c. are regulated as follows: That "upon every arrest "by meane process out of either court, returnable the first day of "Easter or Michaelmas term, if a copy of the declaration be delivered " against the defendant, before one month from the day of Easter, or the " morrow of All Souls," (that is, before the third return of Easter term, or of Michaelmas term, as it then stood e,) "and affidavit thereof made " and filed, and the defendant do not appear before the end of ten days " after those terms respectively, judgment may be entered against him, if " rules have been given: but if he appear within that time, he shall im-" parl ustil the next term; unless the action be in London or Middlesex, " and the defendant be in prison within forty miles of London or West-" minster; in which case, though he appear before the expiration of that "time, he shall plead two days before the essoin day of the next term: " and in default thereof, rules having been given, judgment may be en-" tered against him as aforesaid f." And where the essoin day of the term fell on a Monday, and on the Saturday preceding, defendant not having pleaded, the plaintiff signed judgment as for want of a plea, the court of King's Bench refused to set aside the judgment for irregularity E.

"If a copy of the declaration be delivered against such defendant, on or after one month from the day of Easter in Easter term, or the morrow of All Souls in Michaelmas term, or in Hilary or Trinity term, and thereupon the plaintiff give rules to appear and answer, then if the defendant appear two days before the essoin day of the next term, he shall imparl until the next term; but if he do not appear within that time, judgment may be given against him h."

It will next be proper to consider the writ of habeas corpus, and the Habeas corpus. manner of removing prisoners under it, into the custody of the marshal of the King's Bench, or warden of the Fleet prison; after which, the remaining subjects of this chapter will be treated of in their proper order.

The writ of habeas corpus lies in civil or criminal cases. In criminal In criminal cases, this writ, and the proceedings thereon, principally depend on the statute 31 ('ar. II. c. 2. the provisions of which are extended by the statute 56 Geo. III. c. 100. " for more effectually securing the liberty of the subject." But this writ, whether at common law or under the 31 Car. The court, however, will grant a habcas corpus, to the warden of the Fleet, to take the body of a debtor confined there, before a magistrate, to be examined from time to time, respecting a charge of felony, or misdemeanour h. And where a prisoner is brought up under a habeas corpus, issued at common law, he may controvert the truth of the return, by virtue of the statute 56 Geo. III. c. 100. § 41. Bringing up prisoner by rule, in same court.

Habeas corpus in civil cases, what, and when it issues.

Different kinds of.

Habeas corpus

For removing defendant from custody of sheriff, &c. to that of marshal or warden.

For discharging

the writ of habes corpus is used to remove the defendant from one custody to another, as from the custody of the sheriff, or other officer by whom he was arrested, into the custody of the marshal or warden; or from the custody of the marshal into that of the warden, or vice versa; or from the prison of an inferior court. If the defendant be a prisoner in the King's Bench or Fleet prison, by process of the same court, he may be brought up by rule; but if he be in custody under the process of another court, there must be a habeas corpus.

The writ of habeas corpus, in civil cases, is a judicial writ, supposed to issue out of the King's Bench', or prothonotaries' office, commanding the sheriff, or other officer to whom it is directed, to have the body of the defendant, together with the day and cause of taking and detaining him, before the court or a judge, on a day certain in term time, or immediate, to answer or satisfy the plaintiff, or generally, to do and receive what the court or judge shall consider of him. Hence it is called, according to the subject matter, a writ of habeas corpus ad respondendum, ad satisfaciendum, or ad faciendum et recipiendum'; though the latter is more commonly called a habeas corpus cum causâ: and it is grantable of common right, at all times, whether in term or vacation, without any motion in court d.

The writ of habeas corpus cum causa e lies for the defendant to remove himself, of for the plaintiff to remove him, from the custody of the sheriff or other officer by whom he was arrested, into the custody of the marshal of the King's Bench, or warden of the Fleet prison. At common law, when a defendant was arrested, and detained or charged in custody of the shcriff or other officer, for want of bail, upon mesne process, if the plaintiff did not, within two terms, cause him to be brought up, by writ of habcas corpus cum causa, and committed, so that he might declare against him in custody of the marshal or warden, the defendant was entitled to his discharge, on common bail or appearance f. This mode of proceeding was altered by the statute 4 & 5 W. & M. c. 21. § 3. which enables the plaintiff to declare against the defendant, in custody of the sheriff, or other officer who arrested him g. He is still at liberty, however, to remove the defendant, by writ of habeas corpus cum causa, from the custody of the sheriff or other officer, into the custody of the marshal or warden, at any time before or after judgment h. This writ also lies for the bail of the defendant to bring him up, and surrender him in their discharge, to the custody of the marshal of the King's Bench, or warden of the Fleet prison; and may be granted, in the King's Bench, whether the defendant be in custody in a civil suit, or on a criminal account!: and under it, we have seen a, the court will either commit the defendant to the custody of the marshal or warden, or remand him to his former custody.

The writ of habeas corpus cum causa should be directed to the sheriff, or other officer in whose custody the defendant is detained; and there is an old rule of both courts b, directing it to be made returnable in court, at a day certain in term, unless directed to the sheriffs of London or Middlesex, or unless it be to deliver over the defendant in discharge of his bail. But this rule having fallen into disuse, the writ is now made returnable, before the chief justice at his chambers, immediate: and under it the Bringing up dedefendant should be brought in custody, according to the writ, in due and convenient time c, without being permitted to wander abroad, under pretence of such writd: And though the writ be returnable before the chief justice, yet any of the other judges, in his absence, may commit the defendant to the prison of the court e. A tipstaff is entitled to take a fee of six Tipstaff's fee. shillings, and no more, for conducting a prisoner from the judge's chambers to the King's Bench f: And the usual allowance to the sheriff, for Allowance to bringing up a defendant on a habeas corpus from the county gaol, is one shilling per miles; and if the defendant will not pay the sheriff his charges, the court will remand him h.

When the defendant, being charged with process issuing out of the court of King's Bench, is removed before declaration, from the custody of the sheriff or marshal to the Flect prison, the plaintiff cannot proceed further in that court; but must either declare against him in the Common Pleas, or remove him into the custody of the marshal, by writ of habcas corpus ad respondendumi, in order to charge him with a declaration k. But then, there must be something to charge him with, either in the body of the habcas corpus or return, or ready in court upon bringing him up m: And under this writ, a defendant may be committed to the custody of the marshal, on a special original n. If a prisoner be removed from the custody of the warden of the Fleet to How long prithe King's Bench prison, by writ of habeas corpus, he must remain in such prison, and shall not be set at liberty, until he has paid the prison fees due of marshal. to the warden of the Fleet. On a removal by writ of habeas corpus ad respondendum to the King's Bench or Fleet prison, the prisoner cannot be removed elsewhere, till he has answered to the cause depending against him in the King's Bench or Common Pleas : And it is a general rule, applicable to all writs of habeas corpus returnable in the King's Bench, that "every prisoner, who, by virtue thereof, shall be committed to the " custody of the marshal, shall remain there for two days next after such " commitment, notwithstanding any other writ of habeas corpus, to the " said marshal delivered and allowed c."

But in a subsequent case c, which was an action against the marshal, for an escape on mesne process, it being alleged in the declaration, that the prisoner was arrested on mesne process, and brought before a judge at chambers, by virtue of a writ of habeas corpus, and was by him thereupon committed to the custody of the marshal, as by the record thereof, now remaining in the court of King's Bench, appears, &c. it was determined by the court of King's Bench, that such allegation is either impertinent and surplusage, for, properly speaking, such documents are not records, nor capable of becoming so; or considering them as quasi of record, the allegation is sufficiently proved, by the production of them from the office of the clerk of the papers of the King's Bench prison, with whom they are properly deposited. And that court will not compel the marshal to affile Marshal not of record a writ of habeas corpus cum causâ, by virtue of which a person is committed to his custody in execution f. be a matter of record; the other not; for the court can only act by record as and accordingly, where the bill, in an action against the warden for an escape, alleged that the prisoner was brought to the bar of this court by the defendant, by virtue of a writ of habeas courses, and was by the same court re-committed to prison in execution, "as by the commitment more fully and at large appears; the plaintiff, on special demurrer, assigning for cause that it was not averred in the bill that the commitment was of record, had leave to amend out payment of costs. The prison books of the King's Bench and Fleet prisons, though admissible evidence to prove the period of the commitment and discharge of a prisoner, are not admissible to prove the cause of his commitment.

In actual, or supposed custody of marshal:

When the defendant is in actual custody of the marshal, he has the privilege of the court, and cannot be compelled to answer elsewhere; so that if he were not to answer here, none could have remedy against him h. And even where he is not in actual custody, yet still, when he appears and puts in bail, he is supposed to be in custody of the marshal, and may be proceeded against accordingly. But an appearance alone, without bail, is not sufficient; it being clearly settled, that when the defendant is not in actual custody, no action can be legally commenced against him as a prisoner, until he has filed bail k. It is the entry of bail in such case, which gives this court jurisdiction 1: and therefore, where no bail is entered for the defendant m, or where bail is entered for him by a wrong name n, or there are several defendants, and no bail is entered for one of them?, the proceedings are void, and coram non judice." But it is said, that by the practice of the King's Bench, though the defendant's bail be not taken and entered till the last day of term, and the bill be put in before, any time that term, it is well enough; yet from the time of the bail, the defendant

But when a defendant renders in distinge of his bail after a declaration has been filed conditionally, and notice served upon him, and rule to plead given, it is not necessary to deliver another declaration for the defendant in custody a. If a prisoner be turned over from one custody to another, it is considered as a continuance of the same imprisonment*: Therefore, where a defendant, having been taken or charged in custody of the sheriff or other officer by mesne process, is afterwards removed by habeas corpus, and committed to the custdoy of the marshal, the proceedings against him are to be reckoned from the time of his having been so taken or charged in custody c. In general, however, it is a rule, that when the defendant is committed to the custody of the marshal, upon a cepi corpus d, or habeas corpus e, &c. before declaration, the plaintiff should declare against him, in the King's Bench, before the end of the term next after such commitment; or, in case of a surrender to the marshal in discharge of bail, before the end of the term next after such surrender, and due notice thereoff. But the term of the commitment or surrender is to be accounted one, although the defendant was not committed or surrendered till the last day of vacation s. The defendant was formerly brought into court by rule, in order to be charged with a declaration; there being no occasion for a habeas corpus, when it was in the same court h: but this practice is now disused. And there is no occasion for an affidavit of the delivery of the declaration, where the defendant is in custody of the marshal i.

In the Common Pleas, if the defendant be committed to prison by process out of this court, or habeas corpus, the prisoner entering his appearance with the prothonotary, in case of a plaint or attachment of privilege, or with the filacer on other process, and giving rules to declare, the plaintiff not declaring before the end of the next term after the commitment, the defendant, in reference thereunto, is entitled to be discharged of his imprisomment by supersedeas, in the end of the next term; with liberty for the plaintiff to declare upon that appearance, the next term after that at the furthest k. And "if any defendant shall render him or herself, or be rendered to the Fleet prison, in discharge of his or her bail, at the suit of any plaintiff, where no further proceedings by declaration have been had against such defendant so rendered, before such render, unless the plaintiff shall declare against such defendant within two terms after such render, such defendant may be discharged out of custody by supersedeas, to be allowed

In that case however, there having been already an affidavit of the debt, when the plaintiff took out the process upon which the defendant was arrested, it is not necessary to make any further affidavit, in order to charge him in custody *; and it seems that the defendant, after such removal, may put in and justify bail in either court f. A prisoner once committed to the custody of the marshal or warden, is Proceedings by liable to be charged with a civil action, either by the same plaintiff for a different cause of actions or by a third person, so long as he remains in actual custody. For though it be a rule, that a prisoner once supersedeable, is always so, yet this holds only with regard to the same plaintiff, at whose suit he was in custody, for the original cause of action, and even with regard to him, it must be understood with this qualification, that the prisoner is only supersedeable, so long as he remains in the same custody, and under the same process; for the moment the nature of the custody is changed, the rule ceases: Therefore, if a prisoner upon mesne process be supersedeable for any irregularity, as for want of the demand of a plea, he cannot take advantage of it, after he is charged in execution; supposing he had any opportunity of applying on that ground, before he was charged in execution. So, where a prisoner is supersedeable, for want of filing a bill against him in due time, he waives the irregularity, by afterwards And it has been holden, that a creditor may lawfully enter a detainer against his debtor, who is in fact resident within the walls of the King's Benche, or Fleet prison f, though he be not there by compulsion. But a fugitive, surrendering himself to the warden, in order to take the benefit of an insolvent act, was not considered as a prisoner, nor liable to be charged as such with a declaration g.

In the King's Bench, the mode of charging a prisoner with an action, in custody of the marshal, in term time, is by filing a bill against him, as being in such custody, and delivering a declaration, which is a mere copy of the hill, to the turnkey. In vacation, there was formerly no way to charge him, but by making an entry in the marshal's book in the King's Bench office, that he should remain in custody, at the suit of the intended plaintiff, which was deemed sufficient to charge him, provided he were then in actual custody; for if he were at liberty, he might have been arrested h. But in a modern case i, where this matter was fully discussed, the court of King's Bench were of opinion, that the right method of charging the defendant with a new suit in vacation, is to file a bill, as of the preceding term; and then deliver to, or leave for the defendant in oustody, a copy of the declaration, as of the preceding term, and to make an And when the defendant is charged in vacation, upon Special memoa cause of action arising after the last term, there should be a special memorandum, similar to that against an attorney under the like circum-

For preventing, however, the detainer of prisoners charged with declarations in custody of the marshal, where the cause of action against them does not amount to a bailable sum, it is a rule , in the King's Bench and Exchequer, that "no declaration shall be sufficient cause of detaining such prisoner in custody, unless an affidavit, that the plaintiff's cause of action against him does amount to ten pounds or upwards, (since increased to tnenty pounds or upwards, by the statute 7 & 8 Geo. Mode of charging prisoner in Fleet, by third person, in C. P.

In the Common Pleas, there seems to have been formerly a difficulty in proceeding against prisoners in the Fleet prison, at the suit of a third person; to obviete which, a rule was made, that "if a capias were returned in court non est inventus, against a prisoner in the Fleet, he should be compellable to appear upon a habcas corpus ad respondendum, as well at the suit of a stranger, as at his suit whereupon he was imprisoned, and to answer to a declaration according to the rules of the court, or that judgment might be entered against him c:" and at length, by the statute 13 Car. II. stat. 2. c. 2. § 5. it was enacted, that "every person or persons, having " cause of personal action against any prisoner in the Fleet, may sue forth " an original writ upon his or their cause of action; and that a writ of " habeas corpus be granted to every such person or persons, to be directed " to the warden of the same prison, to have the body of such prisoner be-" fore the justices of the Common Pleas, at some certain day in any term, " to answer the said plaintiff or plaintiffs, upon his or their said cause of " action; and that if the said plaintiff or plaintiffs, at the said day, put " into the said court his or their declaration, according to the said original " writ, against the said prisoner being present at the bar, the said prisoner " shall be bound to appear in person, or to put in an attorney to appear " for him in the said action; and unless the said defendant plead upon a " rule given, to be out in eight days at the least after such appearance, "judgment by nihil dicit may be entered against such defendant, as ap-" pearing in person, which shall be good and effectual in law; and such " charge in court by declarations, signified by rule unto the said warden, " shall be a good cause of detention of such prisoner in his custody, from " which he shall not be discharged, without a lawful supersedeas or rule " of court: and if the said warden shall do otherwise, he shall be respon-" sible to the court, and to the party grieved for damages, by action upon "the case, to be brought against him for discharging such prisoner." rule of court was made, soon after the passing of this statute d, limiting the times within which prisoners should be brought to the bar of the court by habeas corpus, to be charged with declarations: but the statute 8 & 9 W. III. c. 27. § 13. having dispensed with the necessity of bringing them to the bar of the court for that purpose, the mode of charging them with a declaration, at the suit of a third person, is now similar to that used by the same plaintiff, at whose suit they were originally arrested: And they may, it seems, be charged with a declaration in vacation, as well as in term time a. But a rule was made in this court b, as well as in the King's Affidavit of Bench, in consequence of the statute 5 Geo. II. c. 27. that "no copy of a declaration, delivered at the Fleet prison, against any prisoner there, shall be a sufficient charge to hold such prisoner to bail, or to detain such prisoner in custody for want of bail, unless an affidavit that the plaintiff's cause of action amounts to ten pounds or upwards, (since increased to inventy pounds, by the statute 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 71. § 1.) be first made and filed in the proper prothonotary's office, and an indorsement made by the said prothonotary, or his deputy, upon such copy of a declaration, signifying the sum of money specified in such affidavit; for which sum so indorsed, bail shall be required, and for no more." On this rule, it is necessary that the original declaration, indorsed by the prothonotary, should be delivered, and not a copy of such declaration and indorsement c: but the rule is confined to cases where the prisoner is charged with a new action; and does not apply, where he is proceeded against by the same plaintiff, for the cause of action expressed in the process d: And the court will not Of delivery of discharge a defendant out of custody, on the ground of the affidavit of the delivery of the declaration not having been filed within twenty days after the delivery, if it be by way of detainer e.

After the delivery of the declaration against a prisoner in custody of the sheriff, &co. or against a prisoner in custody of the marshal, the plaintiff, in the King's Bench, should proceed to trial, or final judgment, within three terms next after such declaration delivered, if by the course of the court he can so proceed; of which three terms, the term wherein the declaration was delivered is one b; and should cause the defendant to be charged in execution, within two terms next after such trial or judgment; of which two terms, the term wherein the trial was had, or judgment obtained, is also one b; in case no writ of error be depending, nor injunction obtained for stay of proceedings: And if any writ of error be depending, or injunction obtained, then within two terms next after the judgment is affirmed, the writ of error nonprossed or discontinued, or the injunction dissolved; including the term of the affirmance, non pros, discontinuance, or dissolving the injunction b.

Distinction between rules of K. B. & C. P.

Upon these rules, it is necessary that the plaintiff, in the Common Pleas, should proceed to final judgment, within three terms inclusive after declaration, unless he can shew that it was out of his power to proceed so fast b; and, if final judgment be signed in the vacation of the third term, it will not be sufficient to prevent a supersedeas. There is a distinction however between these rules, and those of the King's Bench, as to the time allowed for proceeding against prisoners: In the latter court, it is required that the plaintiff shall proceed to trial or final judgment, within three terms inclusive after declaration, and shall cause the defendant to be charged in execution, within two terms inclusive after such trial or judgment; of which the term in or after which the trial was had, is reckoned as oned: but, in the Common Pleas, no notice is taken of the trial; the rule being, that the plaintiff shall proceed to judgment within three terms inclusive after declaration, and charge the defendant in execution, within two terms inclusive after judgment against him. And where the plaintiff had omitted to charge the defendant in execution within two terms, the court held, that the defendant was supersedeable, although in the mean time he had removed himself to the King's Bench prison, by kabeas corpus, in another action f.

Times for proceeding to judgment and execution, in Exchequer.

In the Exchequer it is a rule g, that "in all cases, after a declaration delivered at the Fleet, or any other gaol or prison, unless the plaintiff shall proceed to judgment thereupon, within three terms next after such declaration delivered, if by the course of the court he could so proceed, (of which three terms the term wherein the declaration was delivered shall be taken to be one); or, in case of a surrender in discharge of bail after declaration delivered, unless the plaintiff shall proceed to final judgment thereupon, within three terms next after such surrender and due notice thereof, if by the course of the court he could so proceed, (of which three terms the term wherein the surrender was made shall be taken to be one), the prisoner shall be discharged out of custody, by writ of supersedeas, upon entering an appearance; unless, upon notice given to the plaintiff's attorney or clerk in court, good cause shall be shewn to the contrary: And in all cases, after final judgment obtained against any prisoner in the Fleet, or any other gaol or prison, indess the plaintiff shall cause such prisoner to be charged in execution upon the said judgment, within two terms next after such final judgment obtained, (of which two terms the term wherein final judgment was obtained shall be taken to be one), in case no writ of error shall be depending on such judgment; but if any writ of error shall be depending thereupon, then within two terms next after the judgment thall be afterned, or the writtof error non-pressed on discontinued, including the term of the affirmance, non-pros or discontimilate; or, in case of a surrender in discharge of bail, after final judgment obtained, unless the plaintiff shall proceed to cause the defendant to be charged in execution upon the said judgment, within ino terms next after such surrender, and due notice thereof, (of which two terms the term wherein the surrender was made shall be taken to be one), in case no writ of error shall be depending on such judgment; but if any writ of error shall be depending thereupon, then within two terms next after the judgment shall be affirmed, or the writ of error non-prossed or discontinued, including the term of the affirmance, non-pros or discontinuance; the prisoner shall be discharged out of custody by supersedeas, unless, upon notice given to the plaintiff's attorney or clerk in court, good cause shall be shewn, in either of the said cases, to the contrary."

The mode of proceeding to trial and final judgment against a prisoner, in all the courts, is pretty much the same as in common cases. The plea is usually pleaded in person; but it may be pleaded by attorney, as is commonly done, where the defendant surrenders after appearance in discharge of his bail: The issue in that case is delivered to the attorney, but otherwise to the defendant or turnkey a: and formerly, where a prisoner appeared by attorney, he was bound to pay for the issue, or judgment might be signed; though it was otherwise, where he appeared in person b: and notice of trial to the gaoler or turnkey is deemed sufficient. In the Notice of trial. Common Pleas, ten days notice of trial was formerly required to be given to a defendant in the Fleet prison d; but now, the same notice of trial is usually given as in other cases.

In order to charge a defendant in execution, in the King's Bench, the proceedings must be entered on record, and the judgment roll docketed and filed; after which, if the defendant be a prisoner in the county gaol, a writ of capias ad salisfaciendum must be sued out, directed to the sheriff of the county in whose custody he is, if the venue be laid in that county; or if not, a ca. sa. must be sued out into the county, where the venue is laid, and a testatum ca. sa. directed to the sheriff of the county where he is a prisoner, and sent to the under-sheriff, with directions to charge him in custody !: or if he be detained in the King's Bench prison, at the suit of the same plaintiff, the plaintiff's attorney should obtain a side-bar rule from the clerk of the rules, for the marshal to acknowledge him in his custodys; and the marshal, being served with a copy of the rule, will write his acknowledgment at the bottom of it, which ought to be of the same term in which the Committuur piece.

Entry of committitur, in marshal's book. defendant is charged in execution, and not of proceeding term. A conmittator piece a should be then drawn in on parchaent, in the form of a bail-piece, and filed with the clerk of the judgments, in order that he may enter the committator on record. And it is usual, before this is done, to enter the committator in the marshal's book, kept at the King's Bench office. If the defendant be not detained in custody at the suit of the same plaintiff, the proper mode of proceeding is, to sue out a writ of habeas compus ad satisfaciendum, and bring the defendant into court thereon, in order to charge him in execution.

On record.

Filing committitur piece.

It was formerly holden, that the committitur must be actually entered on record, before the end of the second term inclusive after trial or judgment, otherwise the defendant was supersedeable; and there was no extension of the time, to the continuance day after term; nor was an entry in the marshal's book in time sufficient e. But it was afterwards determined, that if the plaintiff's attorney signed judgment, and filed the committitur piece with the clerk of the judgments, within the second term after trial and verdict against a prisoner, that was a sufficient charging Frim in execution within two terms, pursuant to the rule of court; though the final judgment and committitur were not entered of record, by the officer of the court, till the continuance day after the second term, provided the entries were then complete f. And a rule of court is now made s, that "the committitur on every judgment obtained against a prisoner in this court, shall be filed with the clerk of the dockets, on or before the last day of the term in which the prisoner is charged in execution: and the said clerk shall enter such committitur on the judgment roll, within four days next after the end of such term, exclusive of the last day of term; unless the last of the four days be Sunday, and in that case within five days next after the end of such term; and in default thereof, the prisoner shall be entitled to be discharged." In the construction of the above rule it has been holden, that where a prisoner is charged in execution, it is not sufficient for the plaintiff's attorney to file a committitur piece in due time with the clerk of the dockets; but he must also see that the latter enters the committitur on the judgment roll, within the time prescribed by the rule; and if that be not done, the prisoner is entitled to be discharged h. But this rule does not extend to the case of a prisoner committed under a habeas corpus, in which no committitur piece was ever necessary i. It is usual for the clerk of the judgments, at the end of every term, to send to the marshal a docket or list of the committiturs which have been entered in that term, stating therein

And where the clerk of the judgments had made a mistake, in omitting the name of one of several plaintiffs, in his docket transmitted to the marshal, it was rectified by the court, at the instance of the clerk . When Second committhe defendant has been once committed, a second commitment for the same cause, before the first is discharged, or notice given that it is abandoned, is clearly informal b. But where the defendant being acknowledged by the marshal to be in his custody, at the suit of A. it was morned that he might be charged in execution also, on a judgment of outlawry in another action at the suit of B. the court ordered the same in the first instance c. In the Exchequer, where a prisoner was charged in execution in Trinity term, for a sum which was wrongly stated in the judgment roll and subsequent proceedings; the court, in the following term, ordered the judgment roll and committitur to be altered, according to the facts appearing by the postea, and master's allocatur'd.

Nor is the prisoner bound to give notice of his removal; but the plaintiff must take notice of it at his peril: Therefore, where a prisoner, who had been surrendered in discharge of his bail, and afterwards removed to the Fleet, without giving any notice to the plaintiff, was charged in execution as a prisoner in the King's Bench, the court granted a supersedeas; for the plaintiff should have demanded to see the prisoner, and if not produced, would have known where to find him, and bring him back by habeas corthe writ being signed by the prothenomic allowed by a judge and excled, should be taken to the clark of the papers of the Flott prison, four days before the return is upon which, the defendant being brought into court, with the judgment roll, the court will commit him to the custody of the warden, charged in execution at the plaintiff's suit; and the secondary marks the habeas corpus and commitment by the court, in the margin of the judgment roll, and afterwards enters the award of the writ and committion thereon. If a defendant be brought into court upon a habeas corpus ad satisfaciendum, he is to be charged in execution upon that judgment only on which the habeas corpus issued; and therefore, if there be several judgments on which he is to be charged, there must be a habeas corpus ad satisfaciendum in each cause.

Consequences of defendant being charged in execution:

When the defendant is charged, by any of these means, the execution is considered as executed: and therefore, where the plaintiff afterwards died, it was holden that his executors were not bound to revive the judgment by scire facias; or to charge the defendant in execution de novo e. But where the plaintiff, having charged the defendant in execution, died, and the defendant's wife took out administration to the plaintiff, the court ordered the defendant to be discharged out of custody; and held that the plaintiff's attorney had no lien on the judgment for his costs . And the court of Common Pleas discharged a defendant out of custody in execution, after the plaintiff's death, it appearing that the next of kindid not intend to take out administration, on service of the rule nisi on the next of king. But they would not discharge a defendant out of custody in execution, at the suit of a plaintiff, although the application was not made until eighteen months after the death of the latter; it appearing that he had appointed executors who were still alive, and had not assented to the discharge b.

If the defendant be superseded or supersedeable, for want of proceedings before judgment, the plaintiff may nevertheless take or charge him in execution, at any time after judgmenta: but he cannot do so, if the defendant be superseded, or supersedeable, for want of being charged in execution b; his only remedy in that case, for charging the person of the defendant, being by action of debt upon the judgment, wherein the defendant cannot be holden to special bail c: And it is a rule in the Common Pleas, that "if prisoners discharged by supersedeas, for want of prosecution, be afterwards arrested or detained in custody, by action of debt upon the judgment obtained in the former cause, a common appearance shall be accepted d." The supersedeas however, in the first action, cannot be pleaded in bar of the second o: and, after judgment obtained in the second action, the defendant is again liable to be taken in execution.

Consequences of being superseded, or supersedeable.

In the King's Bench it is a rule s, that "the marshal present to the List by marshal judges, in their chamber at Westminster Hall, within the first four days of every term, a list of all such prisoners as are supersedeable; shewing as to what actions, and on what account they are so, and as to what actions (if any,) they still remain not supersedeable." And by another rule he it is ordered, that "if, by reason of any writ of error, special order of the court, agreement of parties, or other special matter, any prisoner, detained in the actual custody of the marshal, be not entitled to a supersedeas or discharge, to which such prisoners would, according to the general rules and practice of the court, be otherwise entitled, for want of declaring, proceeding to judgment, or charging in execution, within the times prescribed by such general rules and practice, then and in every such case, the plaintiff or plaintiffs, at whose suit such prisoner shall be so detained in custody, shall, with all convenient speed, give notice in writing of such writ of error, special order, agreement, or other special matter, to the marshal, upon pain of losing the right to detain such prisoner in custody, by reason of such special matter: and the marshal shall forthwith, after the receipt of such notice, cause the matter thereof to be entered in the books of the prison; and shall also present to the judges of the court from time to time, a list of all the prisoners to whom such special matter shall repersedeable, &c.

There is also a similar rule in the Common Pleas b, for discharging prisoners out of the Fleet prison.

When defendant is entitled to his discharge, for plaintiff's not proceeding to trial, or final judgment.

If the declaration be not delivered, and an affidavit thereof duly made and filed, when the defendant is in custody of the sheriff, &c. or if the plaintiff do not proceed to trial or final judgment, or cause the defendant to be charged in execution, in due time, the defendant, we have seen c, may be discharged out of custody, by writ of supersedeas or otherwise, according to the course of the court, on filing bail by bill, or entering a common appearance by original, in the King's Bench d; or, in the Common Pleas, he may be discharged by writ of supersedeas, on entering an appearance with the proper officere; unless, upon notice given to the plaintiff's attorney, good cause be shewn to the contrary.d. And the defendant may also be discharged out of custody, when bail above has been put in and justified for him, and allowed; or when the action is abated, discontinued, or decided in his favour. But where B., being in custody at the suit of A, in a joint action against B, and C, justified bail in an action entitled by mistake A. against B. only, and a rule so entitled was served on the marshal of the King's Bench, who thereupon discharged B. out of custody, he not being charged in more than one action at the suit of A.; it was holden, that the marshal was liable in an action for an escape f.

When an order is made for the defendant's discharge, common bail should be filed with the clerk of the common bails by bille, or a common appearance entered with the filacer by original: and if the defendant be in custody of the marshal, a certificate from the clerk of the bails or filacer, of the bail being filed, or an appearance entered, will be a sufficient ground for discharging him, without a supersedeas! But if the defendant be in custody of a sheriff, &c. or of the marden of the Fleet, a writ of supersedeas is necessary; for issuing which, in the King's Bench by bill, the bail-piece, signed by one of the judges, is a warrant to the officer, with whom it is to be left; and he delivers it over to the clerk of the common bails to be filed h. Causes to prevent prisoner's discharge.

For not declaring.

Having thus shewn in what manner the defendant is to be discharged, it will be proper to consider what causes will be sufficient to prevent his discharge, for not declaring, proceeding to trial or final judgment, or charging him in execution. We have already seen b, that where a prisoner is supersedeable, for want of filing a bill against him in due time, he waives the irregularity by afterwards pleading. When there are two defendants, and one of there is arrested and detained in prison, but the other absconds, so that the plaintiff is obliged to proceed to outlawry against him, this seems to be a good cause for not declaring against the defendant who is in prison, until the other defendant be outlawed c: But the plaintiff in such case must move for time to declare against the defendant in custody.

For not proceeding to trial.

After declaration, if the venue be laid in a county where the assizes are holden but once a year, it may be impossible, by the course of the court, for the plaintiff to try his cause in three terms: this therefore, when it happens, is allowed to be a good cause for not proceeding to trial c. So where the writ, in a country cause, was returnable in Michaelmas term, and the plaintiff declared in Hilary, and the defendant imparled till Easter term, by which means the plaintiff was disabled from proceeding to trial till the next summer assizes, a judge refused to grant a superscdeas f. And in like manner, where the court take time to give judgment on demurrer, &c. they will not suffer the plaintiff to be prejudiced, but will allow this to be a good cause for not proceeding to final judgment g. Where a prisoner, who had been charged with a declaration as of Trinity term, absconded during the long vacation, and did not return into custody till Hilary term following, the court of Common Pleas would not discharge him, though the plaintiff had not signed judgment before the end. of Hilary term h.

For not charging him in execution. After trial or final judgment, a writ of error and injunction are, whilst they continue in force, good causes for not charging the defendant in execution. So, a writ of error has been deemed a good cause for not charging him in execution, although the bail thereto do not justify. And where the plaintiffs, being assignees of a bankrupt, were prevented from charging the defendant in execution, by his pleading a bad plea to a scine facias, the court of Common Pleas would not grant a supersedeus b. And in that court, it seems that a prisoner in custody on mesne process may be charged in execution, after judgment against him, notwithstanding the allowance of a writ of error c. A regular treaty of accommodation, or agreement for a compromise, is, in any stage of the action, a good cause, for not declaring, &c. d: But no treaty or agreement is sufficient to prevent a supersedeas, unless it be in writing, signed by the defendant or his attorney, or some person duly authorized by the defendant; and it be expressed therein, that proceedings are stayed at the defendant's request c.

It is also a rule, in all the courts f, for preventing unnecessary expense Notice of applito plaintiffs, in case of notice given by prisoners of their intention to apply for their discharge, under any act made for the relief of insolvent debtors, that " after such notice given to any plaintiff, no prisoner shall be superseded or discharged out of custody, at the suit of such plaintiff, by reason of such plaintiff's forbearing to proceed against him, according to the rules and practice of the court, from the time of such notice given, until some rule or order shall be made in the cause in that behalf, by the court, or one of the judges thereof." And, by the statute 7 Geo. IV. c. 57 g. "no pri-" soner who shall have petitioned the court for relief under that act shall, " after the filing of his or her petition, be discharged out of custody, as " to any action, suit or process, for or concerning any debt, sum of money, " damages, or claim, with respect to which an adjudication in the matter " of such petition can under the provisions of that act be made, by or by " virtue of any supersedeas, judgment of non pros, or judgment as in the " case of a nonsuit, for want of the plaintiff or plaintiffs in such action " suit or process proceeding therein." Where the defendant, after surrendering in discharge of his bail, in an action in the Common Pleas, was committed to criminal custody for a misdemeanor, and continued in such custody, the court would not discharge him from the action, because the plaintiff had omitted to charge him in execution within two terms after his surrender h. And where the defendant, after verdict, applied for his discharge under the insolvent debtors' act, and was sentenced to eighteen months' imprisonment, the court of Common Pleas held, that though no Prisoners in execution, treatment of.

By the common law, a prisoner in execution was to be kept in salva et arcta custodia, till he satisfied the plaintiff. But, in order to prevent any unnecessary hardship or oppression, rules of court were made, in the beginning of the reign of king George the second, for the better government of the King's Bench and Fleet prisons b, and the preservation of good order therein; which have been since extended and explained by subsequent Fees payable by. rules c: and tables of fees were settled and established, to be taken by the marshal or warden, for any prisoner's commitment, or coming into gaol, or chamber rent there, or discharge thence, in any civil action d. By the statute 55 Geo. III. c. 50. all fees and gratuities paid or payable by any prisoner, on the entrance, commitment or discharge to or from prison, shall absolutely cease, and the same are thereby abolished and determined; with an exception of the King's Bench prison, Fleet, Marshalsea, and Palace courts e: And, by the statute 56 Geo. III. c. 116. § 3. " the said recited act, and the provisions therein contained, shall extend to all prisoners well civil as criminal, whether confined for debt or crime, in any of the prisons in England, except as to the said prisons in the said act excepted." There is also a clause in the Lords' act f, for the further protection of prisoners against the oppression of inferior officers, and the exaction of gaolers to whose custody they may be committed.

Subsistence of, and allowances

For the subsistence of prisoners confined in county gaols, and in the King's Bench, Fleet, and Marshalsea prisons, certain allowances are made out of the county rates, by the statutes 14 Eliz. c. 5. § 37. 43 Eliz. c. 2. § 14, 15. and 53 Geo. III. c. 113. By the 52 Geo. III. c. 160. justices of the peace are enabled to order parochial relief to prisoners confined under mesne process for debt, in such gaols as are not county gaols. By the 53 Geo. III. c. 21. the commissioners of the customs and excise are authorized to make allowance, for the necessary subsistence of poor persons confined under Exchequer process, &c. And, by the last general insolvent act g, " the court for the relief of insolvent debtors may order and " direct the assignees to pay to any prisoner who shall have petitioned " the court for relief under that act, out of his or her estate and effects, " such allowance for his or her support and maintenance, during such " prisoner's imprisonment, and previous to the adjudication in the matter "And in all cases where such prisoner shall, upon such adjudication, be " liable to further imprisonment, at the suit of his or her creditor or cre-" ditors, it shall be lawful at any time for the said court; on the applica-" tion of such prisoner, to order the creditor or creditors, at whose suit " he or she shall be so imprisoned, to pay to such prisoner such sum or " sums of money, not exceeding the rate of four shillings by the week in " the whole, at such times, and in such manner, and in such proportions, " as the said court shall direct; and that on failure of payment the meof, " as directed by the said court, the said court shall order such prisoner to "be forthwith discharged from custody, at the suit of the creditor or cre-" ditors so failing to pay the same."

The rigour of imprisonment is also considerably abated, by a prisoner's When entitled to being allowed, on giving security to the marshal or warden, the benefit of the rules of the King's Bench or Flect prison, or of living within certain limits b, out of its walls. This benefit is extended to prisoners in execution, as well as to those who are confined on mesne process; and it may be had by one in custody on an excommunicato capiendo c: but it is never granted, except under very special circumstances d, to a prisoner in excepttion on a criminal account e: and, generally speaking, prisoners in custody for a contempt are not entitled to the rules of the King's Bench But where the marshal, in consequence of a surgeon's certificate that a prisoner in his custody for a contempt, in not paying money pursuant to the master's allocatur, was dangerously ill, and would die if closely confined, allowed the prisoner the rules until he got better, and afterwards confined him again within the walls; the court refused to proceed against the marshal, by ordering him to pay the money for the nonpayment of which the prisoner was in contempt, and dismissed the application with costs s. For preventing prisoners from breaking the rules, it is ordered, that "whensoever it shall be made appear to the court, that any person, having the benefit of the rules of the prison of the King's Bench, shall, during such time as he has had the benefit of such rules, have escaped and gone at large out of and beyond the limits of the said rules, every such person shall thenceforth lose and be deprived of the benefit of such rules; and be thereafter wholly incapable of enjoying the same, under any grant thereof; and shall thenceforth be kept and confined a prisoner, within the walls of the said prison, unless the court shall otherwise order." And, by a late rule, "no clerk, turnkey, officer, or other person, employed by or under the marshal, shall receive or take, except from the marshal, any fee, gratuity, or reward, for or in respect of making inquiry into the sufficiency of any person or persons proposed or intended to give security, upon the granting of the rules of the King's Bench prison, or otherwise in respect of the granting of the said rules: and that the marshal do dismiss any person who shall offend therein."

Day rules.

A prisoner likewise, whether he be detained in custody on mesne process, or in execution, may, on petition to the court c, have day rules allowed him, or the liberty of going out of the prison or its rules, for transacting his business in term time. The petition for this purpose must be signed by the prisoner, before he goes at large d: and when the day rule is made in the King's Bench, it covers, by relation back, the liberation of a prisoner who had signed the petition, but had gone out of prison before the sitting of the court on the same day; though the marshal was sued for the escape before the sitting of the court. But every prisoner having a day rule, must return within the walls or rules of the prison, at or before nine o'clock in the evening of the day for which such rule shall be granted f. It was formerly a rule, that "no prisoner in the King's Bench prison, or within the rules thereof, should have, or be entitled to have, day rules, above three days in each term;" and another rule was made g, by which it was ordered, that "notwithstanding the above rule, if any person in the King's Bench prison should thereafter state, by affidavit, any special cause, to the satisfaction of this court, for having an additional day rule or day rules, beyond those allowed by the aforesaid rule, such additional rule or rules should be granted accordingly, for any day or days ensuing such application." But, by a subsequent rule h, the two former ones were repealed: so that the practice is now the same, as it was before the three last rules were made upon the subject i.

Relief of, by Laurds' act.

Besides these indulgences, some permanent provisions were made for the relief of prisoners in execution, by the statute 32 Geo. II. c. 28. § 13. which (originating in the House of Lords.) is called the Lords' act. By this statute, "if any person shall be charged in execution, for any sum of "money not exceeding 100l." (since extended to 200l. by the 26 Geo. III. c. 44. § 1. and to 300l. by the 33 Geo. III. c. 5. § 1. which is made perpetual by the 39 Geo. III. c. 50.) "and shall be minded to deliver up to

III. c. 5. § 4. whereby, after reciting that persons are often committed on attachments, for not paying money awarded, under submissions to arbitration by or made rules of court, and likewise for not paying costs duly and regularly taxed and allowed, after proper demands made for that purpose, and also upon writs of cacommunicato capicado, or other process for or grounded on the non-payment of costs or expenses, in causes or proceedings in ecclesiastical courts; it is declared and enacted, that "all such persons are and shall be entitled to " the benefit of this act, and subject to the same terms and conditions " as are therein expressed and declared, with respect to prisoners for " debt only d." And a defendant in custody upon an attachment, who had been convicted on an indictment for an assault, and upon reference to the king's coroner and attorney, was awarded to pay so much for costs, and so much for compensation to the prosecutrix, was held to be entitled to be discharged as an insolvent debtor, under the Lords' act, without the aid of Lords' act extends to prisoners charged in execution, on process issuing out of inferior, as well as superior courts b. And it is no objection to a prisoner's being discharged under it, that his creditor is dead c; or that the defendant has agreed not to take the benefit of the act d. And where the defendant, in the Common Pleas, is charged in execution with the penalty of a bond, it may be reduced to the principal and interest, in order to entitle him to such benefit. But the defendant in a qui tam action is not entitled to the benefit of the Lords' act f; nor a defendant in custody under a writ de excommunicato capiendo, for contumacy in not paring a sum for alimony, and also for costs in the ecclesiastical court f. And a prisoner who is taken in execution for more than 300l. and afterwards reduces his debt below that sum, is not entitled to be discharged under it, in the next term after he has so reduced his debt, unless it be also the next term after he was taken in execution h.

Process of inferior court, &c.

Prisoners, when not entitled to benefit of Lords' act.

After taking benefit of insolvent debtors' acts. It was also provided, by the statute 32 Gco. weekly sum.

When a prisoner has been brought into court, to be discharged under the Lords' act, and upon his examination the court have refused to discharge him, they will not afterwards discharge him on that act, though he make an affidavit of circumstances, in answer to the cause shewn on his examination against his discharge, and that those circumstances were not then disclosed, owing to a mistake. And if a prisoner, brought up to be discharged under the above act, deliver in a false schedule, and be remanded, the court of Common Pleas will not, at the instance of a creditor, even with the prisoner's consent, order him to be brought up a second time, for the purpose of amending his schedule, and assigning over that property which he had before concealed d. But that court will not regulate their proceedings, as to the discharge of an insolvent, by what has passed in the insolvent debtors' court; therefore it is no ground for opposing his discharge, that he has been remanded in that court for fraud e.

All objections to the insufficiency of the schedule, in point of form, must be made the first time the prisoner is brought up f. And if, on the second day, the creditor shall make default, or shall appear and be unable to discover any estate or effects omitted in the account, the court shall immediately order the prisoner to be discharged, upon his executing an assignment and conveyance of his estate and effects; unless the creditor insist upon his being detained in prison, and shall agree by writing, signed with his name or mark, (or, if he be out of England, under the hand of his attorney,) to pay and allow the prisoner weekly, a sum not exceeding 3s. 6d. (or, if more creditors than one insist on his detention, not exceeding 2s. a week each s,) to be paid on Monday in every week, so long as the prisoner shall continue in execution; and in every such case, the prisoner shall be remanded h. The payment is to be made, by the act, every Monday, and the note must be drawn up accordingly. And, in the Common Pleas, it seems that such note ought to contain an express promise to pay the allowance on a Monday, although it be dated on that day of the week a. Prisoners in execution, when and how compellable to deliver up their effects.

The act of parliament requires payment to the debtor; but the courts, in construing the act, have considered payment to the turnkey as payment to the debtor: and payment to the person who opened the door of the prison, has been considered, by the court of Common Pleas, as payment to the turnkey g. If the payment be not made in time h, or any part of the money be paid in a spurious or foreign coin', the prisoner has a right to his discharge. And where the money was not paid before ten o'clock at night of the day on which it became due, it was holden that the defendant's right to his discharge was not waived, by the turnkey on the felon's side accepting it after that time k. But the defendant cannot, it seems, be discharged for non-payment of the money, where he removes himself to the prison of another court 1. The mode of obtaining a prisoner's discharge for non-payment of the allowance, is by application to the court in term-time, or to a judge in vacation: and where a note is given at the assizes, the court will discharge him for non-payment of the allowance, upon a record of the proceedings being sent to them, signed by the judge of assize m. A judge's order for a prisoner's discharge under the Lords' act, made out of term, has been held to be final n: But, in the Common Pleas, this order cannot be made by a judge in term, though summonses were taken out in vacation, and the order only delayed till the beginning of term, by an irregularity in the affidavits o.

But a prisoner in execution, at the suit of a creditor whose debt exceeds 300l., is not liable to be brought up, under the compulsory clauses of the Lords' act, to make an assignment of his estate and effects e. Cases decided thereon.

The acts of parliament hitherto mentioned, are only for the relief of debtors in execution; but besides these acts, others have been occasionally passed, for the relief of insolvent debtors in general. The cases decided on these latter acts, may be classed under the following heads: Ist, the cases in which insolvent debtors are f, or are not g, entitled to the benefit of the acts; 2dly, the jurisdiction of the justices, at an adjourned session h; 3dly, their remanding the insolvent, for obtaining moneyor goods under false pretences; 4thly, the property which passes under the acts k; 5thly, the assignment of it by the clerk of the pasce 1; 6thly, the evidence in support of an ejectment by the assignee m, or to prove the insolvent's discharge n; and lastly, the liability of future effects.

Permanent insolvent acts. At length, by the statute 53 Geo. III. c. 102. (Lord Redesdale's act,) a court was established for the permanent relief of insolvent debtors in England, called 'The Court for relief of Insolvent Debtors.' This statute was amended by the 54 Geo. III. c. 23. and 56 Geo. III. c. 102. and continued by the 59 Geo. III. c. 129.; but having been suffered to expire, the statute 1 Geo. IV. c. 119. was made, for the permanent relief of insolvent debtors in England, which was amended by 3 Geo. IV. c. 123. and 5 Geo. IV. c. 61. and afterwards repealed by 7 Geo. IV. c. 57. except as to the matters of certain petitions therein mentioned. The insolvent Decisions theredebtors' court has been holden to be such a court, as privileges the parties and their witnesses, in attending it, from arrest, cundo, morando, et redeundo, in the same manner as when in attendance upon any other courts. And the provisional assignee of that court may maintain an ejectment, for the property of an insolvent, under the provisions of the statute 1 Geo. IV. c. 119. without a previous application to the court b. But an assignment of the property of an insolvent, under that statute, only transferred the property he was possessed of at the time of presenting the petition for his discharge; and did not pass any after acquired property to his assignce c. And neither the 53 Geo. III. c. 102.d nor the 1 Geo. IV. c. 119.e discharged the prisoner from all his debts; but only from the demands of such of his creditors as were named in his schedule, and specified in the order of discharge. It has also been determined, that a plea of discharge, under the statute 53 Geo. III. c. 102. is no bar to an action of trespass for mesne profits, accruing before the discharge f.

THE different modes of commencing actions, in the courts of King's Means of re-Bench, Common Pleas, and Exchequer, having been already considered, it from inferior from inferior may be proper to take a view of the various means by which they are courts. removed thither from inferior courts. These are, by writ of certiorari, or habeas corpus, from inferior courts of record; or by writ of pone, recordari facius loquelam, or accedas ad curiam, from such as are not of record.

The writ of certioraria is a writ issuing sometimes out of Chancery b, Certiorari, what, and sometimes out of the King's Bench or Common Pleas c; and lieth in general. where the king would be certified of any record which is in the Treasury, or in the Common Pleas, or in any other court of record; or before the sheriff and coroners: or of a record before commissioners, or before the escheator; in which cases he may send this writ to any of the said courts or officers, to certify such record before him in banco, or in Chancery, or before other justices, where the king pleaseth to have the same certified: and he or they to whom the certiorari is directed, ought to send the same record, or the tenor of it, as commanded by the writ; and if they fail so to do, then an alias shall be awarded, and afterwards a pluries, with a clause of vel causam nobis significes, and after that an attachment, if good cause be not returned upon the pluries d.

Suits commenced in inferior courts of record may, it seems, be removed Into Exchequerby certiorari into the Exchequer, by the plaintiff or defendant e: And this court, having an original and in many cases an exclusive jurisdiction in fiscal matters, will not permit questions in the decision of which the king's revenue is interested, to be discussed before any other tribunal. On such occasions, the court interposes upon motion, by ordering the proceedings to be removed into the office of pleas f. The usual order, in cases of this nature, is that the action be removed out of the King's Bench or Common Pleas, or other court in which it is depending, into the office of pleas in the Exchequer; and that it shall be there in the same forwardness, as in the court out of which the action is removed. This order, however, does not operate as a certiorari, to remove the proceedings;

but as a personal order on the party, to stay these there with liberty to commence his action in the office of pleas; and of course calls upon the defendant in that action to appear, to accept a declaration, and to put the plaintiff in the same state of the pardness, in the office of pleas, as he was WANTED THE PROPERTY OF THE PRO in the other court . .

Certiorari, and Chancery.

When a certiorari issues out of Chancery, it is returnable in that court; millimus, out of hand the record when brought up, if wanted in another court, must be sent there by miltimus b. And anciently, it seems, no other court but the Chancery could grant a certiorari, on a suggestion, where there was nothing before them c; but it is now settled, that a record may be removed into the King's Bench or Common Pleas, as well by certiorari out of these courts d, as by certiorari and mittimus out of Chancery e: For, as the King's Bench and Common Pleas have the superintendence of all inferior jurisdictions, their proceedings are removable into these courts, in order that the judges may inspect the record, and see whether they keep within the limits of their jurisdiction f.

Certiorari, when it lies, in general. In ejectment. Before or after judgment.

A certionari lies, in general, for the removal of all causes from inferior courts g, whether the defendant has been proceeded against therein by capias, or other process: and it will lie to remove an ejectment from an inferior court h. This writ may be sued out before, or, in some cases, after judgment; and lies in civil actions before judgment, in the King's Bench or Common Pleas, in all cases where these courts have jurisdiction, and can administer the same justice to the parties as the court below: and though the cause cannot be determined in the court above, yet this writ may be granted, if the inferior court have no jurisdiction over it, or do not proceed therein according to the rules of the common law i. But if the inferior court have jurisdiction, and the court above have not, a certiorari cannot be had; as where an action is brought in London, for calling a woman whore k, or upon a custom or bye-law which is only suable in the inferior court 1. A certiorari also lies, to remove a cause from the court of the isle of Elym; or from the Cinque portsn, or other exempt ju-And even in the case of a customary proceeding by foreign attachment, if the defendant cannot find bail below, he may sue out a cer-

But a certiorari lies not in general, where the debt or damages appear to be under forty shillings b: though the court of King's Bench refused to quash a certiorari upon this ground, in an action for an assault brought against excise officers, who could not have had an impartial trial " in the inferior court c.

To Wales, or county palatine.

It seems to have been formerly holden, that no certiorari lay to Wales d, or a county palatine, in civil cases e: and it cannot now be had as a matter of course f; nor unless a special ground be laid, as that the case strongly calls for a trial at bar g. And where a certiorari issued, to remove a cause from the court of Great Sessions in Wales, without my special ground for so doing, and without any notice having been given to the opposite party, but was not delivered to the judges of that court, till the day before the trial would in course have taken place, and after great expenses had been incurred; the court of King's Bench, under these circumstances, not only quashed the certiorari, and directed a procedendo to issue, but ordered that the party who issued it, should pay to the opposite party, the costs incurred by the latter in the court below, together with the costs of the application h. By the statute I Geo. IV. c. 87. § 5. "it shall not be By stat I Geo.

" be so removed, upon, special application to the court for that purpose."

And, by the statute 5 Geo. IV. c. 106. § 23. "no writ of certiorari shall By stat. 5 Geo. " be granted, issued forth, or allowed, to remove any action, bill, plaint, pected to be found; the proper course being, to remove the special verdict, when found, into the latter court, by writ of error. And a plaint in replevin, cannot be removed from a county court in Wales, into the King's Bench, by certiorarib.

In criminal cases.

In criminal cases, a certiorari always lies, unless it be expressly taken away; but an appeal never lies, unless it be expressly given by the statute. A certiorari is granted of course, on the application of the crown: but when a defendant applies for it, he must lay some ground before the court, supported by affidavit. And the court of King's Bench may grant a certiorari, to remove an indictment for a misdemeanor, from the Great Sessions in Wales, into this court. But the court refused a certiorari, to remove an indictment for a misdemeanor, and proceedings thereon at the assizes, after conviction and before judgment; which was prayed for the purpose of applying for a new trial, on the judge's refusal of the evidence, on the ground of the verdict being against evidence, and the judge's direction. On moving for a rule nisi for a certiorari, to remove an order of sessions, it is irregular to entitle the affidavits in any cause; and if they are entitled, they cannot be read g.

In civil actions, after judgment.

After judgment, a certiorari does not in general lie, to remove a cause from an inferior court h; and therefore if it be returned thereon, that the defendant is condemned by judgment, he shall be remanded, and continue in prison, without being let to bail against the will of the plaintiff, until agreement be made with him of the sum adjudged i. So where, in an action for sixteen pounds, brought in the forest court of Knaresborough, the defendant suffered judgment by default, and afterwards sued out a certiorari, to remove the cause into the King's Bench; the latter court held, that the certiorari was too late, and made a rule for a procedendo absolute, although the defendant, in opposition to that rule, swore that the jurisdiction of the inferior court was limited to five pounds h. But if a defendant in execution have an action depending against him in the court below, this, being returned, will be a cause of detainer in the court above: And in cases of absolute necessity, as where the inferior court refuses to award execution k, the court above will grant a certiorari after judgment, for the sake of doing justice between the parties. So, where the inferior court acts in a summary method, or in a new course different from the common law, a certiorari lies after judgment; though a writ of error does not 1.

judgment, he ought to shew in his scire facias, that it is the judgment of tiorari, or habeas an inferior court, removed hither by certiorari, and to point out the partickler limits of the inferior jurisdiction, and pray execution within those limits: But if the judgment be removed into the King's Bench by writ of error, and affirmed, the party may have execution in any part of England; for by the affirmance it is become the judgment of the King's And now, by the statute 19-Geo. III. c. 70. § 4. reciting that Certiorar, to in persons served with process issuing out of inferior courts, where the debt is under ten pounds, (since extended to twenty pounds, by the statute 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 71. § 6.) may, in order to avoid execution, remove their persons and effects beyond the limits of the jurisdiction of such courts; it is enacted, that " in all cases where final judgment shall be obtained in " any action or suit, in any inferior court of record, it shall and may be " lawful to and for any of his majesty's courts of record at Westminster, " upon affidavit made and filed of such judgment being obtained, and of " diligent search and inquiry having been made after the person of the " defendant or his effects, and of execution having issued against such " person or effects, and that they are not to be found within the jurisdic-" tion of the inferior court, to cause the record of the said judgment to be " removed into such superior court, and to issue writs of execution there-" upon, to the sheriff of any county or place, against the defendant's per-" son or effects, in the same manner as upon judgments obtained in the " said courts at Westminster:" Which provision is extended, by a subsequent statute b, to the courts in Wales, and the counties palatine: but from these courts, a transcript of the record is to be removed, and not the record itself; and the latter act extends to all judgments, for the defendant as well as the plaintiff. In a case arising upon the former of these statutes, where a judgment was signed against a defendant in an inferior court of record, and he surrendered in discharge of his bail, but, before he was charged in execution, he was removed to the Fleet by habeas corpus; the court of Common Pleas determined, that a certiorari might be granted to remove the record, in order to charge him in execution in the Fleet, on the ground that although the case of a prisoner in actual custody be not within the express terms, yet it is within the equity of the statute . But the statute 19 Geo. III. c. 70. § 4. is confined to suits in inferior courts, where the proceedings are similar to those in the superior courts; and therefore does not extend to the case of a foreign attachment d. And a certiorari, we have seen c, will not lie, to remove the record of a judgment obtained against a defendant in the county palatine of Durham, for the ferior courts.

The writ of certiorari should be directed to the judge or judges of the Direction, and inferior court, from which the cause is intended to be removed; and when it is for the removal of a cause, should command them to certify the record, with all things touching the same i: therefore, where a certiorari in such case was to certify the tenor of a record, it was superseded as erroneous; for being to remove a record out of an inferior court, in order to be proceeded on in a superior one, it ought to have been to certify the very record; for otherwise no proceeding could be had upon it k. When the Teste and return certiorari issues out of Chancery, it is an original writ, and may be tested at any time in term or vacation 1; and should be made returnable on a general return-day: But when it issues out of the King's Bench or Common Pleas, it is a judicial writ, and should be tested in term-time; and, in the King's Bench, it is usually made returnable on a day certain in court m. If the writ be mis-directed n, or otherwise bad in point of law, the court will order it to be quashed, if before them; or, if not returned, will grant a supersedeas. But the court cannot quash a writ that is not before them o: And though the parties to whom the certiorari is directed, and in whose keeping the record is, may object to make a return of it, on account of an informality in the direction, yet they having in fact returned it into the court above, no such objection can be taken by third persons p.

The writ of certiorari, we have seen q, lies for the removal of all causes Habeas corpus, from inferior courts, whether the defendant has been proceeded against therein by capias, or other process: But the writ of habeas corpus, which will next be considered, only lies where the defendant has been arrested upon, or served with a copy of a capias, and either remains in custody, or

This latter writ, though its direct object be to bring up the body of the defendant, serves consequentially to remove cause against him from inferior courts: And the ground of removal upon this writ is, that when a defendant, against whom there is a cause depending in an inferior court, is removed by habeas corpus into the court above, the inferior court have lost their jurisdiction over him; and not having jurisdiction over his person, they cannot proceed in the cause, and the bail, if any, in the inferior court are discharged b. The writ of habeas corpus, of which something has been already said 4, as it is used to remove prisoners into the custody of the marshal of the King's Bench or warden of the Fleet prison, is a judicial writ, issuing out of the court of King's Bench or Common Pleas: and, like the certiorari, should be directed to the judge or judges of the inferior court, in which the record is ; commanding them to have the body of the defendant, together with the day and cause of his being taken and detained, to do and receive f, &c. There is an old rule of court s, by which the habeas corpus, when directed to the inferior courts of London, Westminster, Southwark, and other courts within five miles of London, might have been returnable immediate; but otherwise it must have been returnable on a day certain in court s. This rule however having fallen into disuse, the writ, we have seen h, is now always made returnable immediate.

The writ of certiorari or habeas corpus, when delivered to the judge or judges of the court below, instantly suspends their power; so that if they afterwards proceed, it is a contempt, for which they are liable to an attachment; and the subsequent proceedings are void, and coran non judicci. On receipt of the writ therefore, it should be forthwith allowed and returned: and the officer cannot refuse to obey it, under pretence of not being paid his fees in the court below, or the charges of bringing up the defendant : for the former, he has a proper remedy by action; and for the latter, if not paid, the defendant may be remanded b.

It was formerly usual for the defendant in an inferior court to sue out When formerly a writ of certiorari or habeas corpus, and keep it in his pocket, without producing it, till issue was joined, the jury sworn, and the plaintiff had given his evidence; by which means the plaintiff was not only put to considerable expense, but the defendant, knowing before-hand what proofs he could produce, had an opportunity of opposing them by false witnesses c. To remedy this mischief, it was enacted by the statute 43 Eliz. Must be dec. 5. that "no writ of habeas corpus, or other writ, to remove any cause jury sworn. " depending in an inferior court having jurisdiction thereof, shall be re-" ceived or allowed by the judges or officers of such court, but they may " proceed therein as if no such writ were sued forth or delivered, except " the said writ be delivered to such judges or officers, before the jury have " appeared, and one of them is sworn." And still further to avoid vexatious delays, by the removal of causes out of inferior courts, it was enacted by the statute 21 Jac. I. c. 23. § 2. that "no writ of habeas corpus, cer-" liorari, or other writ, except writs of error or attaint, to stay or remove " any cause depending in an inferior court of record, having jurisdiction " thereof, where the same arises within its jurisdiction, shall be received " or allowed by the judges or officers of such court, but they may proceed " therein, &c. except the said writ be delivered to such judges or officers, " before issue or demurrer joined in the said cause; so as the same be not " joined within six weeks next after the arrest, or appearance of the de-" fendant." This statute is confined to inferior courts of record; and does not extend to the case of an interlocutory judgment: therefore, the practice in that case is to allow the habeas corpus or certiorari, in like manner as upon the 43 Eliz., previded it be delivered at any time before the jury are sworn d; which is also the practice, where issue is joined within six weeks next after the defendant's arrest or appearance.

By the statute 21 Jac. 1. c. 23 c. it is further provided, that "if in any Not allowed, in "cause, not concerning freehold or inheritance, or title of land, lease or " rent, commenced or depending in any such inferior court of record, it " shall appear or be laid in the declaration, that the debt damages or things " demanded do not amount to or exceed the sum of five pounds, then such " cause shall not be stayed or removed by any writ or writs whatsoever, " other than writs of error or attaint: And if any writ or writs shall be " granted or sued forth contrary to the intent and meaning of this act, " the judges of the inferior court may disallow and refuse the same, and " proceed as if no such writ had been granted or sued forth: provided

OF THE REMOVAL OF CAUSES,

Although there be other actions, for demands exceeding that sum.

Nor in causes under twenty pounds, unless recognizance entered into, in court below.

Similar recognizance required, on removal into

Soon after the making of this statute, a method was contrived of removing causes for sums not exceeding five pounds, by setting up an action for a fictitious demand to a larger amount; and then, upon suing out a habeas corpus, all the causes were removed together d. To defeat this contrivance, it was enacted by a subsequent statute e, that "the judges of " such inferior courts as are described in the statute of James, may pro-" ceed in such causes as are therein specified, which appear or are laid " not to exceed the sum of five pounds, although there may be other ac-" tions against the defendant, wherein the plaintiff's demands may exceed " the sum of five pounds." And lastly, by the statute 19 Geo. III. c. 70. § 6. which takes away the arrest under ten pounds in inferior courts, it is provided, that "no cause, where the cause of action shall not amount to " the sum of ten pounds or upwards," (since extended to twenty pounds, by the statute 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 71. § 6.) "shall be removed or removeable " into any superior court, by writ of habeas corpus or otherwise, unless " the defendant shall enter into a recognizance to the plaintiff, in the in-" ferior court, with two sufficient sureties, in double the sam due, for the " payment of the debt and costs, in case judgment shall pass against This statute is not confined to actions of debt, or for the recovery of liquidated damages; but extends to all actions brought for the recovery of debts or damages, under an arrestable sum: and therefore, where an action was brought in an inferior court for defamation, and the defendant, after entering a common appearance, and suffering judgment by default, removed the proceedings by certiorari into the King's Bench, without entering into any recognizance; the court held, that the case was within the statute, and awarded a procedendo, for the defendant's default in not entering into the recognizance thereby required, the damages being laid under an arrestable sum s. But where an action was brought in an inferior court for 8l. 17s. 3d. and the damages were laid in the declaration at 201. and the defendant, after interlocutory judgment signed against him, removed the cause into the King's Bench by habeas corpus cum causa, without entering into the recognizance required by the statute 19 Geo. Render, when rule expires in vacation. bail on a habeas corpus, on account of the delay, except in case of unavoidable accident, such as the unexpected illness of the bail. Where the rule for better bail was served on the 14th of January, and the bail did not justify until the 19th, the court held, that the plaintiff's procedendo was regular. But where the rule expired in vacation, a render on the first day of the ensuing term, sedente curid, was deemed good; though notice was not given till afterwards on the same day, and after a writ of procedendo had issued to an inferior court, where the cause originated d.

How far bail are liable.

The bail upon a habeas corpus are liable to all the actions mentioned in the return of it, wherein the plaintiff or plaintiffs shall declare within two terms e. But this must be understood of the bail upon amhabeas corpus before declaration; for it is said, that if the plaintiff have declared before the habeas corpus delivered, in one action which requires special bail, and in another wherein common bail is sufficient, the bail shall be special only to that action which requires special bail, and common to the other f. On a removal after declaration, special bail are liable, though the plaintiff declare in a different kind of action in the court above, so as it be for the same cause s. And where one of the Yeomen of the King's guard had been arrested, without leave from the Lord Chamberlain, by process issuing out of the Palace court; and that court had refused to discharge him out of custody, on filing common bail; and, bail above having been put in and perfected in that court, the defendant, after interlocutory judgment signed, removed the cause into the King's Bench by habeas corpus, and put in and perfected bail; the court, under these circumstances, refused to order an exoneretur to be entered on the bail-piece h.

When not discharged, by defendant's privilege.

Procedendo, what, and when it lies, and when not If bail be not put in and perfected in due time, a procedendo may be awarded i: which is a judicial writ, directed to the judges of the inferior court, commanding them to proceed in the cause k, notwithstanding the writ before delivered to them. So, where a habeas corpus was brought after interlocutory and before final judgment in an inferior court, and the defendant died before the return of it, a procedendo was awarded: because, by the 8 & 9 W. So, where an action was brought in the sheriff's court of London, against two partners, and one of them brought a habeas corpus, and put in bail for himself only, a procedendo was granted: for otherwise the plaintiff would have been disabled from going on in either court b. And a procedendo was awarded in an action brought in the Palace court, on a bail bond given to the officer, on process issuing out of that court: for, by the statute 4 Anne, c. 16. § 20. the action on the bail bond ought to be brought in the same court where the original action was commenced, in order that the court may give such relief, in a summary way, to the plaintiff and defendant in the original action, and to the bail upon the bond, as is agreeable to justice c. But the plaintiff in an inferior court, from which a cause is removed by habeas corpus, is not entitled to a procedendo, after render of the defendant, and notice of such render; although the render be made after the day on which the rule for better bail expires d. And a procedendo cannot issue after service of the rule for the allowance of bail, on the ground that the plaintiff was called by a wrong name in the notice of bail; but the rule for the allowance should be first set aside e.

So, where a cause was removed from the Mayor's court of London by habeas corpus, to which a return was made, stating a custom under which the defendant was sued and arrested, error being suggested in the proceedings below, the court above would not stay the procedendo merely on that ground; but said, they would leave the defendant to his writ of error h. On habeas corpus, plainuiff must declare de novo.

A certiorari, as we have already seen d, removes the record in a civil cause from the inferior court; but though the record be brought up on this writ, into the court above, yet they do not take up the cause where the record leaves off, but begin the whole proceedings de novo; for there is no continuance from the inferior to the superior court, and therefore they cannot proceed on that record which was below: and though a certiorari removes the record in the condition in which it was at the time of the service of the writ, and thereby transfers the same into the superior court, yet it cannot make the roll of the inferior court a record of the superior one, but only brings up the record from the inferior to the superior court e; and nothing is recorded here but the original f: Therefore, where the proceedings in an inferior court of record were removed by certiorari into the Common Pleas, and the question was, whether the plaintiff should declare de novo; it appearing by the return, that the parties were at issue in the court below, it was holden that the plaintiff must declare de novo g. On the removal of a cause from an inferior court, by writ of certiorari, the plaintiff need not file his declaration, until the end of the term after that in which the writ is returnable h. And, on a certiorari or habeas corpus, the plaintiff may declare in this court, as he pleases; and is not confined to the same species of action as he declared in below i. When a defendant, however, removes a cause from an inferior court by certiorari, the plaintiff is not bound to follow the suit; and the defendant cannot sign judgment of non-pros, for want of a declaration k.

On a habeus corpus, the parties have no day in court: and, as the record is not removed upon this writ from the inferior court, but only an account or history of their proceedings, the plaintiff must begin de novo, and declare against the defendant as in custody of the marshal a. But it is otherwise where conusance is demanded and allowed; for there the superior court gives a day to the parties in the inferior one, and transfers the roll itself into that court. And the reason of the difference is, that the inferior court which has conusance, being taken out of a superior one, the judges continue the cause into the inferior court, as into a court crected by the king, and taken out of the ordinary jurisdiction; and therefore, the proceedings go on as in the court in which they were commenced: but where the cause is taken from the inferior to the superior court, they do not proceed as in the same court; for it would be below the higher jurisdiction not to proceed on it as res integra, or to suffer any continuance to be made from a subordinate power to theirs b.

The declaration upon a habeas corpus must be delivered, if at all, before the end of the second term after putting in bail, including the term in which it was put in c: If the plaintiff do not declare within that time, the defendant's attorney is not bound to accept a declaration; though the plaintiff cannot be non-prossed for want of it d. And if a cause be removed by the defendant, by habeas corpus, out of an inferior court, the plaintiff is not bound to declare in the court above, if he has taken no other step than compelling the defendant to put in and justify bail there e. On the removal of a cause by habeas corpus, out of the courts of Canterbury, Southampton, Hull, Litchfield, or Poole, which are counties where the bury, &c. judges of nisi prius seldom come, if the action be transitory, the venue must be laid in the county of Kent, Southampton, York, Stafford, or Dorset, where the town and county lies f. And, on a habeas corpus return- Imparlance, able in Michaelmas or Easter term, if the declaration be delivered before lowed. the third return, the defendant is not entitled to an imparlance s. So, when a defendant removes the cause by habcas corpus from an inferior court, and the plaintiff does not declare until the next term, an imparlance is not allowed; for such removals being in general considered as dilatory, it would only be adding to the delay if an imparlance were granted h.

If a plaint be levied in an inferior court, within six years after the cause Replication to of action arose, and then it be removed into the King's Bench by habeas corpus, and the plaintiff declare here dc novo, and the defendant plead the statute of limitations, the plaintiff, we have seen i, may reply, and shew the plaint in the inferior court, and that will be sufficient to avoid

Means of removing causes from inferior courts, not of record.

When the inferior court from which the cause is to be removed is not of record, the means of removing it, we may remember, are by pone, recordari facias loquelam, or accedas ad curiam. These writs are chiefly calculated for the removal of actions of replevin from the county court, or court of some lord authorized to grant replevins; for it is beneath the dignity of a superior court to proceed in other actions, if the debt or damages appear to be under forty shillings; and therefore, in such case, if the cause were removed, the court would remand it by procedendo. A plaint in replevin cannot, we have seen b, be removed from a county court in Wales, into the King's Bench, by certiorari. And a writ of accedus ad curiam, issued to a court of requests, which proceeds equitably, may be set aside on motion c.

Form of.

If a replevin be sued by writ out of Chancery, then if the plaintiff or defendant would remove the cause out of the county court, into the King's Bench d or Common Pleas, he ought to sue out a writ of pone e; which is an original writ, issuing out of Chancery, directed to the sheriff of the county where the replevin is brought; and when returnable in the King's Bench, it commands the sheriff to put before the king, on a general return day, wheresoever, &c. the plea which is in his county, by the king's writ, between the parties, of the cattle or goods taken and unjustly detained, &c. The writ of pone, if taken out by the plaintiff in replevin, hath a clause in it, commanding the sheriff to summon the defendant to appear in the court above at the return day, that he be then there, to answer the plaintiff thereupon. If the replevin be removed by the defendant, then the pone commands the sheriff, that he warn the plaintiff to be there, to prosecute his plaint thereupon against the defendant, if he shall think proper f: and by this means, both parties have a day in the court above 8.

When the plaint is in the county court, and the replevin sued there without writ, then if the plaintiff or defendant would remove it, he ought to sue out a writ of recordari facias loquelam; which is an original writ, issuing out of Chancery h, on a proper pracipe, directed to the sheriff in whose court the plaint is entered k, commanding him that in his full

And if a replevin be sued by plaint in the court of any lord, other than Accedas ad in the county court before the sheriff, then the recordari has a clause therein, commanding the sheriff, that taking with him four discreet and lawful knights of his county, he go in his proper person to the court of the lord; and in that full court, cause to be recorded the plaint, &c. b: and from this clause in the writ, it is called an accedas ad curiam c. On this writ the sheriff must go in person to the lord's court, and take with him four men of his county; but it is not necessary that they should be knights d. When a sheriff, or his deputy, neglects to enter a plaint in replevin, in the county court, for damage feasant, the court of King's Bench will not compel him to do so, on motion; but the only remedy, if any, is by writ of mandamus e.

The plaintiff may remove the plea out of the county court, either by pone, Causes of reor recordari, without cause shewn; for it is in his own delay: but the defendant cannot remove it without cause shewn; for since it is in delay of the plaintiff, a just cause ought to appear on record for such removal f. The cause of removal usually assigned is, that the sheriff or his clerk is related to one of the parties g; and the sheriff cannot return that the cause is not true. But if either the plaintiff or defendant remove a suit out of the lord's court, they ought to shew cause; because they should not oust the lord of the profits of his jurisdiction, without apparent reason h: And it seems that such causes were anciently examined before the writ was granted, as in Chancery they used to examine the cause of action, before the granting of original writs; but this in both cases is now neglected, and such writs are issued as a matter of course i.

Effect of filing

When plaint is well removed, and when not.

If the pone or recordari, &c. bear date before the plaint entered in the county, yet the cause is well removed; because both are the king's courts f. But if the cause be removed out of the court of any other lord, by a writ which bears date before the entry of the plaint, it is not good f. The reason of the difference is, because the sheriff, by whom the county is held or farmed, being the king's immediate deputy, the king may remove the replevin out of the sheriff's court into his own, without shewing cause; and therefore it is not material whether the recordari be tested before the plaint or not: and although the defendant cannot remove the plaint without cause, yet this is not in order to prevent the sheriff from being ousted of his jurisdiction, but that the plaintiff may not be delayed, without good cause shewn: But when the record is removed out of the lord's court, which has a jurisdiction by grant or prescription, there must be cause shewn for such removal; and the cause will be absurd, if the accedas ad curiam bear date before the plaint, for that cannot be a cause to oust the lord of his jurisdiction, which was not in being at the time of the writ issued 5. So, the plaint is well removed by certiorari, where it ought to have been by pone or recordari h: So, if one plaint be removed, where another ought to have been; or where there is a variance between the plaint and the writ h. If the plaintiff has already declared in the county court, yet nothing shall be removed but the plaint i: And though the plea be discontinued in the county, yet the plaintiff or defendant many remove the plaint into the King's Bench or Common Pleas, by recordari, &c. and he shall declare, and the court shall hold plea, upon the same plaint 1.

Proceedings on pone, or recordari, &c. when brought by plaintiff.

If the writ of pone or recordari, &c. be brought by the plaintiff, and the defendant do not appear, on or before the appearance day of the return, the plaintiff, having previously filed the writ and return with the filacer k, should give a rule with that officer, for the defendant to appear !,

If the cause be removed by the defendant by pone, and the plaintiff appear, but the defendant make default, a distringus is the first process for compelling his appearance h; and on nulla bona returned, a capias may be issued s. After a writ of recordari facias loquelam, and several writs of pone issued thereon to compel the defendant's appearance, if the plaintiff file a declaration, entitled of an intermediate term between that in which the 'recordari facias loquelam is returnable and the term in which the declaration is filed, with notice to plead in the following term, both the declaration and notice to plead are irregular o.

Of the DECLARATION.

HAVING stated, in the preceding chapters, the various means of bringing the defendant into court, when at large, in actions commenced by original writ, or by bill of Middlesex or latitat, in the King's Bench, or capias quare clausum fregit, &c. in the Common Pleas, or by venire facias, subpana, or quo minus, in the Exchequer, and also whatever is peculiar to the proceedings in actions by or against attornies and officers, who are supposed to be already in court, and prisoners in actual custody of the sheriff, &c. or "of the marshal of the King's Bench or warden of the Flect prison, with the removal of causes from inferior courts, I shall, in the present chapter, treat of the declaration in ordinary cases; where the defendant, having been arrested upon or served with process, either appears and puts in and perfects special bail, when necessary, or files common bail, or an appearance is entered or common bail filed for him by the plaintiff, according to the statutes a.

The declaration is a specification, in legal form, of the circumstances Declaration, which constitute the cause of action; and, in actions by original, is an exposition of the writ, with the addition of time, place, and other circumstances b: and it is either in chief, or by the bye. A declaration in chief In chief, or by is at the suit of the same plaintiff, for the principal cause of action, or that for which the writ was sued out: A declaration by the bye is at the suit of a different plaintiff, or of the same plaintiff for a different cause of action.

So, in an inferior court, a custom to declare against a defendant, before an appearance entered by him, or by some person for him, is bad in law d. But when the defendant De bene esse. has been arrested upon, or served with a copy of process against his person, the plaintiff may declare de bene esse, or conditionally, on the return of the writ, before the defendant has appeared, or put in and perfected special bail, &c.: and the declaration, or copy of the bill, is usually de- Against attor-

livered before appearance, in actions against attornies and officers of the court of King's Bench, and prisoners in actual custody of the sheriff, marshal, or warden. When there are several defendants, against whom it is intended to proceed jointly, the plaintiff cannot declare until they are all in court. And, in cases of contract, where bailable process is taken out against several defendants, for a joint cause of action, the plaintiff cannot declare against them severally b; but it is otherwise in the Common Pleas, where the process is not bailable; for in that case, we have seen d, the plaintiff is allowed to join four defendants, for separate causes of action, in one writ, and to declare against them severally; and if they do not appear, he may bring them into court, by entering an appearance for them, according to the statute. So, in actions of tort, a party suing out bailable process against several defendants jointly, may it seems declare separately against one of them.

Time for declaring, in K. B. by

In actions by hill in the King's Bench, if the defendant appeared personally at the return of the writ, the plaintiff was anciently obliged to declare against him within three days f; or, if he appeared by attorney, the plaintiff must have declared before the end of the term g. Afterwards, the time for declaring was extended; and a rule was made by Coke, Ch. J. and the court, in the reign of James the first, that the plaintiff ought to declare the same term, or the term after bail was filed h; and in a subsequent case, the course of the court was certified by the secondary and clerks to be, that no declaration should be taken upon any bail, but within three terms after the bail filed; and it was said that Lord Ch. J. Popham and the court, in his time, made an express order accordingly; for before then the usage was often otherwise: and the court in that case held it to be a very good course, and that it should not be altered i. In the case of prisoners, the plaintiff, agreeably to this practice, was allowed three lerms after the arrest, to remove the defendant, in order to charge him with a declaration k. At length, by the statute 13 Car. II. stat. 2. c. 2. § 3. the time for declaring upon a bill of Middlesex or latitat, in the King's Bench, was limited to the end of the next term after the defendant's appearance; and a rule was made by Hale, Ch. J. that the court would discharge prisoners on common bail, in two terms!: and in the time of Holt, Ch. J. the course of the court was, that if a declaration were not delivered on or before the last day of the second term, sedente curia, the defendant might sign a non pros; and if he did not immediately sign it, though he might afterwards receive a declaration, yet he was not compellable to do so, but he might well refuse it *: and accordingly, as the practice of the court then stood, if the declaration was tendered at any time after the end of the second term, and before the non pros was signed, the defendant was not bound to accept it, but might sign his non pros at any time after the end of the second term b. But Mr. Justice Buller having expressed an opinion, that by the general rules of law, a plaintiff must declare against a defendant within twelve months after the return of the writ, though, by the rules of the court, if he do not deliver his declaration within two terms, the defendant may sign a judgment of non prosc; it is now settled, agreeably to that opinion, that unless he take advantage of the plaintiff's neglect, by signing a judgment of non pros, the plaintiff may deliver his declaration, at any time within a year next after the return of the writ d.

In the Common Pleas, or in actions by original in the King's Bench, In C. P. or by when the proceedings were ore tenus at the bar of the court, the plaintiff was anciently demandable on the defendant's appearance; and if he did not appear, or would not count against him, he might have been immediately nonsuited. But the parties by consent, might have obtained a day before declaration, which was called a dies datus prece partium f; for the consent of the defendant exempted the plaintiff from the necessity of declaring immediately. In that case, if the defendant had made default at the day given, since there was no declaration, the plaintiff could not have had judgment, but was obliged to bring him in again by process g; for none could have judgment, but upon complaint exhibited against the defendant whilst in court. But after declaration, if the defendant had made default, judgment was given against him; because, having deserted the court, he ceased to oppose the plaintiff's demand, and so submitted that the court should give judgmenth.

In process of time, when the proceedings were no longer ore lenus, but Changes therein. the defendant was at liberty to appear by attorney, the defendant could not have nonsuited the plaintiff, in the Common Pleas, without giving a rule to declare, and calling for a declaration. If the writ were returnable in five weeks of Easter, or on the last return of any term, the defendant, having given a rule, and called for a declaration, might have entered a nonsuit, if it were not delivered four days or more before the essoin-day of the ensuing term i: and if the writ were returnable on any other return, the defendant, having in like manner given a rule, and called for a declaration, might it seems have entered a nonsuit, if it were not delivered some time during the same term k. But if the defendant had appeared the first term, and given no rule to declare, the defendant's attorney might have been compelled to accept a declaration the second term, with an imparlance; and the declaration might have been entered as of that term, with an imparlance over to the next, or in the first term with an incipitur, as the case required. In such case however, if the plaintiff had not declared the second term, a nonsuit might have been entered at the end of that term, upon a continuance over by dies datus, but not the third term or after.

How settled.

At length it was settled, agreeably to the statute 13 Car. II. stat. 2. c. 2. § 3. that "upon all process returnable the first or any other return in any term, the plaintiff shall have liberty, to the end of the next ensuing term, to deliver his declaration to the defendant's attorney, or leave the same in the office: and the defendant's attorney having entered his appearance with the proper officer, as of that term in which the process was returnable, and, in the Common Pleas, given a rule to declare in the proper office, at the end of the ensuing term, or in four days after the end thereof, and called on the plaintiff's attorney or clerk in court, if he can be found; the defendant may, at any time in the vacation of such ensuing term, after the rule for declaring is out, sign his non pros for want of a declaration, and not afterwards: and the plaintiff shall not, without leave of the court, have any longer time to declare, other than the time to be limited by the defendant's rule b." But if the plaintiff be not called upon by rule to declare, he hath all the vacation of the second term to declare in c. If the plaintiff do not declare in that time, or obtain a rule for time to declare, his cause is out of court; and if he afterwards declare, the court will set aside the declaration for irregularity d. So, where a writ was returnable the last return of Trinity term, and an appearance being entered, the plaintiff proceeded no further, nor obtained a rule for time to declare, upon which the defendant in Hilary term, being the third term after the return of the writ, gave the plaintiff a rule to declare, and for want of a declaration signed judgment of non pros; the court of Common Pleas held it to be irregular, because the plaintiff by his own default was out of court at the end of the second term, and the defendant therefore could not rule him to declare but at the end of the term, or within four days after e. And where one of two defendants having been holden to bail in Trinity term, the plaintiff proceeded to outlawry against the other, and delivered a declaration against the former on the first day of Easter term following, not having obtained a rule for time to declare, it was holden that the cause was out of court, and the bail entitled to an exoneretur f.

But if a defendant be outlawed, and he reverse the outlawry and give bail, as he ought, the plaintiff may declare against him within two terms after the outlawry is reversed; and if he do not declare within that time, the declaration may be refused, but the plaintiff shall not be non-prossed.b: And it seems, that after the reversal of an outlawry, the plaintiff has his After reversal of election, either to declare upon the first original, or to sue out a new one. In declaring against A. upon a joint contract by A. and B., it is not enough to allege that B. was in due manner outlawed, without adding that he was outlawed in that suit d: But an allegation that a co-defendant was outlawed by due course of law, at the suit of the plaintiff, in this plea and suit, is sufficient, without a prout patet per recordum e.

In the Common Pleas, the course of that court is, that although the In Common original be laid in London, for expediting the outlawry, yet when the defendant comes in, the plaintiff may declare against him in any other county, be the action local or transitory f: And where a writ of capias quare clausum fregit was issued against two defendants, with an ac etiam in debt, upon which one of them was arrested and put in bail, and the plaintiff proceeded to outlawry against the other defendant, on an original writ issued against both, and afterwards declared against the former defendant only, alledging that he was outlawed in that suit; the court, upon reference to its officers, held that these proceedings were regular, and would not set aside the declaration g: observing, that it was founded on the original, on which one of the defendants was outlawed; and with respect to the writ with the ac etiam, on which the other defendant was arrested and put in bail, that writ was issued only for the purpose of bringing him into court, and having so done, it had answered its purpose; and that when a defendant is in court, the plaintiff may declare against him for any cause of action he may think proper h. In a subsequent case, they would not entertain a motion made on behalf of a defendant, who had been arrested and was in court by his bail, which went to impeach an outlawry against another defendant, who was not before the court i. fendant in this court shall have his costs, to be taxed by the prothonotaries, if the plaintiff do not proceed within Iwo terms next after notice of the reversal of the outlawry k.

This rule cannot in general be had, where the defendant is a prisoner b. But where, on a writ against three, one was arrested and lay in gaol, and the other two absconded, the court refused to discharge the prisoner; saying, that he must appear for all, or lie in gaol till the other two were outlawed. In such case however, the plaintiff, in the Common Pleas, must move the court, or apply to a judge, for time to declare against the prisoner, until the butlawry or appearance of the other defendants d; and shew that he is using all due diligence in proceeding against them. If the plaintiff be still unprepared, he may obtain rules for further time to declare, from the beginning to the end of the term, and from the end of one term to the beginning of another, alternately, as often Peremptory rule as may be mercessary. But after several rules have been obtained, the courts will make a peremptory one, for the plaintiff to declare before the end of the term in which the motion is made e. The rule for this purpose, in the King's Bench, is absolute in the first instance, and drawn up on a motion paper signed by counsel; but, in the Common Pleas, it is a rule to shew cause: And, in the latter court, when the plaintiff does not declare, after having obtained time for that purpose, the defendant may sign judgment of non pros, without giving a rule to declare f.

In the King's Bench, when the defendant has appeared and filed bail upon a bill of Middlesex, or latitat, &c. or the plaintiff has filed it for him according to the statute, the plaintiff may declare by the bye, in as many different actions as he thinks fit, at any time before the end of the next term after the return of the process s: And after a plea in abatement, if the plaintiff enter on the roll quod billa cassetur, et defendens cat sine die, he may at any time during the same term in which the process is returnable, deliver a declaration by the bye against the defendant h. It is also a settled point, that when bail is filed by the defendant, upon a bill of Middlesex, or latitat, &c. any other person besides the plaintiff may declare against him by the bye, at any time during the term wherein the process is returnable, sedente curid : But where bail is filed by the plaintiff according to the statute, this is not such a general bringing of the defendant into court, as will warrant any person, except the plaintiff, in delivering a declaration by the bye against him k. Where the plaintiff, having declared Indorsement on. in his own right, afterwards declared as executor, without indorsing the declaration "by the bye," when delivered, but the defendant's attorney was told it was "by the bye," the court of King's Bench, on the opinion of the master, held it to be regular b.

In actions by original in the King's Bench, the practice of declaring by By original, in the bye is similar to that in the Common Pleas; where the same plaintiff is allowed to declare against the defendant by the bye, in as many different actions as he thinks fit, at any time before the end of the next term after the return of the process c; and he may so declare in the same term, though the debt and costs on the first declaration are paid d: but he cannot declare by the bye, after the end of that term's; nor can any other person declare by the bye, except the plaintiff f. If the plaintiff sue out a writ at the suit of himself and wife, he may deliver a declaration by the bye at his own suit g: but if an action be brought by the husband only, and a declaration delivered in that action, he cannot declare by the bye at the suit of himself and wife, there being no process to warrant it h. If the writ be special, the plaintiff cannot declare by the bye, till he has declared in the original action 1; but if it be with an ac etiam only, he may deliver as many declarations as he thinks fit thereon against the defendant, during the same term; though he will lose his bail, by declaring for a different cause of action from what is expressed in the ac etiam k. So, on a capias with an ac etiam, at the suit of an executor, the plaintiff cannot deliver a declaration by the bye at the suit of himself personally; but if the writ be a general quare clausum fregit, the plaintiff may declare by the bye as executor, or qui tam, or as assignee of the sheriff!

In Heath's Maxims, it is said that a count or declaration, being terms equivalent, ought principally to contain three things: first, the names of the plaintiff and defendant, who in actions real are called demandant and tenant, and the nature of the action; and this by some is termed the demonstration, or demonstrative part of the count: secondly, the time, the place, and the act; in which ought to be comprehended how and in what manner the action did accrue, or first arise between the parties; when, what day, what year, and what place, and to whom the action shall be given; which is called the declarative part of the count: and lastly, the perclose or conclusion, which is unde deterioratus est, &c.: in which the plaintiff ought should regularly be entitled of the day on which the writ is returnable; for the bill, of which it is a copy, cannot be filed till the bail is put in, which cannot be till the return of the writ a: And where there are several defendants, who put in bail of different terms, the declaration should be entitled of the term when the last bail was put in b. In practice it is usual, in both courts, when the cause of action will admit of it, to entitle the declaration generally, of the term in which the writ is returnable; and though filed or delivered, it cannot regularly be entitled, of a subsequent term c: And, in the Common Pleas, after the removal of a replevin cause by writ of recordari facias loquelam, the declaration must be entitled of the term in which the writ is returnable, or that of the appearance d. But the declaration should always be entitled after the time when the cause of action is stated to have accrued: therefore, when the cause of action is stated to have accrued after the first day of the term in which the writ is returnable, the declaration should be entitled of a subsequent day in that term, and not of the term generally; for a general title refers to the first day of the term, and upon such a title it would appear that the action was commenced before the cause of it accrued. Yet, where the cause of action was stated to have accrued on the first day of term, the court of King's Bench on demurrer held, that the declaration might be entitled of the term generally: for the delivery of the declaration is the act of the party, and in ancient times it could not have been delivered till the sitting of the court; so that the cause of action might well have accrued before the actual delivery of the declaration e. So, where a cause of action arose on the 29th of January, being the first day of the fourth year of the reign of his present majesty, and the declaration was entitled "Saturday next after 15 days of St. Hilary, in Hilary term, in the third year of King George the 4th," which would be the 1st of February, in the fourth year of his reign, the court on demurrer held, that the declaration was properly entitled, though the plaintiff appeared in terms to have commenced his action, before the cause of it had arisen f. And it is now holden to be no error, to entitle the declaration of a term generally, though the cause of action is stated therein to have accrued after the first day of the term s.

How corrected.

When a declaration is improperly entitled, the plaintiff may have it corrected, on an affidavit of the fact h: And leave has been given to amend to aver and proffer to prove his suit, and shew the damage he hath sustained by the wrong and injury done by the defendant: And the declaration, according to this definition, consisting of a tria, somewhat resembling the logical sugior, minor, and conclusion, some of the ancients, (among whom none was more fond of it than Mr. Fleetwood, the famous reporder of London,) conceived to be a perfect syllogism. the declaration, by entitling it of the day on which it was actually delivered, instead of the term generally, in order to accord with an averment therein, that other defendants named in the writ were then outlawed. So, in an action against the marshal for an escape, where the bill was entitled generally of Michaelmas term, and the escape was alleged to have taken place on the 15th November, the court, after special demurrer, allowed the plaintiff to amend, on payment of costs; although it appeared by affidavit that the prisoner had returned into the custody of the marshal, before any application for liberty to amend was made b. And the title of a declaration may be set right, at the instance of the defendant, if necessary for his defence c: Thus, where the declaration is entitled of the term generally, and the defendant pleads plene administravit d, or a tender made before the exhibiting of the bill, upon which he would give in evidence an administration of assets, or tender made, between the first day of the term to which the bill relates, and the day of suing out the writ; he has a right to call upon the plaintiff to entitle his declaration properly.

The venue in personal actions, or county where the action is laid and Venue. intended to be tried, is local or transitory f. When the action could only Local. have arisen in a particular county, it is local, and the venue must be laid in that county: for if it be laid elsewhere, the defendant may demur to the declaration g; or the plaintiff, on the general issue, will be nonsuited at the trial h. Such are all real and mixed actions, and actions of ejectment, and trespass quare clausum fregit, &c. And an action on the case for a nuisance is held to be local in its nature; and the nuisance must be proved to have been committed in the county where the venue is laid i." But where the action might have arisen in any county, as upon contracts, Transitory. it is transitory, and the plaintiff may in general lay the venue wherever he pleases k; subject however to its being changed by the court, if not laid in the very county where the action arose.

officers, the judgment could not have effect, if the action were not laid in the proper county "."

Out of realm.

With regard to matters that arise out of the realm, there is a substantial distinction of locality too; for there are some cases that arise out of the realm, which ought not to be tried any where but in the country where they arise: as if two persons fight in France, and both happening casually to be here, one should bring an action of assault against the other, it might be a doubt whether such an action could be maintained here; because, though it is not a criminal prosecution, it must be laid to be against the peace of the king; but the breach of the peace is merely local, though the trespass against the person is transitory. So, if an action were brought relative to an estate in a foreign country, where the question was a matter of title only, and not of damages, there might be a solid distinction of locality.

But there is likewise a formal distinction, which arises from the mode of trial: for trials in England being by jury, and the kingdom being divided into counties, and each county considered as a separate district or principality, it is absolutely necessary that there should be some county where the action is brought in particular, that there may be a process to the sheriff of that county, to bring a jury from thence to try it. This matter of form goes to all cases that arise abroad: but the law makes a distinction between transitory and local actions: If the matter, which is the cause of a transitory action, arise within the realm, it may be laid in any county, the place not being material; as if an imprisonment be in Middlesex, it may be laid in Surrey, and though proved to be done in Middlesex, it does not at all prevent the plaintiff from recovering damages. The place in transitory actions is never material, except where by particular acts of parliament, it is made so; as in the case of churchwardens and constables, and other cases which require the action to be brought in the county. The parties, upon sufficient ground, have an opportunity of applying to the court in time to change the venue; but if they go to trial

Out of realm.

So, all actions of a transitory nature, that arise abroad, may be laid as happening in an English county b. But there are occasions which make it absolutely necessary to state in the declaration, that the cause of action really happened abroad; as in the case of specialties, where the date must be set forth. If the declaration state a specialty to have been made at Westminster in Middlesex, and upon producing the deed, it bears date at Bengal, the action is gone; because it is such a variance between the deed and the declaration, as makes it appear to be a different instrument.

without it, that is no objection.

- b In a replication to a plea of ne unques accounte, &c. in a writ of dower, alleging a marriage in Scotland, it is not necessary to state, by way of venue, that the marriage was had in any place in England. 2 H. Blac. 145. Nor is it necessary to lay a venue in
- a plea in abatement, that another person ought to have been sued jointly with the defendant; and if it be pleaded that such other person is alive, to wit, in Spain, it will be considered as pleaded without any venue. 7 Durnf. & East, 243. and see 1 Wms. Saund. 5 Ed. 8. c. (1.) Steph. Pl. 306, &c.

But the law has in that case invented a fiction; and has said, the party shall first set out the description truly, and then give a venue only for form, and for the sake of trial, by a videlicet, in the county of Middlesex, or any other county." In declaring on foreign bills, though it is usual to state that they were drawn at the place where they bear date, adding the venue under a videlicet a, yet this does not seem to be necessary b.

In an action upon a lease for rent, &c. when the action is founded upon In action on the privity of contract, it is transitory, and the venue may be laid in any &c. county, at the option of the plaintiff; but when the action is founded upon the privity of estate, it is local, and the venue must be laid in the county where the estate lies c. Thus, in an action of debt or covenant, by the lessor against the lessee, the action being founded on the privity of contract, is transitory d. So, if an action of debt be brought by the lessor against the executor of the lessee, in the detinet only, it is transitory e. And debt for use and occupation is not a local action f. But if the action be brought, as it may, against the executor of the lessee, as assignee, upon the privity of estate, in the debet and definet, it is local s. In covenant by the grantee of the reversion against the lessee, the action being founded on the privity of contract, which is transferred from the lessor to the grantee, by the operation of the statute 32 Hen. VIII. c. 34. the action is transitory h. But in debt by the assignee or devisee k of the lessor, against the lessee, which is founded on the privity of estate, the action is local. So, if an action of debt or covenant be brought by the lessor 1, or his personal representatives m, or by the grantee of the reversion n, against the assignee of the lessee, it is local, and the venue must be laid in the county where the land lies: and accordingly, in covenant against the assignee of the lessee of premises, described in the declaration as situate within the liberties of Berwick upon Tweed, the venue cannot be laid in Northumberland o.

There are some actions however, of a transitory nature, wherein the What actions venue, by act of parliament, must be laid in a particular county. Thus, by the statute 31 Eliz. c. 5. § 2. And hence it is a general rule, that the venue in such actions or informations must be laid in the county where the offence was committed. The latter statute also extends as well to offences of omission, as of commission b. There is an exception however, in the statute, that it shall not extend to any such officers of record as had, in respect of their offices, theretofore lawfully used to exhibit informations, or sue upon penal laws; which exception extends to informations by the attorney general, in the court of Exchequer c; and there are some other exceptions in the statute, relating to offences concerning champerty, &c. But the statute 21 Jac. I. c. 4. does not extend to offences created by subsequent statutes d; and neither this statute e, nor the 31 Eliz. c. 54. extends to actions brought by the party grieved. In an action on the statute 1 & 2 Ph. & M. c. 12. for driving a distress out of the hundred, if the hundred in which the cattle were distrained be in one county, and the hundred into which they were driven in another, the venue may be laid in either county s. And a penal action for non-residence must be brought in the county in which the living is situated i. In an action brought to recover penalties on the statute of usury, it appeared that the contract was made in one county, and the money paid in another; and the court held, that the venue ought to have been laid in the county where the usurious interest was received k.

Also, by the 42 Geo. III. c. 85. h, the provisions of the statute 21 Jac. I. c. 12. with regard to the venue, &c. are extended to all persons having, holding or exercising, or being employed in any public employment, or any office, station or capacity, either civil or military, either in or out of this kingdom; and who under and by virtue or in pursuance of any act or acts of parliament, &c. have, by virtue of any such public employment, &c. power or authority to commit persons to safe custody: and "all such persons, having such power or authority as aforesaid, shall have and be entitled to all the privileges, benefits and advantages, given by the provisions of the said act, as fully and effectually to all intents and purposes, as if they had been specially named therein. On the other hand, the venue in a transitory action is in some cases altogether optional in the plaintiff; as where the action arises in Wales, or beyond the sea, or is brought upon a bond, or other specialty, promissory note, or bill of exchange; for scandalum magnatum, or a libel dispersed throughout the kingdom; against a carrier, or lighterman; or for an escape, or false return; and in short, wherever the cause of action is not

Commencement of declaration by bill, in K. B.

In actions by original, the venue, in the King's Bench, should in general be laid in the county where the writ was brought b: and if it be not so laid, the court will set aside the proceedings for irregularity, and the plaintiff, we have seen , will lose his bail. But, in the Common Pleas, though the practice was formerly the same as in the King's Beach d, where an arrest shall be by virtue of a capias ad respondendum in any county, and bail shall be put in thereupon, and the plaintiff shall think proper afterwards to declare in a different county, it shall not be deemed a waiver of the bail; but the recognizance of bail shall be as effectual for the benefit of the plaintiff, and he may proceed thereon against the bail, in the same manner as if the plaintiff had declared against the defendant in the same county in which the bail was put in . And it is a general rule, that the county in the margin will help, but not hurt : Hence, if there be no venue, or it be not laid with certainty s, in the body of the declaration, reference must be had to the margin; but where a proper venue is laid in the body, the county in the margin will not vitiate it h. In an action

In actions by bill against common persons, in the King's Bench, the declaration begins by stating the defendant to be in custody of the marshal 1; or, if he be in custody of the sheriff, or bailiff or steward of a franchise having the return and execution of writs, it should allege in whose custody he is, at the time of the declaration, by virtue of the process of the court, at the suit of the plaintiffs m. If the action be brought by or against particular persons, as assignees, executors, &c. the special character in which they sue, or are sued, should be set forth in the beginning of the declaration: And in actions against attornies, instead of stating that they are in custody of the marshal or sheriff, it should be stated that

K. B. or C. P.

It was formerly usual for the declaration by original to repeat the whole Recital of oriof the original write. But this practice being productive of great and unnecessary prolixity, a rule of court was made, that "declarations in ac-" tions upon the case, and general statutes, other than debt, repeat not the " original writ, but only the nature of the action; as that the defendant " was attached to answer the plaintiff, in a plea of trespass upon the case, " or in a plea of trespass and contempt, against the form of the statute !" And in trespass vi et armis, commenced by original, it has been deemed sufficient, on a general demurrer, to state in the declaration, that the defendant was attached to answer the plaintiff, in a plea of trespass, without setting forth the circumstances s. It even seems, that the omission of the Complaint. words "and thereupon the said plaintiff by ----- his attorney complains," in the beginning of a declaration of trespass on the case, in the Common Pleas, is no cause of special demurrer h. And it is no objection to a declaration, that the parties, having been once called by their names, are afterwards designated by the terms plaintiff and defendant; which is now become the common mode of declaring.

In actions upon contracts, the declaration must in all cases state the Statement of contract upon which the action is founded, and the breach of it: And this alone, without more, is in some cases sufficient; as in an action of debt on bond, by the obligee against the obligor. *Contracts' are either in writing k, Contracts, in or by parol; if in writing, they are either by deed under seal, or by agreement without seal: and they are either express or implied; the former are created by the words, the latter by the obvious meaning and intention of the parties. Thus, a covenant is implied, from the habendum in a lease, for quiet enjoyment; and from the reddendum, for payment of the rent. So, on the indorsement of a note or bill, it is implied, that if the drawer or acceptor do not pay it, the indorser will, on having due notice of its non-payment. And in general it may be remarked, that promises are implied, to pay money on legal liabilities. With regard to their operation, contracts are present or future; under the former, may be classed warranties, that a horse is sound, &c: the latter are to do or omit some act, or to procure it to be done or omitted by another. In assumpsit for use and occupation, it is not necessary to state in what parish the premises are situated : and where a parish is known as well by one name as another, it is sufficient to call it by either b. But where the situation of the premises is alleged in the declaration, a variance in the name of the parish is fatal c.

When the contract is by deed, it is not necessary to set forth the consideration upon which it is founded; as the law in that case implies a consideration, where none is stated d: And a consideration is also implied, upon bills of exchange, and promissory notes: But in all other cases, the consideration, not being implied, must be stated in the declaration. siderations are commonly said to be executed or executory; or in other words, the contract is founded upon something already done, or to be done: But there is a third species of considerations, partaking of the nature of Mutual proboth the others, as in the case of mutual promises e; where the plaintiff's promise is executed, but the thing which he has engaged to perform is executory. When the consideration is executed, the defendant cannot traverse the consideration by itself, because it is incorporated and coupled with the promise, and if it were not then in fact executed, it is nudum pactum: But if it be executory, the plaintiff cannot bring his action till the consideration be performed; and if in truth the promise were made, and the consideration not performed, the defendant must traverse the performance, and not the promise, because they are distinct things f.

It is also commonly supposed, that to make a good consideration, there must be either an immediate benefit to the party promising, or a loss to the person to whom the promise was made. But this rule seems to be too narrow; for it is said, that wherever a man is under a moral obligation, which no court of law or equity can enforce, and promises, the honesty and rectitude of the thing is a consideration; as if a man promise to pay a just debt, the recovery of which is barred by the statute of limitations; or if a man, after he comes of age, promise to pay a meritorious debt contracted during his minority, but not for necessaries; or if a bankrupt in affluent circumstances, after his certificate, promise to pay the whole of his debts; or if a man promise to perform a secret trust, or a trust void for want of writing by the statute of frauds. In these and many other instances, though the promise give a compulsory remedy, when there was none before, either in law or equity; yet as the promise is only to do what an honest man ought to do, the ties of conscience upon an upright mind are said to be a sufficient consideration.

Inducement.

When the promise and consideration explain themselves, without reference to any collateral matter, they are stated in the declaration without any inducement: But when that is not the case, the declaration begins by stating the circumstances under which the contract was made, or to which the consideration refers; as in an action of assumpsit to pay money, in consideration of forbearance, or of staying proceedings, the declaration begins by stating the debt forborne, or the proceedings that were stayed. The inducement is in nature of a preamble, and leads on to the principal matter of the declaration; and as its office is explanatory, it does not require exact certainty b.

Averments, when necessary, and when not.

Of performance of condition precedent.

Of condition subsequent, une. necessary.

When the consideration is executed, and the promise to pay a sum certain, or to do or omit some specific act, the declaration proceeds at once from the contract to the breach, without any intermediate averments; as in the case of indebitatus assumpsit, to pay a precedent debt, &c. But when the consideration is executory, or the performance of the defendant's covenant or agreement is made to depend on the performance of a condition precedent, on the part of the plaintiff, the declaration ought to aver that the consideration has been executed, or the condition performed: for it is a rule, that in all cases where the estate or interest commences on a condition precedent, be the condition or act in the affirmative or negative, and to be performed by the plaintiff or defendant, or any other, the plaintiff ought in his count to aver performance c; as if a man grant an annuity to another, when he is promoted to such a benefice, &c. the plaintiff in annuity ought to aver that he is promoted d, &c. But when any estate or interest passes or vests immediately, and is to be defeated by a condition subsequent, or matter ex post facto, be it in the affirmative or negative, or to be performed by the plaintiff or defendant, or by any other, performance of that matter need not be averrede: as if a grant be of an annuity Covenants or agreements are of three kinds; first, such as are called Covenants or mutual and independent, where either party may recover damages from the other, for the injury he may have received by a breach of the covenants pendent. in his favour, and where it is no excuse for the defendant to allege a breach of the covenants on the part of the plaintiff: Secondly, there are covenants which are conditions and dependent, in which the performance of one depends on the prior performance of another; and therefore, till this prior condition be performed, the other party is not liable to an action on his covenant: Thirdly, there is also a sort of covenants, which are mutual Mutual condiconditions, to be performed at the same time; and in these, if one party was ready and offered to perform his part, and the other neglected or refused to perform his, he who was ready and offered, has fulfilled his engagement, and may maintain an action for the default of the other, though it be not certain that either is obliged to do the first act b.

The dependence or independence of covenants is to be collected from the Dependence, or evident sense and meaning of the parties; and however transposed they covenants. may be in the deed, their precedency must depend on the order of time, in which the intent of the transaction requires their performance c. words by which conditions precedent are commonly created, are for d, in consideration of, ita quod e, proinde f, &c. In general, if the agreement be that one party shall do an act, and that for the doing thereof the other shall pay a sum of money, the doing of the act is a condition precedent to the payment, and the party who is to pay shall not be compelled to part with his money, till the thing be performed g. And however improbable the thing may be, it must be complied with, or the right which was to attach on its being performed does not vest: as if the condition be, that A. shall enfeoff B. and A. do all in his power to perform the condition, and B. will not receive livery of seisin, it was never doubted, but that the right which was to depend on the performance of the condition did not arise h. Mutual promises. shew that such act must be performed. And where there are mutual promises, yet if one thing be the consideration for the other, there a performance is in general necessary b.

Cases of mutual covenants, and conditions precedent.

If a day be appointed for the payment of money, and the day is to happen before the thing can be performed, an action may be brought for the money, before the thing is done; for it appears that the party relied upon his remedy, and intended not to make the performance a condition precedent c: But where a certain day of payment is appointed, and that day is to happen subsequently to the performance of the thing to be done by the contract, in such case the performance is a condition precedent, and must be averred in an action for the money c. So if two men agree, one that the other shall have his horse, and the other that he will pay 101. for him, no action lies for the money, till the horse be delivered. Another distinction to be attended to is, that where mutual covenants go to the whole of the consideration on both sides, they are mutual conditions, the one precedent to the other; but where they go only to a part, and a breach may be paid for in damages, there the defendant has a remedy on his covenant, and shall not plead it as a condition precedent d. And it is said, that where the participle doing, performing, &c. is prefixed to a covenant by another person, it is a mutual covenant, and not a condition precedent.

Excuse for nonperformance.

An averment may be by any words which shew the matter to be as stated; as that the plaintiff avers, or in fact saith, or although, or because, or with this that, &c ! And where there is a condition precedent, it is necessary to state in the declaration, that it has been performed, or a lawful excuse for its non-performance g. But there are some cases in the books, respecting conditions precedent, where the thing agreed to be done having been in effect performed, though not in the exact manner, nor with all the circumstances mentioned, it was deemed a substantial performance h; as where the condition was to enfeoff, a conveyance by lease and release has been deemed sufficient i: So, if the condition be for one to deliver the will of the testator, and he deliver letters testamentary k. And wherever a man, by doing a previous act, would acquire a right to any debt or duty, by a tender to do the previous act, if the other party refuse to permit him to do it, he acquires the right as completely, as if it had been actually done; and if the tender be defective, owing to the conduct of the other party, such incomplete tender will be sufficient: because it is a general principle, that he who prevents a thing from being done, shall not avail himself of the non-performance which he has occasioned. The performance of a condition precedent is also excused by the absence of the plaintiff, in those cases where his presence is necessary for the performance of the condition; by his obstructing or preventing the performance; or by his neglecting to do the first act, if it be incumbent on him to perform it b: It is also excused in some cases, by his not giving notice to the defendant c. debt upon an obligation, conditioned to perform an award, notice of the award need not be alleged, because the defendant may take notice of it, as well as the plaintiff. So if, upon a treaty of marriage, a promise be made to the father of the daughter, by the father of the son, to pay the daughter 100l. after the death of the son, if she survive, and the son die, an action may be brought upon this promise; and notice need not be given to the defendant of the death of the son. So, on a promise to pay so much money at the full age of an infant, notice of his attaining that age need not be given, because it is as notorious to the one as to the other. And, in an action on a promissory note, by the indorsee against the drawer, rotice of the indorsement need not be averred b.

Breach.

The breach, in a declaration upon contract, is either negative, that the defendant has not done something which he contracted to do, or procured it to be done by another, or that he has not done it, or procured it to be done, in a careful and proper manner; or it is affirmative, that he has done something which he contracted not to do, or suffered it to be done by another, or that he has decrived the plaintiff, on a warranty, &c. The breach must be assigned in the words of the contract, or in words tantamount, which comprehend the substance and effect of it. Where a party, however, has disabled himself from making an estate he has stipulated to make at a future day, by making an inconsistent conveyance of that estate, he is considered as guilty of a breach of his stipulation, and is liable to be sued before the day arrives c. And, in assigning the breach of a covenant for quiet enjoyment, it is sufficient to allege, that at the time of the demise to the plaintiff, A. B. had lawful right and title to the premises, and having such right and title, entered and evicted the plaintiff, without shewing what title A. B. had, or that he evicted the plaintiff by legal process d. When the damages sustained by the plaintiff are naturally connected with the breach of contract, it is not usual to state them specially in the declaration; otherwise they should be stated, in order to prevent a surprise upon the defendant c.

Damages.

Statement of cause of action, for wrongs.

Immediate.

In actions for wrongs, the declaration should state the injury complained of; and in actions on the case, it should set forth, by way of inducement, the circumstances under which the injury was committed, and the consequential damages resulting therefrom to the plaintiff. The injury complained of is immediate or consequential. When it is immediate, and included in the act complained of, there it is sufficient to state that act alone in the declaration, as in trespass vi et armis. The charge in such case ought to be direct and positive, and not merely by way of recital: Therefore, a declaration by bill, stating that whereas, or wherefore the defendant did the act complained of, is bad on special demurrer; and was formerly holden to be so, in arrest of judgment *; but now, it may be amended at any time before or after judgment, by a right bill; the time of filing whereof the court will not inquire into b: And by original, the count part being helped by the recital of the writ, this fault is not fatal, even on a special demurrer c.

When the damages in trespass are such as naturally arise from the act Damages, in complained of, or cannot with decency be stated, they may be given in evidence under the alia enormia; but otherwise they must be stated in the declaration d: And many things may be laid and proved in aggravation of damages, for which alone trespass would not lie; as trespass may be brought for entering the plaintiff's house, and beating his wife'e, child, or servant f, and the beating may be given in evidence, to aggravate the damages: but in such case, the plaintiff cannot recover damages for losing the service of his child or servant, because he may have a proper action for that injury s. So, trespass will lie for breaking and entering the plaintiff's house, under a false and unfounded charge and assertion that the plaintiff had stolen property therein, per quod he was injured in his credit, &c.; and the jury may give damages for the trespass, as it is aggravated by such false charge h. So, in trespass quare domum fregit, he may give in evidence that the defendant came into his house, and debauched his daughter i; or that his wife was so terrified by the conduct of the defendant, that she was immediately taken ill, and soon afterwards died k. But, in trespass quare clausum fregit, the plaintiff would not be permitted to give evidence of the defendant's taking away a horse 1, &c.; and in the other cases, the evidence is allowed to be given, not as a substantive ground of action, but merely to shew the violence of the defendant's conduct k.

Consequential injuries, we have seen m, arise from mal-feazance, non- Consequential feazance, or mis-feazance. In actions for mal-feazance, three things are to be attended to in the declaration; first, the motive, if any, which urged the defendant to the commission of the act complained of; secondly, the end which he had in view; and thirdly, the means which he took of accomplishing it. Thus, in an action for defamation, the motive is malice, the end proposed is to injure the plaintiff in his good name, &c. and the means are the words spoken by the defendant for that purpose. In actions Arising from for mal-feazance, the motive is either malice, which generally speaking leads to the commission of injuries to the person, or the gratification of self-interest at the expense of another: and accordingly, the end which the defendant has in view, is either to injure the plaintiff, or to benefit himself: and the means he takes of accomplishing his intention, are either direct and open, or under colour of legal process, or by deceit, which is either where there is a privity between the parties, as upon a sale of goods, &c. or where there is no such privity. In actions for non-feazance, or mis-feazance, the injury frequently proceeds from a mere neglect, without any bad motive imputable to the defendant.

Titles to real property corporeal, when necessary to be shewn, and how stated. The circumstances attending the several injuries before mentioned, and which should be stated by way of inducement, are various, according to the nature and grounds of the action. In general, they disclose some right or title in the plaintiff, or some duty to be performed by the defendant. In actions for wrongs, affecting the absolute rights of persons, the right to personal security, being implied, need not be stated in the declaration; as in actions of assault and buttery, &c. But when the wrongs complained of affect the relative rights of persons, the relation should be stated, in respect of which the plaintiff is injured; as in actions for criminal conversation, &c.: And when an action is brought for defamation, it is usual to state in the declaration, by way of inducement, that the plaintiff is a person of good name, &c. and has not been guilty of the crime imputed to him *.

In actions for wrongs to real or personal property, the plaintiff's right or title must be set forth in the declaration, either generally or specially. When a special title is necessary to maintain the action, it must be stated with certainty b: If a man allege in himself a title to the inheritance of freehold of lands in possession, he ought regularly to say that he was seised c; or, if he allege possession of a term for years, or other chattel real, that he was possessed c: So, if he allege scisin of things manurable, as of lands, tenements, rents, &c. he should say that he was seised in his demesne as of fee d; if of things not manurable, as of an advowson, that he was seised as of fee and right, omitting in his demesne d: And it is a rule, that when title is necessary to be shewn, if the plaintiff derive a particular estate from another, he ought to shew that the other had such an interest as would enable him to make the estate. The reason why the commencement of particular estates must be shewn in pleading is, because they are created by agreement out of the primitive estate; and the court must judge whether the primitive estate and agreement be sufficient to produce the particular estate claimed: And this is a fundamental rule, which ought not to be broken upon fancied inconveniences b. It is also a rule, that if the plaintiff claim under one who has only a particular estate, as for life, he must aver the continuance of that estate c.

In setting forth a title to incorporeal hereditaments, the plaintiff must Title to incorshew that it was by grant, custom, or prescription. A grant ought regularly to be pleaded, with a profert in curid of the deed containing it; but By grant. where the deed is lost or destroyed, by accident or length of time, it may be pleaded without a profert d. Custom is properly a local usage, and not Custom. annexed to any particular person; such as a custom within a manor, that lands shall descend to the youngest son, or that copyholders shall have a right of common, &c. Prescription is altogether a personal usage; and is Prescription. either in a que estate, or in a man and his ancestors: the former is where the right claimed is annexed to, and passes with the land, in which case the plaintiff states that he, and all those whose estate he hath therein, have immemorially had such right; the latter is where the right is not annexed to the land, but lies in grant, in which case the plaintiff must aver that he, and his ancestors, have immemorially enjoyed it e.

But in personal actions, it is seldom necessary to state a title specially in the declaration; for damages are the gist of these actions, and the title only matter of inducement f: And it is a general rule therein, that possession is sufficient evidence of title, against a wrong-doer g; as in trespass quare clausum fregit h, &c. So, in an action on the case for a nuisance to the plaintiff's house, &c. it is sufficient for the plaintiff in his declaration, to state generally that he was lawfully possessed of the house, or other property affected by the injury complained of : and if the declaration be for stopping up lights, it goes on to state, that by reason of his possession he had, and of right ought to have, the lights that have been obstructed k. For disturbance of rights of common, &c.

In an action upon the case for the disturbance of rights of common b, &c. there is said to be this distinction: When the action is brought against a wrong-doer, it is sufficient for the plaintiff to state in his declaration, that he was possessed of a house or land, &c. and by reason of his possession thereof, was entitled to the right, in the exercise of which he has been disturbed. But when the plaintiff would lay any charge or servitude on the land or property of another, he must set forth his title specially in the declaration c. Thus, in an action on the case against a stranger and wrong-docr, for disturbing the plaintiff in the use of a seat in a church, no title or consideration is necessary to be shewn: But when the plaintiff claims against the ordinary himself, who hath prima facie the disposal of all the seats in the church, he ought to shew some cause or consideration, as building, repairing e, &c. And though, in the other case, the plaintiff is allowed to declare upon his possession, yet he must prove his title at the trial: And possession for above sixty years of a pew in a church, is not a sufficient title to maintain an action on the case, for disturbance in the enjoyment of it; but the plaintiff must prove a prescriptive right, or a faculty, and should claim it in his declaration, as appurtenant to a messuage in the parish c. In declaring for wrongs to personal property, the plaintiff must state his right; as, in trespass for taking goods, that they were his own goods f; or in trover, that he was possessed of them, &c.: And, in a declaration in replevin, for taking goods, the description number and value of them must be stated with certainty g.

In actions upon the case for a breach of duty, the declaration should state the nature of the duty to be performed by the defendant: which is founded on the general obligation of law, the defendant's particular situation, or some contract or agreement between the parties. When the defendant is liable of common right, as to repair a wall, for preventing damage to his neighbour, it is not necessary for the plaintiff to shew a title in his declaration, or the special ground of the defendant's liability h: But when a charge is imposed on another against common right, as owner of the soil or tertenant, it was formerly holden, that a title must be shewn; as in an action for not repairing fences 2, &c. So, where a special action on the case was brought against the defendant, for not keeping a bull and boar, the declaration was holden bad on demurrer, for not setting forth that the defendant was obliged to keep them, either by custom, prescription, or otherwise b. But in a late case, where an action was brought for not repairing a private road, leading through the defendant's close, it was holden to be sufficient to allege, that the defendant, as occupier of the close, was bound to repair it c: And, per Buller Justice, "the distinction is, between: cases where the plaintiff lays a charge upon the right of the defendant, and where the defendant himself prescribes in right of his own estate: In the former case, the plaintiff is presumed to be ignorant of the defendant's estate, and cannot therefore plead it; but in the latter, the defendant, knowing his own estate, in right of which he claims a privilege, must set it forth d." In actions against sheriffs or other officers, or against car- Mis-feazance. riers, &c. for mis-feazance, the declaration must state the nature of the plaintiff's right, and ground of the defendant's duty e.

Thus, in an action for defamation, though the words be in themselves actionable, yet the plaintiff is not at liberty to give evidence of any loss or injury he has sustained by the speaking of them, unless it be specially laid in the declaration s. If an action be brought for words that are not in themselves actionable, and the plaintiff do not prove the special damage laid in the declaration, he must be nonsuited; because the special damage is the gist of the action: but where the words are of themselves actionable, if the words be proved, the jury must find for the plaintiff, though no special damage be proved a Conclusion of declaration.

The declaration in general concludes, "to the damage of the plaintiff of a certain sum of money, and therefore he brings his suit, &c." But in a penal action, brought by a common informer, where the plaintiff's right to the penalty accrues upon bringing the action, it is not necessary to conclude in this way; as the plaintiff cannot have sustained any damage by a previous detention of the penalty. In actions against attornies and officers of the court, it is usual, though not necessary c, for the plaintiff instead of bringing suit, to pray relief, &c. And where the action is brought by bill against a member of the house of commons, the bill concludes with a prayer of process to be made to the plaintiff, according to the statute, &c. It was anciently necessary to find pledges to prosecute, and add their names to the declaration by bill ; but they are now holden to be mere matter of form, and may be found at any time before judgment?

General requisites of declaration.

Correspondence of, with process.

As it respects the parties.

The general requisites, or qualities of a declaration are, first, that it correspond with the process; secondly, that it contain all the circumstances necessary to maintain the action, and no more; thirdly, that these circumstances be set forth with certainty and truth s.

The correspondence of the declaration with the process may be considered, as it respects the parties to the action, their christian and surnames, the description of the character in which they sue or are sued, and the nature of the cause of action. In the Common Pleas, when the process is not bailable, the plaintiff, we have seen h, is allowed to join four defendants, for separate causes of action, in one writ, and to declare against them severally!: and accordingly, in that court, on a common capias quare clausum fregit against two, a declaration against one has been deemed regular k. But when the cause of action is bailable, the plaintiff cannot declare against one defendant separately, upon joint process, and affidavit to hold to bail against two!; though they were sued upon a joint and several promissory note m, or though the other defendants are out of the jurisdiction of the court, and cannot therefore be served with process n: And where a defendant is held to bail, on a writ issued against himself and another, and the plaintiff declares against one only, the court will set aside the declaration and subsequent proceedings for irregularity. So, where husband and wife being arrested, the latter was discharged out of custody on filing common bail, and the plaintiff declared against the husband alone, the court held the proceeding to be irregular b. In the Common Pleas, however, the affidavit of debt and clause of ac ctiam in bailable process, point out the person against whom the action is to proceed: Therefore, where the affidavit of debt was against A., the capius against A. and B., and the declaration against A. only, by whom bail was put in, that ' court held it to be regularc: So, upon a bailable capias against two defendants, with a clause of ac cliam and affidavit of debt against one, the plaintiff, in that court, may regularly declare against the latter defendant only d. And where the plaintiff first sucd out bailable process against W. in which he only was named, and on which he was arrested and put in and perfected bail, and the plaintiff then sued out serviceable process against four other defendants, in which W. was not named, and afterwards a declaration was delivered against W. with the other four defendants, the court held the declaration to be regular e.

The declaration should regularly correspond with the process, in the Christian and christian and surnames of the parties. If a person enter into a bond by a wrong christian name, and be sued thereon, he should be sued by that name; it having been determined, that a declaration against him by his right name, stating that he executed the bond by a wrong one, is badf. And, as a man cannot have two christian names, it has been holden, on a plea in abatement, that the plaintiff cannot declare against the defendant in his right name, with an alias of the name he is sued by 8. Yet, where the defendant was sued by the name of Jonathan otherwise John Soans, this was holden to be no cause of demurrer to the declaration; for non constat that it was not all one christian name h. If the defendant has been Misnomer of arrested by a wrong name, the sheriff and his officers are liable to an action of trespass and false imprisonmenti: and the arrest being illegal, the court, instead of putting the defendant to plead the misnomer in abatement, will set aside the proceedings k, and discharge him, if in custody 1; or, if he has given a bail-bond, will order it to be delivered up to be cancelled m. But in cases of non-bailable process, if the defendant's name be mis-stated in the writ, the court will not set aside the writ and proceedings on motion, but will leave the defendant to his plea in abatement a. And if the defendant be called and known as well by one name as the other, or there be only an inaccuracy in the spelling, so that the name is idem sonans, the court will not interfere b. So, where A., having two christian names, has omitted one of them in his dealings with B., he cannot, in an action brought against him by B., make the omission a ground for setting aside the proceedings c. And where the defendants had signed a regular bail-bond, they were holden to have thereby waived the irregularity of the omission of their christian names in a capias ad respondendum, directing the sheriff to take Messrs. L. and B d. The application for setting aside the proceedings, which is founded on an affidavit of the misnomer e, should it seems be made before the expiration of the time allowed for pleading in abatement f; and the court will only relieve the defendant, upon the terms of his filing common bail, and undertaking not to bring any action s. If the plaintiff declare against the defendant by a wrong name, he may, if not estopped, plead the misnomer in abatement; and it is said that his entering into a bail bond to the sheriff in the wrong name, would not estop him from pleading in abatement in the original action; though perhaps it might, in an action on the bail bond h. The safer way, however, is for the defendant, when arrested by a wrong name, to enter into the bail bond by his right name; stating that he was arrested by the name in the writ; for if his entering into it by a wrong name would not operate as an estoppel, it might be evidence, by his own admission, of his being called as well by one name as the other 1: And it is clear, that if the defendant, after being arrested, were to put in bail above in a wrong name, it would estop him from pleading the misnomer in abatement k; even though he were himself no party to the recognizance 1. The bail above therefore, in such case, should be put in, and entered on the recognizance roll, by the defendant in his right name, as having been arrested by the name in the writ m.

Mistake in, when and how cured, and when not. When process is taken out against a defendant by a wrong name, the misnomer may be cured by amending the writ, if there be any thing to amend by, and then declaring against the defendant by his right name, but in doing this, the court will take care that it shall not operate to the prejudice of the sheriffa. Or, if the defendant appear by his right name, the plaintiff may declare against him by the name in which he appears, stating that he was arrested, or served with process, by the other; for by appearing, the defendant admits himself to be the person sued, and so the variance is immaterial b. On process not bailable, if the defendant be sued by a wrong name, and do not appear, the plaintiff, we have seen c, cannot rectify the mistake, by appearing for him in his right name, according to the statute d: nor can he appear for him in the name by which he is sued, and afterwards declare against him in his right name. But if a defendant be arrested or served with process by a wrong christian name, and afterwards put in bail or appear by his right name, and the plaintiff declare against him by his right name, without stating that he was arrested or served with process by the other, the court will not interpose in a summary way, and set aside the proceedings for irregularity f; nor will they, on that ground, order an exoneretur to be entered on the bail-piece g: And it seems, that a misnomer in process may be cured, by an attorney's undertaking to appear h. So, if a defendant be served with process by a wrong christian name, and afterwards the plaintiff enter an appearance for him, and serve him with notice of declaration, by his right name, and proceed to judgment and execution, the court will not set aside the proceedings for irregularity, merely on the ground that the defendant never appeared; because he ought to have pleaded the misnomer in abatement i: And the course is now said to be, when there has been a misnomer in the writ, for the plaintiff, on the return of it, to file a declaration in the proper form; and the declaration so filed has been holden to cure the objection to the writk. It has also been determined, that if the plaintiff declare by a wrong christian name, this is no ground of nonsuit at the trial, if it can be shewn that the defendant knew that the action was brought by the person who actually sues 1; nor is it any objection to the plaintiff's recovery, in an action on a promissory note, that one of the defendants is misnamed, if it be proved that he was the real person sued, and served with process m. christian name, and omit to plead the misnomer, the plaintiff may proceed to judgment and execution against him, in the name by which he is sued a.

Character in which parties sue, or are sued.

Upon general process, the plaintiff may declare qui tamb, or as executor or administrator, &c.; or the defendant may be declared against in his representative character. But this rule will not hold è converso; for where the process was to answer the plaintiff qui tam, &c. and the declaration was in his own name only, omitting the qui tam part, the court held the variance to be fatal, and set aside the proceedings. In a subsequent case, the proceedings were set aside, where the process was to answer the plaintiffs as assignees of a bankrupt, and the declaration was in their own right; for the plaintiff cannot declare against the defendant generally, on process sued out in a special character. So, where a writ was sued out by the plaintiffs as executors, and the declaration was by them in their own right, it was deemed a sufficient variance for discharging the defendant out of custody on filing common bail.

Nature of cause of action.

The plaintiff may declare in chief, upon common process by hill in the King's Bench, of on a common capias quare clausum fregit in the Common Pleas 8, for any cause of action whatever 4. And where the process was in trespass and assault, and the declaration in trover, the variance But, in bailable cases, the declaration should was deemed immaterial !. regularly correspond with the ac ctiam in the writ, as to the nature of the cause of action: Therefore, where the plaintiffs having held the defendant to bail on an affidavit in assumpsit, delivered a declaration in trover, the court of King's Bench ordered an exonerctur to be entered on the bailpiece k. But they will not permit a defendant to take advantage of a variance in the amount of the debt, between the ac etiam part of the latitat and the declaration 1. And though, where there is a material variance between the ac etiam in the writ and the declaration, the plaintiff will lose his bail m, yet the court will not on that ground set aside the proceedings for irregularity n. It should also be remembered, that in the Common Pleas, a variance between the writ and count, the ac cliam being in case on promises, but the declaration in debt, is not a ground for entering an exoneretur on the bail-piece, where the sum sworn to is under 401°. By original, the plaintiff must declare in chief, for the same cause of action as is expressed in the writ p: and if there be a variance between the original writ and declaration, the court will discharge the defendant, on entering a common appearance : But they will not on this ground set aside the proceedings; for that would be permitting the defendant to do indirectly, what the practice of the court will not allow him to do directly, by craving oyer of the original writ, and pleading the variance in abatement b.

The rules of pleading, upon which the statement of the cause of action Objects of rules depends, are founded in good sense; their objects are precision and brevity: nothing is more desirable for the court than precision, nor for the . parties than brevity. Precision or certainty is of three kinds; first, to Certainty. a common intent; secondly, to a certain intent in general; thirdly, to a certain intent in every particular d: The second, or that which is to a certain intent in general, is all that is required in a declaration; and it ought to be such that the defendant may answer it, a good issue be joined thereon, and the court be enabled to give judgment c. This certainty should pervade the whole declaration; and is particularly required in setting forth the time, place, and other circumstances necessary to maintain the action f. But that which is alleged by way of conveyance or inducement to the substance of the matter, need not be so certainly alleged, as that which is the substance itself s: and surplusage will not Surplusage. vitiate, except where it defeats the action h.

If the declaration be defective in any of the above particulars, the de- Defect in declafendant may demur: But if he do not, the defect may in some cases be aided by the defendant's plea, or by a verdict for the plaintiff. If the de-of. claration want time, place, or other circumstances, it may be aided by the defendant's plea; but not if it be defective in substance 1: And a verdict will aid the omission of that which was necessary to be proved at the trial, and without which the jury could not have found for the plaintiff k. Defects in the declaration are also frequently cured by the statutes of jeofails 1.

The declaration itself was formerly delivered, in the King's Bench, to Declaration itthe defendant's attorney, who made a copy of it, and then delivered it back m: But the copy is now made in that court, as well as in the Common Pleas, by the plaintiff's attorney m; and, except where the defendant is in custody, should either be delivered to the defendant's attorney, or filed

In what cases delivered.

Paying for copy of declaration, &c.

In what cases filed.

After appearance entered, or bail filed, by plaintiff, according to statute.

Copy of declaration, how written. with the clerk of the declarations in the King's Bench, or prothonotaries in the Common Pleas. When the defendant has appeared, and filed common bail, or special bail has been put in and perfected, a copy of the declaration should be delivered to his attorney, if his place of abode be known; the delivery of a copy to the defendant himself, after he has appeared or filed bail, not being deemed sufficient. And, on the delivery of a copy of the declaration, the defendant's attorney must formerly have paid for the same, after the rate of four pence per sheet, computing seventy two words to a sheet, together with the stamps or king's duty, and four pence for the warrant of attorney. But now, it is not necessary for the defendant's attorney to pay for a copy of the declaration, when delivered; the stamps or king's duty on copies of declarations are repealed, by the statute 5 Geo. IV. c. 41.; and the plaintiff, we have seen, cannot sign judgment, for the defendant's refusing to pay four pence for the warrant of attorney, when a copy of the declaration is delivered to him.

If the abode of the defendant's attorney be unknown to the plaintiff's attorney, the copy should be filed, with the clerk of the declarations in the King's Bench, or prothonotaries in the Common Pleas, and notice thereof given to the defendant g. And a copy of the declaration should be filed in like manner, where the plaintiff has entered an appearance, or filed common bail for the defendant, according to the statute, and notice thereof. delivered to, or left at the last or most usual place of abode of the defendant; in which notice should be expressed the nature of the action, at whose suit it is prosecuted, and the time limited by the rules of the court for pleading; and that in case the defendant do not plead by such limited time, judgment will be entered against him by default h. statute 48 Geo. III. c. 149 i, requiring copies of declarations to be written in the usual and accustomed manner, and it not having been the practice to write such copies on both sides of the paper, the court of King's Bench held, that a copy so written, and delivered to a prisoner, was irregular, and entitled him to be discharged out of custody k. But the court of Common Pleas refused to set aside a declaration, on the ground that the common counts were partly printed, and partly written !.

The declaration, in the foregoing cases, must be delivered or filed abso- Filing, or delilutely. But it cannot be so delivered or filed, before appearance or bail; vering, usual tion de bene as the defendant till then is not in court s. Still however, for the sake of esse, in K. B. expediting the cause, by making the times for appearance and pleading concurrent, it is a rule in the King's Bench, that "upon all process, re-" turnable before the last return of any term, where no affidavit is made " or filed of the cause of action, the plaintiff may b file or deliver the de-" claration de bene esse, or conditionally, at the return of such process, " with notice to plead in cight days after the filing or delivery thereof: " And that upon all such process as aforesaid, where an affidavit is made " and filed of the cause of action, the declaration may be filed or de-" livered de bene esse, at the return of such process, with notice to plead " in four days after such filing or delivery, if the action be laid in London " or Middlesex, and the defendant live within twenty miles of London; " and in eight days, if the action be laid in any other county, or the de-" fendant live above twenty miles from London: Provided the declaration " in either case be filed or delivered, and notice thereof given, four days " exclusive before the end of the term, and a rule to plead be duly en-" tered c." It was formerly doubted, whether a declaration could be filed or delivered de bene esse, in the King's Bench, on process returnable the last return of the term d. But it is now settled, that it cannot be so filed or delivered : the practice of declaring de bene esse being founded on a rule of court c, by which the right of declaring in that mode is limited to process returnable before the last general f return: and the privilege was only intended to apply, when the plaintiff is entitled to a plea of the term e.

On process re-

In the Common Pleas, the practice of declaring de bene esse seems to In C. P. have been first allowed on special writs s, and was afterwards extended to common ones h. At present, the declaration in that court may be filed or delivered de bene esse, upon process returnable the first, second, or third return of any term i, or on the fourth return of Faster term k: And, by a late rule k, it may be so filed or delivered, upon process returnable the last return of any term; provided it be filed or delivered on the day of such return, or on the day next after such return, in case the same shall not happen on a Sunday, in which case the plaintiff shall have the whole of the Monday following, to file or deliver his declaration de bene esse:

And this rule applies equally to Easter term, as to any other. It was not formerly necessary, in the Common Pleas, to give notice of a declaration being filed conditionally, in bailable actions b: But now, by a late rule of court, "in every action in which special bail shall be required, and where the declaration shall be filed conditionally, notice in writing of such declaration being so filed, shall be given to the defendant, his attorney or agent; and no declaration shall be considered as filed, until such notice shall be so given."

Filing or delivering declaration, in Exchequer. In the Exchequer of Pleas, it was formerly the practice, to file the original draft of declaration in the office; and engrossments on paper, of declarations and other pleadings, were not usually required to be made by the party declaring or pleading: But now, by a late rule of court d, it is ordered, that "engrossments on paper, of all declarations and other pleadings, shall be duly made on stamp e, and filed or delivered by the parties respectively declaring or pleading, within the times prescribed by the rules of the court for filing and delivering declarations or other pleadings respectively; and that a book be kept in the office of pleas, wherein entries shall be made of declarations so filed."

De bene esse.

With regard to declarations de bene csse, it is a rule in the Exchequer f, that "upon all process of quo minus ad respondendum and capias, to be issued out of that court, returnable before the last return of any term, where an affidavit shall be made and filed of the cause of action, pursuant to the act of parliament for preventing frivolous and vexatious arrests, a declaration may be filed or delivered de bene esse, at the return of such process g, with notice to plead in four days after such filing or delivery, if the action be laid in London or Middlesex, and the defendant live within twenty miles of London, and in eight days, if the action be laid in any other county, or the defendant live above twenty miles from London; and if the defendant put in bail, and do not plead within such times as are respectively before mentioned, judgment may be signed; provided such declaration be delivered or filed, and notice thereof given, four days exclusively before the end of the term, and a rule to plead duly entered." It is also a rule in that court h, that "upon all process to be issued out of that court, returnable as aforesaid, where the defendant shall be personally served with a copy thereof, pursuant to the said act of parliament, or to the statute 51 Geo. III. c. 1241, the plaintiff may file or deliver a declaration de bene esse, at the return of

And, by a late rule b, it is ordered, that "in all cases wherein the plaintiff, by the present practice of the court, would be entitled to sign judgment for want of a plea, where the declaration had been delivered or filed, and notice thereof given, four days exclusively before the end of the term in which the process is returnable, the plaintiff shall be at liberty to sign such judgment; provided the declaration be delivered or filed, and notice thereof given, two days exclusively before the end of the term within which the process is returnable, a rule to plead having been duly entered." This rule does not extend to filing declarations de bene esse, so as to entitle the plaintiff to a plea of the term, on writs returnable two days exclusively before the end of the term c.

In the King's Bench, the declaration may be filed, and notice thereof At what time given, on the return day of the writ, or quarto die post by original; and the writ of latitat, we have seend, may be sued out and served on the return day: but it cannot be served, and notice of declaration given, at the same time; for the notice of declaration presupposes the declaration to be filed, and it cannot regularly be filed till after the writ is served: There must be some interval therefore, however short, between the service of the writ and notice of declaration e. But where the defendant had omitted to take advantage of the objection, until after judgment was signed, and a whole term had elapsed the court would not set aside the judgment with costs f. In the Common Pleas, the declaration may be filed de benc esse, In C. P. on the essoin or return day of the writ, or any day after; though a rule to plead cannot be given till the first day of term g. And notice of the declaration being so filed may be given, in that court, on the return day of the writ, at the time of serving it h: But notice cannot be given on that day, of a declaration being filed in chief i. irregular . The declaration, however, cannot be filed before the essoin, or return day of the writ: therefore, a notice of declaration given the day before the essoin day of the term, being Sunday, until which day the plaintiff could not file his declaration, has been deemed a nullity b. And, in that court, the declaration cannot be filed or delivered de bene esse, so as to charge the defendant with the costs of it, till the appearance day of the return of the writ. So, if one of three defendants, in a joint action, appear to a quare clausum fregit, and the two others, being arrested on bailable process, have till the ensuing term to justify bail, it is irregular for the plaintiff, previous to that time, to deliver a declaration against all three, indersed "conditionally, until special bail is perfected d." And the declaration cannot, in either court, be filed or delivered de bene esse, after the defendant has appeared, or filed bail e; or the time limited for his appearance, or putting in bail, is expired f; whether the process be bailable or not bailable s. On bailable process therefore, when the defendant has neglected to put in or perfect special bail, the plaintiff must proceed against the sheriff, or his bail, upon the bail-bond: and when he has not appeared, or filed common bail in due time, the plaintiff must enter an appearance, or file common bail for him, according to the statute; and then deliver or file his declaration absolutely h. In the Exchequer of Pleas, it has been the usual course of the court, when the process is served on the return day, to give notice of the declaration being filed conditionally, on the same day 1: And, in that court, service of notice of declaration on the return day, by a person going away, and returning a few minutes after service of the writ, was holden not to be irregular k.

Good, if filed, from time of notice only.

If the declaration be filed, and notice thereof given to the defendant or his attorney, it is deemed to be a good declaration, from the time of such notice only 1; and therefore a rule to plead in such case, given before notice of declaration, is irregular m. Yet where the declaration, in the King's Bench, was filed on the last day of the second term after the return of the writ, but the notice was not given till a little before the essoin day of the following term, this was holden to be well enough; the master certifying Paying for copy it to be the practice ". office, before he could have been admitted to plead a; and if he neglected to do so, the plaintiff's attorney might have refused to accept his plea, and signed judgment b: But now, though a copy of the declaration must be paid for, on taking it out of the office, when filed, yet the defendant's attorney, we have seen c, is not bound to pay for it, when delivered to him d.

The notice of declaration being filed in the office, must be properly entitled; and express the nature of the action, as whether it be in debt or case, &c. e: but, in the Common Pleas, it need not state the amount of the damages f; and, in the King's Bench, it seems that no date to the notice of : declaration is necessary g. When the defendant's place of residence is How served, in known to the plaintiff's attorney, the notice of declaration should be delivered to the defendant, or left for him at the last or most usual place of his abode; it being irregular in such case for the plaintiff's attorney to stick up a notice of declaration in the office h: And the court of Common In C. P. Pleas would not allow the affixing of a notice of declaration in the prothonotaries' office, to be good service; although it was sworn, that the defendant had no fixed place of residence, and that the plaintiff did not know where to find him i. If the defendant's place of abode be unknown, application must be made to the court, that affixing the declaration in the office may be deemed good service k: and it is not so considered, unless by express permission of the court, though the defendant's place of abode be unknown to the plaintiff 1. But where the defendant and his attorney had been informed that a notice of declaration was stuck up in the office, the latter court refused to set aside a judgment, for want of service of the notice at the defendant's last place of abode m. And where a defendant kept out of the way, to avoid being served with notice of declaration, and it was sent to him in a letter by the post, which was returned opened and marked "refused," this was deemed good service; it appearing that the defendant knew the hand-writing of the plaintiff's attorney n. So, in the Exchequer, In Exchequer. service of notice of declaration is good, by affixing it on the door of the house where the defendant last lived, if the plaintiff or his attorney do not know the place to which he is removed, and knowledge of such service can be brought home to him. When the declaration is filed or delivered de Indorsement on bene esse or conditionally, it is necessary to make an indorsement thereon, that it is so filed or delivered P: and, in the King's Bench, where the declaration filed in the office, before the defendant's appearance, was indorsed

OF THE DECLARACION.

" filed conditionally," and judgment afterwards signed for want of a plea, the court held the proceeding regular; though the notice served on the defendant was of a declaration generally.

Judgment of nonpres, for not declaring.

If the plaintiff do not declare in due time, he is liable to be nonpressed, or have judgment signed against him for not prosecuting his suit by It is called a judgment of nonpros, from the words non prosequitur, &c., formerly used in entering it up. And this seems to be the proper appellation of the judgment, in actions by bill: but in actions by original, where the language of the judgment was non prosequitur breve, vel sectam, it is more commonly called a judgment of nonsuit c. The judgment of nonpros is founded on the statute 13 Car. II. stat. 2. c. 2. § 3. by which it is enacted, that "upon an appearance entered for the defendant by attorney, in " the term wherein the process is returnable, unless the plaintiff shall put " into the court from whence the process issued, his bill or declaration, " against the defendant, in some personal action or ejectment of farm, be-" fore the end of the term next following after appearance, a nonsuit for " want of a declaration may be entered against him; and the defendant " shall have judgment to recover costs against the plaintiff, to be taxed " and levied in like manner as upon the 23 Hen. VIII d." The provisions of this statute are confined in terms, to cases where the defendant has been arrested; but it has been holden, that if a defendant appear at the day of the return of the process, and put in bail, though he never were arrested, nor the process returned, yet if the plaintiff do not declare within two terms, a nonpros may be entered against him e: And the statute is not confined to cases where the writ is defective, but has always been construed to In K. B. by bill. extend to cases in general f. Hence it is a rule, in the King's Bench, that "on all process issuing out of this court, returnable at a day certain, if the defendant appear by his attorney, and file bail of the term wherein the process is returnable, and the plaintiff do not declare before the end of the term next following, a nonpros may be signed, without entering any rule to declare, or calling for a declaration s." So, where the proceedings are by original in the King's Bench, it is not necessary to give a rule to declare, or demand a declaration h. But, in the Common Pleas, the defendant must, before the end of the second term, or within four days after, enter a rule for the plaintiff to declare i, which he obtains on a precipe from the secondaries, and demand a declaration k; and if the plaintiff do not declare before the rule is out, the defendant may, at any time before the essoin-day of the next term, sign a nonpros, but not afterwards ; and the plaintiff, we have seen m, is not allowed any longer time to declare, without leave, than the time limited by the defendant's rule. The demand of declaration must be in writing ; and, in country causes, it must be made on the agent in town b.

The defendant cannot sign a judgment of nonpros, before an appearance Cannot be is entered: and it cannot in general be signed, unless bail be filed, or an appearance entered, of the term wherein the process is returnable c; and therefore it cannot be signed, where a prisoner is superseded for not declaring, &c. on filing common baild. But when special bail is required, the appearance is not complete, until they are perfected e: and therefore, where the defendant was arrested on a bill of Middlesex, on the 22d November, and special bail was put in in Michaelmas term, and perfected in Hilary term, and judgment of nonpros was signed in Hilary vacation, the court of King's Bench set aside the judgment for irregularity; the plaintiff having been guilty of no laches, in not declaring in Michaelmas term, as the defendant was not then fully in court f. And the statute contemplates an available appearance only, or such an appearance as will entitle the plaintiff to declare: Therefore, where a latitat having issued against three defendants, returnable on the last day of Trinity term, but only one of the defendants being served, an alias issued, returnable on the last day of Michaelmas term, of which one other of the defendants was served with a copy, and in Hilary term following a pluries latitat issued, returnable on the last day of Hilary term, but which was not served on the third defendant, and another pluries issued, returnable on the 19th May in Easter term, of which he was served with a copy, and an appearance was entered for all the defendants, in Easter term; and the plaintiff not having declared in Trinity term, the defendant signed judgment of nonpros; the court held, that such judgment was regular, though an appearance was not entered of the term the process was returnable g. The judgment of nonpros, however, must be signed, in the King's Bench, within a year after the return of the writ h.

And this is universally true in actions by original, where the plaintiff cannot proceed against the defendants severally, upon a joint writ. But upon common process for a supposed trespass, in the King's Bench or Common Pleas, if the plaintiff declare, serve a notice of declaration, or even take out a rule for further time to declare, against one or more of several defendants, and do not proceed against the others, the latter may sign a judgment of nonpros k. such case however, there eight to be but one judgment of nonpros for all the defendants, unless the plaintiff have indicated his intention of proceeding against them severally; for the trespass is joint, and though the plaintiff, in the Common Pleas, may declare severally, yet it remains joint, till it be severed by the declaration.

What, and with whom, and how signed.

Costs on.

The judgment of nonpros, or nonsuit, for want of a declaration, is a final judgment, and signed with the clerk of the judgments in the King's Bench, or prothonotaries in the Common Pleas; an incipitur being first made on a roll, and also on a sheet of paper, called a judgment paper: And, in the Common Pleas, the defendant's warrant of attorney must be filed with the clerk of the warrants, who will mark the judgment paper b. Whenever the defendant obtains a judgment of nonpros, he is, as a necessary consequence, entitled to costs c; for which he may either take out execution, or bring an action of debt upon the judgment. It has even been holden, that an executor is liable to pay costs, upon a judgment of nonpros d. And the court, in two cases, have ordered the costs to be paid by the plaintiff's attorney in one of them, at the instance of the defendant, upon an affidavit that the plaintiff could not be found c; and in the other, at the instance of the plaintiff himself, where his attorney refused to proceed, without being furnished with money f.

Setting aside, when regular.

For irregularity.

Cannot be signed, pending injunction, &c.

For not adjourning essoin.

If the judgment of nonpros be regular, the courts will not set it aside, as a matter of course; and, in a qui tam action, they have refused to do so g. But it may be set aside on motion, if irregular, with all the proceedings that have been had upon it, provided the application be made in time: And if an action be brought on the judgment, the whole proceedings may be set aside, by one rule h. But where the plaintiff did not apply till after judgment was signed, in an action brought on the judgment of nonpros, the court of Common Pleas refused to set aside the latter judgment, on the ground of laches i. A judgment of nonpros cannot regularly be signed, pending an injunction k: And where it was signed after the debt and costs had been paid, the court set it aside, although the defendant swore that the money was not paid with his privity. But where it was signed for not adjourning an essoin, cast upon a special capias, and the plaintiff took no notice of it, but delivered his declaration, and after the rule to plead was out, and a plea called for, signed judgment; the court, considering it as a trick, declared that as there was no colour for the essoin, or to expect the plaintiff to search after a nonpros, and there was no notice given of it, the plaintiff had a right to go on; and therefore they refused to set aside his judgment m.

It may not be improper in this place, to state the operation and effect Effect of injuncof an injunction, which, we have just seen, will prevent the plaintiff from signing a judgment of nonpros, and how far it affects the different proceedings in the course of the suit. The general effect of an injunction in In Chancery. Chancery, when obtained for want of an answer before action commenced, or after action and before the defendant in equity is in a condition to demand a plea a, that is, before the plaintiff in equity has appeared and the defendant has declared against him, is to stay all proceedings at law, from the time of its being served; but when it is not obtained until after the defendant in equity is in a condition to demand a plea, he is permitted to demand it, and proceed to trial and judgment, being only restrained from taking out execution b: And even then, under particular circumstances, the injunction may be extended to stay trial, on an affidavit that the plaintiff in equity is advised and believes that the answer will afford a discovery material to his defence ".

In the Exchequer, the effect of an injunction for want of an answer, in In Exchequer. a town cause, is to stay all proceedings at law, from the time it is served, until answer and further order d: And it is of equal force in a country cause, when the bill is filed in Michaelmas or Easter Terme; but in Hilary and Trinity, which are issuable terms, there is a clause in the injunction, that if issue is or can be joined in the action, the plaintiff at law may proceed to trial thereof; but is not to enter up judgment, or sue out execution thereon f: and therefore, in these terms, if the plaintiff at law has so far proceeded in his action, as that he can join issue therein by his own act, as by adding a similiter g, in that case he is permitted to go to trial at the following assizes, and the injunction only stays judgment and execution. But though this be the ordinary practice of the court, yet cases do occasionally occur, especially in matters of title and discovery, where the court will restrain the trial at law till after answer h. An injunction upon the merits, in both courts, operates as a stay of all further proceedings in the cause, from the time it is granted. Taking Breach of inmoney out of a court of law, which has been paid in by rule of court, is a breach of a common injunction, against proceeding at law i: but shewing cause against a rule for a new trial, is not a proceeding which amounts to the breach of an injunction k.

Imparlance is said to be, when the court gives a party leave to answer at another time, without the assent of the other party a; and in this sense, it signifies time to reply, rejoin, surrejoin, &c. But the more common signification of imparlance is time to plead b: and it is either general c, without saving any exception to the defendant, which is always to another term d; or special, which is sometimes to another day in the same term e, with a saving of all exceptions to the writ, bill, or count f; or of all exceptions whatsoever: which latter is called a general special imparlances. The general imparlance is of course, when the defendant is not bound to plead the same term; but a special imparlance is not allowed without leave of the court, in the King's Bench h; and the court will not grant a special imparlance, except to prevent injustice 1. In the Common Pleas, general imparlances are entered of course by the attornies; and it is a rule, that " all attornics and clerks do duly enter, or cause to be entered, imparlances or incipiturs in all causes, according to the ancient usage and custom of this court; and that the want of entering an imparlance or incipitur, in every cause wherein imparlances ought to be entered, shall be a sufficient cause for the defendant to have a further imparlance of course k." A special imparlance, in that court, may be granted by the prothonograies, so as to enable the defendant to plead in abatement, within the first four days of the next term after the delivery, or filing and notice

It is then also too late to after imparlance. claim conusance d, or demand over of a deed e, &c. After a special imparlance, the defendant may plead in abatement , though not to the jurisdiction of the court s. And where the defendant pleaded a misnomer in abatement, after an imparlance, thus: " And A.B. who was arrested by the name of A. C. comes, &c." the court in one case held this to be tantamount to a special imparlance h: This case however has since been over-ruled, by a subsequent determination i. And where a bill was filed in vacation against an attorney, as of the preceding term, with a special memorandum of a subsequent day in vacation, stating the cause of action to have accrued after the last day of term, and the defendant pleaded a plea in abatement, entitled of the following term, without a special imparlance; the court of King's Bench held that this was regular, and set aside a judgment signed as for want of a plea k. After a general special imparlance, the defendant may not only plead in abatement of the writ, bill or count, but also privilege1, which is a plea to the person of the defendant, affecting the jurisdiction of the court m. The defendant was not formerly allowed to plead a tender and touts temps prist, after any kind of imparlance n; and the reason assigned was, that by craving time, he admitted he was not ready, and so falsified his plea. But it is now settled, that a plea of tender, being an issuable plea, may be pleaded after imparlance, as well as before; though, for avoiding the inconsistency above stated, it must always be entitled of the same term with the declaration r: and where it is pleaded after an imparlance, a judge's order must be obtained in the King's Bench, or treasury rule in the Common Pleas q, for leave to plead it as of the preceding term.

or he may demur thereto or allege the impariance in his replication, by way of estopped be but if the plaintiff, instead of taking any of these advantages, reply to the special matter of the plea, the fault is cured a Imparlance, when formerly allowed, in K. B. and when not.

In the King's Bench, the defendant was formerly allowed to impart to the term next after the return of the process, unless the proceedings were by original, upon a habeas corpus, for or against attornies or other priyileged persons, or against prisoners in custody of the marshale. On proceedings by original, if the action were laid in London or Middlesex, and the defendant appeared before the last return of the term; or if the action were laid in any other county, and the defendant appeared the first return of Hilary or Trinity term, or before the third return of Michaelmas or Easter term, no imparlance was allowed, without consent or special rule f. So, upon a habeas corpus, returnable in Michaelmas or Easter term, if the declaration were delivered before the third return, the defendant was not outitled to an imparlance s. And where the proceedings were for or against attornics or other privileged persons h, or against prisoners in custody of the marshali, the defendant was bound to plead, without any imparlance, the same term the declaration was delivered, if delivered four days exclusive before the end of the term. Afterwards, the time was narrowed for pleading upon a latitat, &c.; and it became a rule, that where the cause of action was specially expressed in the process, the defendant should not have liberty of imparling, without leave of the court; but should plead within the time allowed, by the course of the court, to defendants sued by original writ k. And at length it was determined, that even upon a special capias by original, the defendant should not be obliged to plead sooner than upon a common latitat.

Time for pleading, in K. B. when plaintiff declares absolutely.

The former distinctions upon this subject being thus gradually abolished, it is now settled, in the King's Bench m, that " in all cases when the defendant has appeared and filed common bail, or put in and perfected special bail, or the plaintiff has appeared and filed common bail for him according to the statute, and the declaration is delivered, or filed and notice thereof given, four days exclusive before the end of the term in which the writ was returnable, if the venue be laid in London or Middlesex, and the defendant live within twenty miles of London, the declaration should be delivered or filed absolutely, with notice to plead within four days;

Time for pleading after.

In the Common Pleas, it is a rule, that "upon all process returnable the first, second or third return of any term, (since extended to process returnable the fourth return of Easter term c,) if the plaintiff declare in London or Middlesex, and the defendant live within twenty miles of London, the defendant shall plead within four days after such declaration delivered, with notice to plead accordingly, without any imparlance; and in case the plaintiff declare in any other county, or the defendant live above twenty miles from London, the defendant shall plead within eight days after the declaration delivered, with notice to plead accordingly, without any imparlance d. This rule applies to declarations filed or delivered de bene essed, as well as to such as are delivered absolutely; and was extended, by a subsequent rule c, to process returnable the last return of any term; provided the declaration be filed or delivered on the day of such return, or on the day next after such return, in case the same shall not happen on a Sunday, in which case the plaintiff shall have the whole of the day following, to file or deliver such declaration as aforesaid. If the declaration be filed de bene esse, on the essoin day of the return of the writ, the defendant is entitled, in the Common Pleas, to eight days time to plead; and the defendant must plead in that time, although by the rules of the office, no person is allowed to search for a declaration, till the first day in full term e. But if the declaration be filed after the essoin day, and on or before the appearance day, the defendant is entitled only to four days, to be computed from the appearance day; or if it be filed after the appearance day, then to four days from the time of delivery f: And the days are reckoned inclusively in that court; so that if a declaration be filed or delivered on the first, with notice to plead in four days, the plaintiff is entitled to sign judgment for want of a plea, on the opening of the office in the afternoon of the fifth day.

When the process, in the King's Bench, is returnable the bast return of the term s; or, in the Common Pleas, when it is returnable on that return, and the declaration is not filed or delivered on the return day, or on the day following c; or where the process, in either court, is returnable before, but the declaration is not delivered, or filed and notice thereof given, four days exclusive before the end of the term h, the defendant, if completely in court, is entitled to an imparlance; and must plead within the first four days of the next term; provided the declaration be delivered, or filed and notice thereof given, before the essoin day of that term: otherwise the defendant will be allowed to impart to the subsequent term a. But if the declaration be delivered before such essoin day, though without a notice to plead, and the defendant appear and accept the declaration, he shall not have an imparlance to the subsequent term; the notice to plead not being necessary in such case, as it would be, where a declaration is filed de bone esse b. And if a writ be returnable the last day of one term, and the defendant do not justify bail until the fourth day of the next, he is not entitled to an imparlance to the third term; the foundation of which is, that no laches can be imputed to the plaintiff, for not declaring until the defendant is perfectly in court c: And, for the like reason, if a writ be taken out against two defendants, and one of them is arrested, or served with a copy of it, in the term of which it is returnable, but the other cannot be met with, so that it becomes necessary to take out another writ against him, returnable in the next term; as the plaintiff cannot declare till both defendants are in court d, they are neither of them entitled to an imparlance, on account of the plaintiff's not declaring until the term in which the latter defendant is arrested, or served with process d, or until he is outlawed. So, the defendant is not entitled to an imparlance, where the delay in declaring is occasioned by himself; as by his unnecessarily obtaining an order for particulars, with a stay of proceedings until they have been delivered f. So, when a defendant removes the cause by habcas corpus from an inferior court, and the plaintiff does not declare until the next term, the defendant is not entitled to an imparlance; for such removals being in general considered as dilatory, it would only be adding to the delay, if an imparlance were granted 5. And it is not usual for the Rule for, not court, or a judge, in any case to grant a rule for an imparlance; but when the defendant is entitled thereto, he takes it as a matter of course h.

In the Exchequer it is a rule i, that "upon all process to be issued out of that court, returnable the first or second return, or on any day before the second return of any term, (or, according to the present practice, if returnable on any day before the four last days of the term k,) where the defendant shall, at the return thereof, enter an appearance or file special bail, (as the case may require,) if the plaintiff declare in London or Middlesex, and the defendant live within twenty miles of London, he shall plead to the said declaration within four days after the delivery thereof, without any imparlance; and in case the plaintiff declare in any other county, or the defendant live above twenty miles from London, then he shall plead within eight days after the delivery thereof, without any imparlance; or in default thereof, the plaintiff may sign judgment, a rule to plead being duly given, unless the court, or one of the barons, shall think proper, on the special circumstances of the case, to grant an imparlance: but no defendant shall be compelled to plead, by virtue of this rule, unless the declaration be delivered four days before the end of the term in which the writ is returnable, with notice thereon indorsed of the time wherein such defendant is to plead." The time for pleading, on a declaration filed or delivered de bene esse, before the defendant's appearance, has been already stated a: And it is a rule b, that "where any declaration shall be delivered to the defendant's attorney or clerk in court, or notice of a declaration shall be delivered to any defendant according to the statute, before the essain day of any term, and the defendant shall imparl until the next term, he shall plead to the said declaration, within the first four days of such next term, a rule to plead being duly given; and in default thereof, the plaintiff shall be at liberty to sign judgment."

De bene esse.

Term's notice of rule to plead, when necessary, and when not.

If four terms have elapsed since the delivery of the declaration, the defendant shall have a whole term's notice of the rule to plead c, before judgment can be entered against him d, unless the cause have been stayed by injunction e, or privilege; which notice must be given before the essoin day of the term : And where a general notice is given, of the plaintiff's intention to proceed in the cause, it does not extend beyond the term; therefore a rule to plead may be entered, and judgment signed, in the vacation s. This rule was established, for the purpose of preventing any surprise on the defendant, after the plaintiff has lain by four terms, without proceeding in his action; and therefore it does not apply, where the proceedings have been delayed at the defendant's request h.

Time for pleading, after changing venue.

Demanding oyer.

It remains to be observed, within what time the defendant must plead after changing the venue, demanding oyer, giving a bill of particulars, or amending the declaration. After changing the venue, the defendant must plead to the new action, as he should have done in the other, without delay! After the delivery of oyer, the defendant shall have the same time in term to plead, or as many pleading days, as he had when he demanded it he and formerly, if oyer had been demanded in the Common Pleas, after the rule to plead was out, the plaintiff was not bound to give it; though if he did, he could not have signed judgment for want of a plea, till the next afternoon . but now, as will be seen hereafter, the demand of over may be made in that court, as well as in the King's Bench, at any period before the time for pleading is expired b. In the latter court, a Delivery of bill defendant has the same time to plead, after the delivery of a bill of particulars, as he had when the summons for it was returnable c: And where a summons for better particulars of the plaintiff's demand was obtained by the defendant, four days before the time for pleading expired, but the plaintiff's attorney did not attend till the third summons, and the order being then refused, and the time originally allowed for pleading having expired, signed judgment for want of a plea; the court held, that as the delay was occasioned by the plaintiff's attorney, the judgment was signed too soon, and was therefore irregular d. In the Common Pleas, the plaintiff cannot sign judgment for want of a plea, till the expiration of twenty four hours after the delivery of a bill of particulars; though the time for pleading be expired, and a demand of plea given, more than twenty four hours before that time . And in that court, after the time for pleading Giving security has expired, but before judgment signed against the defendant, if the court on his application stay proceedings, till the plaintiff give security for costs, to be approved by the prothonotary, the plaintiff, though he give security instanter, which is accepted by the defendant, is not at liberty to sign judgment, before the opening of the office on the next morning ! In the Amending de-King's Bench, if the plaintiff amend his declaration the same term, the defendant shall have two days, exclusive of the day of amendment, to alter his first plea, or plead de novo g; but if the amendment be made in a subsequent term, the defendant is entitled to a new four-day rule to plead h; though a demand of plea is unnecessary i. And where the plaintiff gave notice of trial for the assizes, and afterwards countermanded, and then applied for an order to amend his declaration, which order was obtained on the terms of the defendant's having an imparlance until the next term, the court of King's Bench refused to rescind so much of the order as related to the imparlance k. been sold by the plaintiff, the court of King's Beach gave the defendant time to plead, in order that he might obtain a discovery from the court of Chancery a. So where the plaintiff, being indicted for felony, stied a banker for money he had paid him, which was surmised to be the produce of the felony, the court of Common Pleas, on application, gave the defendant time to plead in a month after the trial of the indictment b. The summons should be regularly served on the plaintiff's attorney or agent :: and when taken out, and made returnable, before the expiration of the time for pleading, it is a stay of proceedings, pending the application a; but it is otherwise when taken out, or made returnable, after the expiration of the time for pleading d. In the latter case, the plaintiff is at liberty to sign judgment, before the summons is returnable e: but if he neglect to do so, he cannot afterwards sign judgment'; it being a rule, that if the summons be returnable before judgment is signed, it prevents the plaintiff from afterwards signing it s. When the object of the summons is collateral to the time for pleading b, as to discharge the defendant out of custody on filing common bail, &c. it will not in general operate as a stay of proceedings.

Proceedings on summons.

Orde

Time, how reckoned.

The plaintiff's attorney or agent, on being served with the summons, either indorses his consent to an order being made upon it, attends the judge, or makes default. In the latter case, the defendant's attorney or agent, after waiting half an hour's, should take out a second summons, and after that a third (if necessary,) which should be respectively served and attended as the first; and if default be made upon three summonses, the judge, on affidavit thereofk, will make an order ex parte: but if any one of the summonses be attended, the judge will make an order upon, or discharge it, as he sees cause. The time allowed, in the King's Bench, is reckoned cxclusive of the day of the date of the order !. In the Common Pleas, it is said to be inclusive of the date of the order, but exclusive of the day when it expires m; and therefore where an order for a week was dated the 16th of May, judgment signed for want of a plea on the 23d, was holden to be regular n: and, in the latter court, it seems that when the time to plead is not expired at the time of making the order, the time allowed is to be reckoned from the expiration of the time to plead, and not from the date of the order, or what is done under it. If there be Month, what. an order for a month's time to plead, it is understood to mean a lunar, and net a calendar month b. The order of a judge for time, or further time to Order must be plead, and all other orders, whether by consent or otherwise should be regularly drawn up and served: it being a rule, in the King's Bench , that " no summons for further time to plead, reply or rejoin, or summons for further particulars of the plaintiff's demand, defendant's set-off, or other particular, be granted in any action depending in that court, unless the last previous order for time, further time, or particulars respectively, be first drawn up, and such order produced at the time of applying for any such summons." And, in the Common Pleas, a consent indorsed on a judge's summons is not binding on either party, unless the order be drawn up and served pursuant thereto d. In that court also, if a sum- Discharging mons be taken out for time to plead, and the defendant's attorney do not attend, the plaintiff must get the summons discharged, before he can sign judgment e; but it is said to be otherwise in the King's Bench f.

Terms, on obtaining order.

When an order is obtained for time to plead, it is either upon, or without terms. The usual terms, when the plaintiff is in time to try his cause, are pleading issuably, rejoining gratis, and taking short notice of trial, or inquiry; but if he be not in time, then the terms are pleading issuably only: and, when the defendant is an executor or administrator, he must undertake not to plead any judgment confessed by him, since his time for pleading was out g; for otherwise he might confess judgments in the mean time, and plead them in bar to the plaintiff's demand. An issuable plea is a Issuable plea, plea in chief to the merits h; upon which the plaintiff may take issue, and go to trial i: Therefore, a plea in abatement is not an issuable pleak; nor a false plea of judgment recovered 1; nor a plea of alien enemy m, or other plea, which does not go to the merits ". But a plea of tender has been deemed an issuable pleao; and also a plea of the statute of limitations p, or, in the King's Bench, that a bail-bond was taken for ease and favour q. So where the defendant, in an action on a recognizance of bail, under a judge's order to plead issuably, pleaded nul ticl record, and that no ca. sa.

Demurrers, when so considered.

was used out against the principal the court of Common Pleas held that such pleas might be considered as issuable; and that the plaintiff could not sign judgment as for want of a pleas. As to demurrers, there is a distinction between a real and fair demurrer, and a demurrer without good cause b. The former is an issuable plea, within the meaning of a judge's order c; the latter is not, but only an evasion of it d. ... And a defendant, when under terms of pleading issuably, cannot assign special causes of demurrer, even though the causes assigned be matter of substance. But where the plaintiff declared in trespuss for breaking and entering his close, &c. and seizing and taking his goods and chattels, to wit, 100 articles of furniture, and 100 articles of wearing apparel, without describing their nature or quality; and the defendant, being under a judge's order to plead issuably, demurred generally to the whole declaration, and the plaintiff signed judgment as for want of a plea; the court of Common Pleas ordered it to be set aside with costs, as the demurrer went to the substance of the declaration, the goods taken having been insufficiently described therein. And where the defendant was advised that he had substantial ground of demurrer, the court of King's Bench set aside the judgment, signed as for want of a plea, upon terms. By rejoining gratis is meant, rejoining without the common four-day rule to rejoin h: And, in the Common Pleas, the plaintiff having tendered an issue to a plea, and demanded a rejoinder, when the defendant was under terms to rejoin gratis, and for want of a rejoinder signed judgment, the court held the judgment regular; but set it aside without costs, because the plaintiff might have added the similiter himself. Short notice of trial in country causes must, in the King's Bench, be given at least four days before the commission day, one day exclusive, and the other inclusive k: But, in the Common Pleas, two days notice seems to be sufficient in country causes1; as it is also in town causes, in both courts; though it is usual to give as much more as the time will admit of. The defendant however is not precluded by these terms, from demurring to the replication, if there be good cause<sup>m</sup>.

of which is not issuable, it will vitiate all the others . So, where a defendant, when under an order to plead issuably, puts in a sham demurzer to some of the counts in the declaration, and pleads issuably to the rest, the plaintiff may consider the whole as a nullity, and sign judgment as for want of a plea b. But where it is doubtful whether the plea be issuable, the better way, in term time, is to move the court to set it aside .

Before the plaintiff, however, can sign judgment, the defendant must Notice to plead. have notice to plead; and, unless he be bound by rule of court, or order of a judge, to plead by a time therein limited, a rule to plead must be Rule to plead. entered in all cases, whother the defendant have appeared or not; and Demand of pleawhen he has appeared, there must also in general be a demand of plea.

When the declaration is delivered absolutely, after appearance; a notice Notice to plead, to plead must be given d; which is usually indorsed on the declaration, when plannin declares absootherwise the defendant need not plead thereto, within the regular time; lutely. but if the defendant take an imparlance, for want of such notice, then he must plead at the time allowed him by such imparlance. And if the declaration be deligered before the essoin day of the term next after the return of the writ, though without a notice to plead, the defendant, we have seen f, if he appear and accept the declaration, shall not have an imparlance to the subsequent term. A notice to plead seems also to be neces- De bene esse. sary, when the declaration is filed or delivered debene esse, or conditionally though this was formerly doubted in the Common Pleas h. But it is not Need not be innecessary that the notice to plead should be indorsed on, or given at the time of delivering the declaration: Therefore, where the declaration in delivering, dethe King's Bench was filed on the last day of the second term after the return of the write that the notice to plead was only given a little before the essoin day of the following term, the court held it to be well enough, the master certifying it to be the practice !. And where the plaintiff On declaration having declared in his own right, afterwards declared as executor, without indorsing the declaration "by the bye" when delivered, but the defendant's attorney was told it was by the bye, the court of King's Bench, we have seen k, on the opinion of the master, held it to be regular. In In C. P. the Common Pleas, where a declaration was delivered without a notice to plead, and some time afterwards a notice in writing was given to the defendant, who lived above forty miles from London, to plead in eight days, this was held to be a good declaration and notice, although the notice was not given at the time of the delivery of, or written on the back of the de-

The rule to plead is the order of the court ; and may be entered, on a precipe, with the clerk of the rules in the King's Bench, are econdaries in the Common Pleas, at any time after the delivery, or filing and notice of the declaration, in term time; or if the declaration be delivered; or filed and notice given, four days exclusive before the end of the term, the rule to plead may be entered at any time during the first four days after term. If the defendant obtain a judge's order for time to plead, either in the same or till the next term, the plaintiff, when the time is expired, may sign judgment for want of a plea, without giving a rule to plead d; or, if a rule has been already given, without giving a new rule e. But, in the Common Pleas, a summons for further time to plead, not attended by the party taking it out, does not waive the necessity of a rule to plead on the essoin day; but such rule cannot be entered until the first day of term s: and Sunday is a day within this rule, unless it be the last h.

Anciently there were two rules given in the King's Bench, of four days each; the first ad respondendum, the second ad respondendum percuptorie. These were afterwards converted into one eight day rule i: but now, four days only are allowed the defendant, in either court, from the time of giving any rule to plead k; which four days expire before, with, or after the time for pleading. If they expire before, the plaintiff must wait till the expiration of the time for pleading, before ken sign judgment for want of a plea: but if they expire with or after that time, the plaintiff, in the King's Bench, is at liberty to sign his judgment, the day after the rule for pleading is out: the declaration having been regularly delivered or filed, and the defendant or his agent being called upon for a plea! In the Common Pleas, judgment cannot be signed, for want of a plea, till the opening of the office in the afternoon of the next day after the rule to plead m, or day given by a judge's order for time to plead n, has expired. But if a rule to plead expire on a dies non juridicus, as on the Purification, &c. the defendant is bound to plead on or before that day; and if he do not, judgment may be signed on the next day o. rule to plend is said to be a four day rule, inclusive, and judgment may be signed, for want of a plea, on the day after it expires

When a rule to plead has been once entered, and the cause stands over New role, when to another term, without any further proceeding, a new rule to plead should regularly be entered in that term, to entitle the plaintiff to sign judgment, unless a judge's order has been obtained for time to plead ; for judgments ought in general to be entered the same term in which rules are given c. But when the declaration is amended in the King's Bench, if a rule to plead be entered the same term the amendment is made, though a before such amendment, it is sufficient d; otherwise a new rule to plead must be entered c: And in the Common Pleas, we have seen f, the defendant is entitled in all cases, on amending the declaration, to a new four day rule to plead. When the plaintiff, after giving a rule to plead, has been delayed by injunction, he may sign judgment in either court, after the injunction is dissolved, without a new rule s.

The demand of plea is a notice in writing from the plaintiff's attorney h; and, except when the defendant is in custody of the sheriff'i, and the plaintiff has declared against him as being in that custody k, or is in custody of the warden of the Fleet, or bound down by a judge's order for time to plead m, or the declaration has been amended n, must be made in every case where the defendant has appeared o, or put in bail: And, in the Common Pleas, a demand of plea is necessary, after an appearance, though the defendant has not taken the declaration out of the office P. So, where a declaration was delivered on the essoin day of Hilary term, and an imparlance was given to the defendant till Easter term, when a rule to plead was given, but no demand of plea made, the court of Common Pleas held, that the plaintiff, having signed judgment in Trinity term for want of a plea, was irregular, and set aside the proceedings q. In country In country causes, the demand of plea must be made, in that court, on the agent in town r, if there be one; or if not, on the attorney in the country s: And where the defendant was beyond the seas, and his attorney dead, a rule was made absolute, that a demand of plea in the office should be sufficient; upon affidavit of service of a rule to shew cause on one of the defendant's bail, and that the other was not to be found t.

Want of, when and how waived.

When a waiver of justification of bail, and when not.

In the King's Bench, a demand of plea may be made at the time of delivering the declaration , and indersed thereon b: And where a rule to plead has been given, and demand of plea made, and judgment is signed of a subsequent term, there need not be a fresh demand of plea of that term, although there should be a new rule to plead . But, in the Common Pleas, a demand of plea must be made after declaration delivered, and rule to plead given; a demand of plea indorsed on the declaration d, or made before the rule to plead is given, being deemed insufficient: And it cannot be made, in either court, before the defendant has appeared f: and after the plaintiff has entered an appearance, or filed common bail for him according to the statute s, or when the defendant is in custody of the sheriff h, and the plaintiff has declared against him as being in that custody i, or is in custody of the warden k, or bound down by a judge's order for time to plead, or the declaration has been amended, a demand of plea is unnecessary. So, when the defendant pleads, without taking the declaration out of the office n, or puts in a plea which is considered as a nullity o, as a plea in abatement of a term subsequent to the declaration, without an imparlance p, or the plea of non assumpsit in an action of debt q, or nil debet in assumpsit, it operates in general as a waiver of the irregularity in not demanding a plea, and will enable the plaintiff to sign judgment for want of it. But where such a plea was put in without authority, by a new attorney for the defendant, without any order for changing his former attorney, the judgment which had been signed as for want of a plea, was set aside *. In general, the demand of a plea is a waiver of the justification of bail t: but where, after the time for putting in and justifying bail had expired, (one of the bail having been rejected,) time was given to add and justify another bail, without prejudice to the plaintiff, and in the interval he demanded a plea; the court of King's Bench held, that an attachment against the sheriff for not bringing in the body was regular, the added bail not having justified within the time for which indulgence was given ".

The plaintiff, in the King's Bench, cannot sign judgment for want of a plea, till the expiration of twenty four hours after it has been demanded, whether the time for pleading be or be not expired, when such demand was made a: And, in that court, if a plea be demanded on Saturday, the defendant has twenty four hours to plead, after the demand, exclusive of Sunday b. ## CHAP. XIX.

Of Motions and Rules in general, and Affidavits in support of them; and the Practice of the Courts thereon, and by Summons and Order, at a Judge's CHAMBERS.

. Motions, and rules, &c.

AS it is frequently necessary, in the course of a suit, to apply to the court where the action is depending, or indge of that court, it may be proper, before we proceed further, to say somewhat of the manner of doing it; and of the rules or orders of the courts, and practice by summons and order at a judge's chambers.

Motion, what. Rules, moved for in court.

Absolute, or to shew cause.

The usual modes of applying to the court are by motion, or petition. A motion is an application to the court, by counsel in the King's Bench, or a scrieant in the Common Pleas, for a rule or order; which is either granted or refused; and if granted, is either a rule absolute in the first instance, or only to shew cause, or, as it is commonly called, a rule nisi, that is, unless cause be shewn to the contrary, which is afterwards, on a subsequent motion, made absolute or discharged. To use the words of an elegant writer on the law and constitution of England 2: "The application to a court by counsel is called a motion; and the order made by a court on any motion, when drawn into form by the officer, is called a rule." But, besides the rules which are moved for in court, there are others made out by the officers as a matter of course, or drawn up on a motion paper signed by a counsel or serjeant.

Made out by officers, of course.

On crown side, in K. B. In C. P. and Exchequer. For attachment.

Against parties to suit.

Attornies.

In the King's Bench, motions and rules are either on the crown side, or on the plea side of the court. In the Common Pleas and Exchequer, there is no crown side b. But, in any of these courts, a rule for an attachment, which is of a criminal nature, may be moved for in the following cases: First, against the parties to the suit, for disobedience to a rule or order of the court, by non-payment of costs, on the master's or prothonotary's allocature, or of money generally, or money and costs; or for not producing deeds in his possession d, &c.: Secondly, against attornies, for not delivering up deeds e, or non-payment of costs e, &c.; or for not performing their Officers of court. undertakings , or otherwise misbehaving themselves 5: Thirdly, against apply to the court, on an affidavit of the circumstances, for a rule for an attachment; which is either absolute in the first instance, or only to show cause. The rule for an attachment, in the King's Bench, for non-payment of costs, pursuant to the master's allocatur, is absolute in the first instance, although four terms have elapsed since the taxation , unless it be for nonpayment of costs pursuant to an award b: But where it is for the non-payment of money generally, or of money and costs, it is only to shew causec: And; if a party obtain a rule for setting aside judgment and execution, on condition of his paying costs, the court will not grant an attachment in the first instance, for non-payment of them d. In this court, as well as in the Common Pleas, the rule for an attachment against the sheriff, for not returning the writ, or bringing in the body, is absolute in the first instance; and may be moved for the last day of term . So, where contemptuous words are spoken of the court, the attachment issues in the first instance; but where they are spoken of its process, the rule is only to shew cause f. In all other cases, the rule for an attachment is a rule nisi, in the King's Bench. And where a matter has been referred to the master, the court, on shewing cause against an attachment, will not go into the accounts which were the subject of the reference; the master's allocatur being in the nature of a judgment, and the attachment like a writ of execution s: and besides, the party, on going before the master, enters into an undertaking to pay such sum as he shall find to be due h. An affidavit to support a rule for an attachment, for not paying money pursuant to the master's allocatur, must shew that at the time of serving the copy, the original was shewn to the defendant i. In the Common Pleas, all rules for attachments are rules nisi, except against the sheriff, for not returning the writ, or bringing in the body, or for non-payment of costs on the prothonotary's allocatur k, which are absolute in the first instance. In the Exchequer, as in the King's Bench, the rule for an attachment for non-payment of costs, on the master's allocatur, is absolute in the first instance, unless it be for non-payment of costs pursuant to an award 1: And though, in other cases, there should in general be a rule to shew cause, yet where an attorney had been ordered, by a former rule, to pay a sum of money to his client, with the costs of the application, the court granted a rule for an attachment against him, for non-payment of them, absolute in the first instance m.

When a plaintiff is brought in on an attachment for a rescue, in the King's Bench, it is the practice of the court to put interrogatories to him, though he do not deny the charge in the affidavits, unless the prosecutor waive putting them b. And, by a rule of that court c, "if judgment be not given the same term, the name of the cause shall be inserted in the list of motions, appointed to come on peremptorily in the ensuing term, in order that the court may be informed what shall have been done in presecution of the attachment."

If the party neglect to appear before the master or secondary, to be examined, or to attend the court when he is directed to come, the court will order his recognizance to be estreated: and if he confess any thing material in his depositions, there is no occasion for witnesses, but the prosecutor may move on his confession d: If he deny part of the contempts only, and confess other part, he shall not be discharged as to those denied, but the truth of them shall be examined, and such punishment inflicted as upon the whole shall appear remanable; and if his answer be evasive as to any material part, he shall be punished in the same manner as if he had confessed it. The report of the master of the crown office, that the defendant and his attorney are in contempt, for not performing an award, &c. is to be taken as a conviction; and on their being brought up for judgment, the court will not receive affidavits in denial of the contempt, but only in mitigation of punishment. But, in the Common Pleas, the prothonotary's report is not deemed conclusive, against parties who have been put to answer interrogatories before him; but they may except to the report, on any material point f: And where, after making his report against the parties, the sprothonotary was directed to inspect an account book belonging to one of them, which tended to support the answers given by the parties, but had been accidentally omitted in the first instance, the prosecutor was not allowed, on his own application, to produce before the prothonotary, the clerk who had made the entries in the book f.

Side-bar rule in K. B.

In C. P.

Side-bar rules, in the King's Bench, are for the sheriff to return the writ , or bring in the body b; for the marshal to acknowledge the defendant in his custody c; for time, or further time, to declare d; to discontinue the action, upon payment of costs e; to be present at taxing costs. ; or for a scire facias to revive a judgment above seven, and under ten years old s. In the Common Pleas, side-bar or treasury rules are, in addition to those enumerated in the King's Bench, to take a bill against an attorney off the file; to bring money into court, if under five pounds h; to enter the issue i; for costs, for not proceeding to trial or inquiry, pursuant to notice k; for leave to enter up judgment on a warrant of attorney, above one and under ten years old1; to return a writ of false judgment m, or assign errors thereon m; and the common consent rule in ejectment n. Side-bar or treasury rules may be had as a matter of course, by applying for them at the office of the clerk of the rules in the King's Bench, or secondaines in the Common Pleas. The last day of term is said not to be a day for side-bar rules in the former court; but if the party was entitled to such a rule before, he may take it out on the last day of term, or in vacation, dated as of the last day but one. A rule, however, calling on the sheriff to return a writ, issued in vacation, though tested in term time, is irregular; and an attachment grounded upon it will be set aside by the court on motion o.

Not necessarily connected with any suit. There are other motions and rules, not necessarily connected with any suit; such as to set aside an annuity, and deliver up the securities to be cancelled, &c.; to strike an attorney off the roll, for misconduct i, or, at his own instance, when there is no complaint against him k; to re-admit an attorney, who has neglected to take out his certificate for more than a year, on payment of the arrears of stamp duty l, &c.; or to make a submission to arbitration, by bond or agreement, a rule of court m. The rule for striking an attorney off the roll at his own instance, or for making a submission to arbitration a rule of court, is drawn up on the signature of counsel, in the King's Bench; but, in the Common Pleas, it is moved for in court, and absolute in the first instance. In the other cases, the rule is only to shew cause.

Rules, it has been said, are not records; but only remembrances, not entered on the rolls of the court. A rule or order drawn up by an officer of a court of justice, and purporting to be the rule or order of the court, is so considered, until amended or set aside. And if a rule of court be produced under the hand of the proper officer, there is no need to prove it to be a true copy, because it is as an original q. The statute 14 Geo. Such attendances, however, have been taken into consideration, when motions, of which several notices had been given, have been at length brought on; and the court have, in certain cases, after the motions have been disposed of, exercised a discretionary power, in giving directions respecting the costs f.

Affidavits are in general sworn in court, or before a judge or baron of the court, where the action is brought; or before a commissioner authorized to take affidavits, by virtue of the statute 29 Car. Affidavits may be considered with reference to their title, contents, jurat, stamp, and filing, &c.: The title also may be considered, as it respects the court, or the names of the parties. All affidavits should regularly be entitled in the court where they are made, or intended to be used; and in the King's Bench, we have seen a, if they be not so entitled, but only subscribed with the words, "By the Court," at the bottom of the jurat, they are not sufficient to entitle the party to read them; nor can they be read, if sworn before a commissioner, without stating him to be a commissioner of this court, unless they are so entitled b. And, in the Common Pleas, a rule nisi was discharged, because the affidavit on which it was obtained, was not entitled in any court, although it appeared from the jurat, that it was sworn before one of the judges of this court c. But affidavits sworn before a judge of the court of King's Bench, though not entitled therein, may it seems be read a: And, in the Common Pleas, an affidavit entitled "In the Common Place," has been deemed sufficient c.

appearance. The affidavits on a motion for leave to file a criminal information, in the King's Bench, ought not to be entitled; and if they are, cannot be read: The affidavits produced on shewing cause may , or may not b, be entitled: but all affidavits made after the rule is absolute, must be entitled '. So, where a submission to an award is made a rule of court under the statute, there being no action, the affidavits on which to apply for an attachment, for disobeying the award, need not be entitled in any cause; but the affidavits in answer must d. In entering up judgment on an old warrant of attorney, the affidavit may be properly entitled in a cause e: And, in moving to stay proceedings on a bail bond, the affidavit on which the motion is made, is to be entitled in the original action, and not in the actions against the bail f. Motions and affidavits for attachments in civil suits are, we have seen g, in the King's Bench, proceedings on the plca side of the court, until the attachments are granted, and are to be entitled with the names of the parties h; but as soon as the attachments are granted, the proceedings are on the crown side, and from that time the king is to be named as the prosecutor: And motions and affidavits for attachments are entitled in like manner, in the Common Pleas i, and Exchequer. On moving for a rule nisi for a certiorari, it is, we have seen k, irregular to entitle the affidavits in any cause; and if they are entitled, they cannot be read 1.

In point of form, affidavits begin with stating the names, and places of Form of abode, of the persons by whom they are made: And, in the King's Bench, it is a rule m, that "the addition of every person making the affidavit, should be inserted therein;" but there is no such rule in the Common Pleas: and, in the latter court, it is not necessary that an affidavit, made by the defendant in the cause, stating his name and place of abode, and styling him defendant, should also contain the addition of his degree n. The affidavits should contain a full statement of the circumstances necessary to support the application o; and the rather, as it is a rule not to receive Supplementary. supplementary affidavits, on shewing cause, without leave of the court p: But there is said to be a diversity between affidavits which contain new matter, and such as tend only to confirm what was alleged and sworn when the rule was made; in the latter case, it seems they may be read, but not in the former q. #### OF MOTIONS AND MULES, &c.

clear. And when notice of motion has been given, it should be sworn that it was duly served b.

Must not, in general, be sworn before attorney in cause.

By the general practice of all the courts, affidavits sworn before the attorney or solicitor in the cause, cannot be read c. And this practice extends to affidavits taken before attornics, as commissioners, in causes wherein they are concerned for the parties on whose behalf such affidavits are made; except where they are made for the purpose of holding the defendant to special bail d, or entering an appearance in the Common Pleas e: and that court will discharge, with costs, a rule obtained by a party on affidavits, which are sworn before his own attorney in the cause f. It is also a rule in the Common Pleas s, that "when the acknowledgments of any person or persons levying fines, or suffering recoveries, shall be taken before commissioners, one at least of the commissioners for taking the acknowledgment of any party to such fine or recovery, shall be a person who is not concerned as the attorney solicitor or agent, or clerk to the attorney solicitor or upent, of any party thereto; and that in the affidavit to be made of the due taking of such acknowledgment, it shall be deposed, in addition to the facts now required, by the rules of the court, to be included in such affidavit, that one at least of the commissioners taking such acknowledgment, is not the attorney solicitor or agent, or clerk to the attorney solicitor or agent, of any of the parties to the fine or recovery, for taking the acknowledgment to which the commission, under which he has acted, has been issued; and the name and residence of such commissioner shall be stated in such affidavit." But the rule which prohibits the swearing of affidavits before the attorney or solicitor in the cause, does not extend to the attorney's clerk; and therefore an affidavit may be taken before a clerk of the attorney in the cause, if such clerk be empowered to take affidavits h. So, in the Common Pleas, if the agent in town be the attorney on record, it is no objection to an affidavit of the party, that it is sworn before his own attorney in the country i.

Exceptions to this rule.

The jurat of affidavits should state where, when, and before whom they are sworn k: as that they are sworn in court, when there made; or, if the court be not mentioned at the top of the affidavit, "in the court of King's Bench, Common Pleas, or Exchequer, at Westminster Hall';" or, if made before a judge or baron, that they are sworn at his chambers, or house, describing the situation "; or, if made before a commissioner, at the place of an affidavit, may be an objection to its being received in the caust where rules have not been complied with, yet still it seems that perjury may be assigned upon it :: And on an indictment for perjury, in an answer to a bill in Chancery, it was holden, that the recital in the jurat, of the place where the answer purported to be sworn, was sufficient evidence that the oath was administered at the place named b.

Stamp duty, formerly payable on affidevits, and decisions thereon.

By the general stamp acts ; "every affidavit, to be filed read or used in any of the courts of law or equity at Westminster, or of the Great Sessions in Wales, or of the counties palatine of Chester, Lancaster, and Durkam, or before any judge or master, or other officer of any of the said courts, &c. and the copy of every such affidavit, was formerly subject to the stamp duty of half a crown." In the construction of these acts it was holden, that an affidavit made in the same cause, and relating to the same subject matter, only required one stamp, though it were made by several persons: And, in the King's Bench, an affidavit with a single stamp, was deemed sufficient to found several rules, on a quo warranto prosecution d. But in general, an affidavit that related to several causes, must have had as many stamps as there were cases to which it applied: And, in the Common Pleas, where the affidavits in four causes were each of them entitled in all the four, but there was only one stamp on each affidavit, and an objection was taken on this account, the court held the objection fatal; but allowed the counsel to amend, by striking out three of the names, and reswearing the affidavits in the fourth cause, which made them good affidavits in that cause f. In like manner, two separate affidavits required separate stamps, though they were contained on the same papers. And, on shewing cause against a rule which had been previously before a judge at chambers, the same affidavits could not be used, unless they had been restamped h. The stamp duty, however, on affidavits, and copies thereof, was abolished by the statute 5 Geo. IV. c. 41.

And when an athdavit has been read and filed, it becomes a record of the court, and cannot be taken off the file g. In the Exchequer, it is a rule h, that "all In Exchequer. affidavits, to be used on any special application to the court, be filed one clear day before the application is made; and that where a notice of motion is necessary to be given, the filing of any affidavit, in support of the application, be also mentioned at the foot of the notice, to enable the opposite parties to obtain a copy therefrom h:" But this rule does not extend to the filing of affidavits of mere service of notice of motion h. It is also a Must be exarule, in the Exchequer, that "no office copy of any affidavit filed in this signed. court, be received and read, unless such office copy shall have been previously examined, and signed by the attorney or clerk in court making the same, or his accredited agent i."

Side-bar rules, in K. B.

For prohibition.

Criminal information.

In C. P.

The last day of term is said not to be a day for side-bar rules, in the King's Bench; though it seems to be otherwise in the Common Pleas: and, in the King's Bench, if the party was entitled to such a rule before, he may take it out on the last day of term, dated as of the preceding day. A prohibition is not in general grantable the last day of term: but a rule may be obtained on motion, to stay proceedings till the ensuing term, and in one instance it was granted on motion the last day of term, leave having been obtained the day before, to move it then. A rule nisi for a criminal information against a magistrate, for misconduct in the execution of his office, ought in general to be moved for within the first term after the supposed offence; and it may be granted at the end of a term, against a magistrate for mal-practices during the term m: or, where no assizes have intervened, it may be moved for in the second term n: though it cannot be moved for so late in that term, as to preclude the magistrate from the opportunity of shewing cause against it the same term.

In the Common Pleas, we have seen p, that upon writs of distringas, returnable the last day of term, the plaintiff might formerly have moved, at the rising of the court, to increase issues on the alias or pluries distringas, to be issued in case of non-appearance, on the following day; or for a sale of the issues, to pay the costs of the writs; or, when a rule to bring in the body expired on the last day of term, for an attachment for not bringing it in, to be issued on the following day, provided bail should not then be perfected, or the defendant rendered in their discharge. But in that court, no motion for an attachment can be made on the last day of term, except for non-payment of costs on the prothonotary's allocatur, or against the sheriff q, for not returning the writ or bringing in the body; nor can a motion be made on that day, for a rule nisi to change the venue,

How served, in K. B. & C. P.

To bring a party into contempt, a copy of the rule must be personally served, and the original at the same time shown to him d. And the court of King's Bench will not grant a rule to dispense with personal service of the master's allocatur for costs, with a view to an attachment, on an affidavit that the defendant keeps out of the way, to avoid being served. In other cases, the same degree of strictness is not required in the service of the rule; but it is sufficient to leave a copy of it with the person representing the party, at his dwelling house or place of abode f: And, in the King's french, it does not seem to be necessary to shew the original at the time of service , but, in the Common Pleas, it seems that in order to make a perfect service of a rule, the original rule must be sworn to have been shewn to the party, at the time of serving the copy h. It is not the practice however, to serve' enlarged rules; because both parties are before the court i: And where the party appears, it cures all irregularity in the service of the rule k. In the Exchequer, all notices must be given and received in the names of the clerks in court 1. When a rule is obtained, to set aside proceedings for irregularity, and to stay proceedings in the mean time, the proceedings are suspended for all purposes, till the rule is discharged m: Therefore, where the plaintiff took an assignment of the buil-bond, pending a rule to shew cause why it should not be given up to be cancelled, on the defendant's filing common bail, the court of King's Bench set aside the assignment, as having been made too soon. when a defendant obtains a rule which stays the plaintiff's proceedings, he is not, we have seeu ", entitled, after it is discharged, to the same time, for taking the next step, as he had when he obtained the rule; though the defendant in such case should have a reasonable time allowed him, for the purpose of taking his next proceeding: and the whole of the day on which the rule is disposed of, has been deemed such a reasonable time. are performed, the proceedings stand, and the plaintiff may pursue them, without applying to the court a.

On the day appointed for that purpose, the party called upon by the rule b, or his counsel, may shew cause against it, either upon or without an affidavit, as circumstances require: And, in shewing cause against a rule, the party or his counsel must be prepared with affidavits in support of his whole case; and cannot, after shewing cause, come on another day in the same term, with better affidavits. It is also necessary, that an office copy should be taken of the rule, before cause is shewn, and of the affidavit vit. upon which it was granted d; otherwise counsel cannot be heard: And, in the King's Bench, when a special time is limited in any rule, before which any affidavit is required to be filed, no affidavit filed after that time can be made use of in court, or before the master, unless it appear to the satisfaction of the court, that the filing of such affidavit within the time limited, was prevented by inevitable accident c. In such case a motion should regularly be made, on the day limited by the rule, that the affidavits may be filed nunc pro tunc f. But affidavits which ought to have been filed a week before the term, may, under particular circumstances, be read, with leave of the court, though filed only three days before the day of shewing cause g: And when no particular time is prescribed for filing the affidavits, they may be sworn and filed at any time before shewing cause, though after the day appointed by the rule h. Previous to shewing cause, it is usual to deliver over the affidavit to the counsel for the rule, who has a right to make any objection appearing on the face of it; and if a doubt arise, upon the statement of the facts contained in the affidavit, it is inspected by the judges, or read by the officer of the court.

If cause be not shewn on the day appointed, the counsel for the party Making rule obtaining the rule may move, the next day, to make it absolute i; which is done as a matter of course, if no cause be shewn, on an allidavit of service k. So, in the Common Pleas, if a rule be drawn up for a certain In C. P. day, the plaintiff has till the last moment of that day to shew cause, so that it cannot be made absolute till the next day 1. And, in the latter court, it seems that cause cannot be shown after the day appointed by the rule; but the party called upon must wait until the other party move to make it absolute, unless notice of shewing cause on a different day be previously given in. cessary to give the opposite party notice of an application intended to be made, to discharge a rule nisi, for payment of costs for not proceeding to trial. But the matter frequently stands over, by consent of parties, or for the accommodation of counsel, till a subsequent day; when the counsel on either side may bring it on, by moving to make the rule absolute, or discharge it: though if not brought on or enlarged during the same term, it is of no effect, unless revived, as it may be, in any future term, upon being served anew, and motion made to revive it: This is sometimes done, to save the expense of new affidavits, and obviate the objection of its being a second attempt after the first was abandoned. And if a rule misi has been discharged, in consequence of a mistake of counsel, in stating the terms of the affidavits on which it was founded, the case may be reheard in a subsequent term b. After the determination of the court of King's Bench, upon a rule nisi for a mandamus, the question decided cannot be again discussed, as a special case, until a return be made to the writ c.

Enlarging.

When the cansel for the party obtaining the rule is not ready to support it, he may move to enlarge the rule till a future day, in the same or the next term; which is pretty much of course, when it is in his own delay; but otherwise the courts will not enlarge the rule without consent, or some evident necessity: and they will never enlarge the plaintiff's rule, when it would have the effect of continuing the defendant in custody. In like manner, when the counsel for the party called upon by the rule is not prepared to shew cause against it, he may apply to enlarge the rule till a future day; which is a matter of right, if the rule was not served in time, so as to give the party an opportunity of answering it d; but otherwise the courts may impose upon him what terms they think proper: and if the rule be enlarged to the next term, they commonly require him to file his affidavits a certain number of days before the term, so as to give the adverse party an opportunity of inspecting them; in which case, however, the party shewing cause need not confine himself to the original affidavits, but is at liberty to read any affidavits made since the term, provided they were filed in time e. In cases of executions, and other matters requiring an early decision, the courts, towards the end of the term, will sometimes enlarge the rule till a day in vacation, when it is to be brought on before a judge at chambers. But rules for judgment as in case of a nonsuit in country causes, should be applied for early in an issuable term, in order that the plaintiff may have sufficient time to shew cause in the same term; or the court will enlarge the rule till the next term, and not permit the parties to discuss it at chambers f: And the court will not, at the close of the term, grant a rule nisi, to shew cause at chambers, when the party could have come earlier g. no rule for shewing cause, unless notice be given of motion to enlarge such rule, and affidavit made of such notice 2: And in that court, if a rule be enlarged, it may be made absolute at any time on the last day to which it is enlarged b. In the Exchequer, upon an enlarged rule, the affidavits must be filed before shewing cause, although it be not so expressed in the rule of enlargement c.

On shewing cause against the rule, the courts either make it absolute, or discharge it; and that, either with, or without the costs of the application, or such costs are directed to abide the event of the suit. But, in On refusal of the Common Pleas, costs cannot it seems be given, on refusal of a rule to show cause d. When the proceedings are regular, and the application is made to the favour and indulgence of the courts, the rule to shew cause is commonly made absolute, on payment of costs by the party applying; but when the proceedings are irregular, it is in general made absolute, with costs to be paid by the opposite party e, unless the rule be opposed in the first instance f: And when a rule for setting aside the proceedings is drawn up with costs, (as is commonly the case,) if it be made absolute generally, the party obtaining it is entitled, by the terms of the rule, to the payment of costs, which the master or prothonotaries will tax; and if they are not paid on demand, the courts on motion will grant an attach-But if a rule nisi be granted for setting aside proceedings for irregularity, without saying with costs, and this rule be afterwards made absolute, no cause being shewn, it must be made absolute in the terms in which it was moved, without adding costs g. And though the rule be drawn up with costs, yet the courts will sometimes, though rarely, make it absolute without costs h, in which case each party pays his own; or they will direct the costs to abide the event of the suit, in which case the party ultimately succeeding is entitled to them: And whenever a rule is drawn up with costs, and the courts do not mean the party should have them, they will mention it. In the Exchequer, it has been ruled, that if a party In Exchequer. have good ground for opposing a motion, he may be entitled to the costs of opposing it, notwithstanding the motion has been granted i.

If, upon shewing cause, it appear that there was no ground or founda- On discharging tion for the rule, the courts will discharge it, with costs to be paid by the party applying; and it is a general rule, in the King's Bench, that in all cases where a rule is obtained to shew cause, why proceedings should not be set aside for irregularity with costs, and such rule is afterwards discharged generally, without any special direction upon the matter of costs, it is understood to be discharged with costs, and the latter rule must be drawn up accordingly k. setting aside proceedings for irregularity, with costs, but was written in a cramped and slevenly hand, the court, on that ground refused to grant the costs of the application a. And if there was any ground for the rule, and it is not drawn up with costs; the courts will in general discharge it without costs b; or they will sometimes order the costs to abide the event of the suit: And where nothing is said about costs in the rule, or by the courts on making it absolute, or discharging it, they are considered as costs in the cause, and must be paid to the party ultimately succeeding, if the rule be made before judgment '; but if it be not made till afterwards, they depend entirely on the rule; and if nothing be said therein concerning them, each party will have to pay his own costs. If a party obtain a rule to shew cause, requiring two things with costs, although he be clearly entitled to one, yet if he fail as to the other, he shall not have costs; for the adverse party was under the necessity of coming into court to resist the latter.

Setting down , causes for argument, in C. P.

In the hing's Beach, particular days are appointed for certain business; as Tuesday and Friday, which are called paper days, for going through the paper of causes, wherein conciliums have been moved for, on the plea side, and Wednesday and Saturday, for transacting business on the crown side. All motions or rules in matters of length or consequence, are appointed for certain days, and called on first d: And special cases from the assizes should regularly be set down for argument, within the first four days of the following term e. But no cause can be set down for argument on the first paper day, or on the four last days of business in term: Yet, upon the day which would otherwise be the last paper day, common things may be set down, unless it be the last day of term. Special causes are to be entered for argument with the clerk of the papers, at least four days exclusive before the day of argument ; of which notice should be forthwith given to the attorney or agent on the other side: and all such causes must be argued in the order they are entered, and not adjourned to any future day, by consent or otherwise; unless the court shall for reasonable cause, verified by affidavit, upon application made by either of the parties, their attorney or agent, at least two days before the day of argument, otherwise order g. The paper books, in causes entered with the clerk of the papers for argument on Tuesday, must be delivered to the chief justice and the rest of the judges, on the Saturday preceding; and those entered for argument on Friday, must be so delivered on the Tuesday preceding b.

aries, within the first four days of the term, as a matter of course; but it cannot be set down afterwards, without a special application to the court: And it is a rule in that court, that no cause be put in the book to be argued, after the last day of arguments, unless the court be thereupon moved, and shall order it a. Also, by a rule of the same court b, "all special arguments on demurrers, and other special arguments, are to be heard on the day next before the sitting day at nisi prius in Middlesex, and the day next after the sitting day at nisi prius in London, and on no other days:" and no argument is allowed on the first four, or last four days of the term . All special cases for argument must in this court be set down with the secondaries, four days exclusive before the day of argument; which is done on producing the case, signed by a serjeant on each side, with a motion paper for a concilium; and the rule is drawn up, and cause set down at the same time. Demurrers are set down in like manner, on producing the entry on the roll; and such as are not intended to be argued may be set down of course, for any day except the first four and last four days of term; but if there be not four days between the day of setting them down and the day of argument, the court must be applied to for leave, which is always given, if it be a demurrer merely for delay, and not intended for argument; and they may even be set down for the last day of term d. The paper books in this court are required to be delivered to Delivery of the lord chief justice, and the other judges, two days (exclusive of the day of such delivery,) before the day on which the causes shall have been set down for argument c: And, in both courts, the exceptions intended to he insisted upon in argument, should be marked in the margin . In the Days for parti-Exchequer, the court formerly never sat on the plea side on Mondays and Thursdays; because on those days, until a late act of parliaments, for enabling the Lord Chief Baron for the time being to sit alone in equity, the whole court always sat in the Exchequer chamber, hearing causes in equity h. Since that time, the three puisac Barons sit regularly on those days, as well for the dispatch of the ordinary business on the plea side of the court, as for hearing motions in equity, unconnected with causes pending before the Lord Chief Baron h. and must be heard upon the respective days for which they are made peremptory, unless special ground, by affidavit or otherwise, he shewn to the court, for postponing such rules. And for enforcing this practice, it is ordered, that "no rules in causes entered in the peremptory paper be enlarged during the term, or put off from the appointed day, by consent of counsel, or the attornies concerned therein, without previous application to, and special leave of the court "." In the Common Pleas, enlarged rules are set down in the peremptory or remanet paper, for each of the first four days of the term, and called on after the common motions are disposed of. All rules for new trials, which stand over, are set down in the same paper, and proceeded in at the pleasure of the court: And such matters as have been argued, and in which the court have not given judgment, are likewise set down in the peremptory paper.

If a rule be drawn up wrong by mistake, the courts will order it to be set right; or it may be discharged, on terms c; or if made absolute or discharged by surprise, or in consequence of a mistake of counsel, In stating the terms of the affidavits on which it was founded d, the courts will open it. But, in the King's Bench, if any cause shall have been moved in court, in the presence of the counsel of both parties, and the court shall have thereupon made a rule between them, the same shall not be again moved contrary to such rule, under peril of an attachment e: And the court of Common Pleas will not open the rule for an attachment, on the mere affidavit of the party, that he has not been served; at least, unless he show some mistake in the service f: nor will they rescind a rule, on the ground that, at the time of discussion, the parties omitted to present to the notice of the court, a statute which might have affected its decision s. In the Exchequer, where a rule nisi for a new trial having been peremptorily fixed for a day in the third term inclusive after being granted, and not having been then supported, was discharged, the court refused to open it in the ensuing term, on the suggestion that instructions had been prepared, and intended to be delivered to counsel, in the preceding term h: And if that court open a rule, made absolute on the usual affidavit of service, to give the party an opportunity of shewing cause, they will not hear affidavits, sworn after the day on which the rule had been made absolute i.

In hearing motions, the course formerly observed in the King's Bench was, to begin every day with the senior counsel within the bar, and then to call to the next senior in order, and so on, as long as it was convenient to the court to sit; and to proceed again, in the same manner, upon the next and every subsequent day, although the bar had not been half, or perhaps a quarter gone through, upon any one of the former days; so that the juniors were very often obliged to attend in vain, without being able to bring on their motions, for many successive days. This practice bearing hard upon junior counsel, Lord Mansfield introduced a different rule, which has ever since been adhered to, of going quite through the bar, even to the youngest counsel, before he would begin again with the seniors; though it should happen to take up two or more days, before all the motions which were ready at the bar upon the first day, could be heard b. The same course is observed in the Common Pleas; where In C. P. they begin with the king's senior scrjeant, and go regularly through the bar, before they begin again. So, where a case is sent out of Chancery, for the opinion of the court of Common Pleas, they will only hear one counsel for each separate interest; though the parties who have a common interest, be placed adversely to each other in the suit f. d In Huary term 1823, the chief justice intimated to the bar of the court of King's Bench, that as it was of high importance to the public, and to the suitors in the particular causes in which rules nisi for new trials had been granted, that those rules should be disposed of during the term, or so soon after as possible, the court would wish to hear only one counsel on each side: They therefore requested, that the juniors in each case, would not address them, after their senior had been heard, unless they felt that he had omitted some important fact, or some material argument, which ought to have been presented to the attention of the court. They did not however, mean to lay down a rigid rule, that they would hear only one counsel on each side, which might be productive of inconvenience; but they trusted to the discretion of the bar, not to occupy their time, by going severally through the whole case, where it was not absolutely necessary to the interests of their client. A similar regulation was stated to have been made before, in the time of lord Ellenborough, when there was an arrear of rules for new trials; which regulation had for some time been rigidly observed, but it was understood that it would not be perma-

When he is brought up on a judgment by default, the prosecutor's affidavits are first read, and then the defendant's affidavits; after which the prosecutor's counsel are first heard, and then the defendant's counsel. Moving for ar-

Box money.

After a special argument on a concilium, it is usual for the courts to call upon each of the counsel or serjeants concerned, to make a motion; which is called moving for their argument: but it seems that, in the King's Bench, it is not the practice to call upon the counsel to move for their argument as a matter of course, though it is said to be otherwise in the Common Pleas g. And where it was moved, in the latter court, for leave to justify bail, after two serjeants had moved for their arguments, the court would not receive this motion, till the paper was gone through h. On motions for judgment without argument, on paper days in the King's Bench, one shilling is paid for each motion, by the counsel making it, to the box; which is called box money, or high bar money, and paid by the secondary on the plea side, into the hands of the clerk of the junior ladge, in order to be by him paid over to the judges of the court in equal shares, to be disposed of by them for such charitable purposes, as they in their counsel; and they will not, on any occasion, permit the case to be opened again, for the purpose of giving the counsel who may have been absent, an opportunity of arguing it: the necessary attendance of counsel in another court, not being considered to be a sufficient reason for their being absent from this court, on the day appointed for an argument here f.

In the Common Pleas, there are no payments of this nature: but, on entering satisfaction on the roll, it is usual for the plaintiff to pay one shilling for every hundred pounds recovered to the secondary, who pays it over to the junior judge's clerk, by whom it is distributed among the prisoners in the Fleet Prison.

Analogous to the proceedings in court, by motion and rule, is the prac- Practice by tice by summons and order at a judge's chambers, of which something has been already said in a preceding chapter m. This practice seems to have arisen, partly from the overflowing of the business of the courts in termtime, and partly from the necessity of certain proceedings being had in vacation, when the courts are not sitting: And although extremely burthensome to the judges, yet it manifestly tends to the advantage of the suitor, the case of the practitioner, and the general advancement of justice, by preventing the expense, trouble and delay, which would ensue, if an application to the courts were in all cases necessary.

It was formerly a rule, that " no attorney, or other person, should be Attendance at summoned to attend any justice of the King's Bench, nor any matters be bers, in term transacted before such justice at his chambers, or elsewhere out of court, during the sitting of the court at Westminster "." The order of a judge is sometimes absolute in the first instance; as to hold to bail d, to charge a person in custody on a criminal account with a civil action, or to docket a roll after the lapse of a year, &c. And where a rule is drawn up in term time, as a matter of course, on a motion paper signed by counsel, as to bring money into court, to change the venue, to plead several matters, or for a special jury, or view, &c. a judge's order may be had in the first instance, in the King's Bench, for the clerk of the rules to draw it up in vacation, on producing a motion paper so signed. So, in the Common Pleas, a judge's order may be obtained in the first instance, for the secondaries to draw up a rule in vacation, to bring money into court, or for a special jury, on producing a motion paper signed by a serjeant; for in these cases, a serjeant's hand would be sufficient in term time: but in the other cases, of changing the venue, &c. where an applicution must be made to the court in term, a summons must first be served in vacation, for the secondaries to be at liberty to draw up the rule. An order, however, is in general preceded by a summons, for the attendance

A judge's order for a stay of proceedings, must be drawn up and served Drawing up, forthwith; otherwise it will be considered as waived by the party, by whom it has been obtained e. The order obtained upon a summons is, however, subject to an appeal, and the validity of it may be impeached two ways; either by moving the court to set it aside f, or, if made in vacation, by applying, in the next term, to set aside the proceedings that have been had under it s. But if the order be acquiesced under, it is as If acquiesced valid as any act of the court h: And, in the King's Bench, a judge's order for a prisoner's discharge under the Lords' act, made out of term, has been held to be final i. # Of setting aside, and staying Proceedings.

General mode of defence.

HAVING stated, in the preceding chapters, the various modes of commencing actions, and the proceedings therein to the declaration, on behalf of the plaintiff, with the time allowed for pleading in ordinary cases, and whatever is peculiar to the proceedings in actions by or against attormies, and against prisoners in custody of the sheriff, &c. or of the marshal or warden; and having taken a view of the means of removing actions from inferior courts, and of motions and rules in general, and the practice by summons and order at a judge's chambers, I shall next proceed to shew what is to be done by the defendant, when an action is brought against him; and in so doing shall consider first, in what cases, and upon what grounds, he may move the courts to set aside or stay the proceedings: secondly, what steps are to be taken by him, when he has no merits; and thirdly, if he has, in what manner he should prepare for and make his defence to the action, which will lead on to the consideration of pleas and pleading, &c. Upon a review of which it will appear, that the defendant, according to the circumstances of his case, either applies to the equitable jurisdiction of the court by motion, or relies on his legal ground of defence, by pleading it.

Setting aside proceedings, for irregularity.

Irregularity, what.

In mesne process, &c.

In the defence of an action, one of the first things to be attended to, on the part of the defendant, is the regularity of the proceedings; for if they are irregular, the courts, on motion a, will set them aside.

An irregularity may be defined to be, the want of adherence to some prescribed rule or mode of proceeding; and it consists, either in omitting to do something that is necessary for the due and orderly conducting of a suit, or doing it in an unseasonable time, or improper manner. Thus, the want of notice is an irregularity, whether it be to process, upon a declaration, or of trial or inquiry: so, if the notice be not given in due time, or a proper manner. In general, an irregularity is either in mesne process, or the proceedings thereon before judgment, or in the judgment, or execution. If there be any irregularity in the process, or notice to appear thereto, or in the delivery, filing or notice of declaration, or notice of trial or inquiry, the defendant, we have seen b, may move the court, on a proper affidavit; to set aside the proceedings, and, if in custody, for his discharge on filing common bail, or entering a common appearance; or, if he has given bail to the sheriff, that the bail bond may be delivered up to be cancelled. A judgment by default is irregular, when the defendant, in an Judgment. action not bailable, has not been served with a copy of process, or there has been no declaration regularly delivered or filed, and notice thereof given to the defendant a; or when it is signed before the defendant's appearance, or without entering a rule to plead, or demanding a plea, when necessary; before the time for pleading is expired; or after a plea has been regularly delivered or filed b. And when an execution is irregular, the defendant may move to set it aside; and that he be discharged out of custody, or that the money levied may be restored to him c.

The application to set aside proceedings for irregularity, should be made Application to as early as possible, or, as it is commonly said, in the first instance d; and when there has been any irregularity, if the party overlook it, and take made. subsequent steps in the cause, he cannot afterwards revert back to the irregularity, and object to it . If there be any defect or irregularity therefore in mesne process, or the notice subscribed thereto, or in the service of process, the defendant should take advantage of it before he has appeared f: And if the irregularity be in the delivery, filing, or notice of declaration, the application should be made, if possible, two days at least before the time appointed for the execution of the writ of inquiry g. Ir- Waiver of irre regularity in the service of process, however, is waived by the defendant's attorney having written to the plaintiff's attorney, after the process was served, undertaking to appear, receive a declaration, and give security for costs h; or by the defendant's paying the debt and part of the costs i, or admitting the debt subsequently to the service of the writ, and requesting time for the payment of it k. And, by taking the declaration out of the office, or obtaining time to put in bail to the action, the defendant, we have seen, waives all objections to the regularity of the process; the intent of which is only to bring him into court. But this it seems is only a waiver of irregularities in the process, and not in the declaration m. Yet, where the plaintiff declared by the bye, before he had declared in chief, it was holden, that taking the declaration by the bye out of the office, was a waiver of the irregularity. So, where the declaration was delivered at the same time as a bill of particulars which was insufficient, and another order was afterwards obtained for better particulars, the court of Common Pleas held, that as the defendant's attorney had not returned the declaration, with the insufficient particulars, he had waived the irregularity b: And if the plaintiff take a plea out of the office, and keep it, he waives any objection to the plea, on the ground of its having been pleaded by a new attorney, without an order to change the former one c. In proceeding against prisoners, an irregularity, we have seen, may be waived by the defendant's pleading d, letting judgment go by default c, or suffering the plaintiff to charge him in execution f. But the giving of a bail bond g, or paying or giving security for the debt h, by a defendant under arrest, will not operate as a waiver of the irregularity: And where the defendants had appeared to a scire facias, after a rule nisi had been obtained for setting aside proceedings for irregularity, the court held, that the rule having been obtained the last day of term, which was no stay of proceedings, the defendants were obliged to appear, and therefore it was no waiver i. The defendant's pleading, however, to the scire facias, would in such case be a waiver of the irregularity k.

Motion to set aside proceedings, in K. B. In C. P.

In the King's Bench, it is a rule to refuse motions to set aside process for irregularity, even though no new step has been taken in the cause, unless the defendant make his application in a reasonable time 1. But, in the Common Pleas, a defendant may move to set it aside, at any time beforc a new step is taken in the cause m. And this was formerly considered as necessary; it being holden, that a defendant who complained of an irregularity in process, must, if he had an opportunity, have applied to set it aside, before the plaintiff had taken any further step<sup>n</sup>. But where the plaintiff having served an irregular process, the defendant gave him notice of the irregularity, and that if he proceeded thereon, the defendant would move to set aside the proceedings, this was deemed an exception to the ordinary rule o. And now, according to later decisions, the court of Common Pleas will not bind the defendant to any particular time for applying to set aside the proceedings; nor refuse the application, unless the party who has served the defective process take some step, by which he shews that he means to proceed upon it p; in which case, they expect the application to be made immediately p: Therefore, where a defendant has been served with notice of declaration, and interlocutory judgment signed, and notice given of executing a writ of inquiry, he is too late to take advantage of a defect in the process a. And though an appearance entered by the plaintiff, according to the statute, is not of itself sufficient, in the Common Plcas, to cure a mistake in the service of process b, yet if notice be afterwards given to the defendant, of the declaration being filed, he must apply to the court before judgment. In the Exchequer, the ap- In Exchequer. plication to set aside proceedings for irregularity, ought to be made in the first instance; and where the party cannot satisfactorily account for not applying sooner than he does, the court will not assist him d: and it is said to be a rule, that all motions to annul proceedings, on the ground of irregularity, should be made the same term with the proceedings complained of e. In disposing of a rule nisi, for setting aside all proceedings subsequent to the writ of quo minus, and service thereof, and staying all further proceedings, on payment of the debt, and costs of the writ and service, that court would not give an opinion on the alleged unreasonableness of an attorney's bill, stated as the sole ground for supporting the rule; that being a proper subject of reference to the master: nor would they make such reference a part of the order for discharging the original rule f.

There are some distinctions deserving notice, between a mere irregu- Distinction belarity, and a complete defect in the proceedings: The former may be waived by the adverse party, but not the latter g. For a mere irregularity in the copy h, or service i, of process, or in the declaration k, &c. the courts will only set aside the proceedings that are irregular, leaving the plaintiff at liberty to continue his suit from the last regular proceeding 1; but for a complete defect, the proceedings are stayed in toto m. brought or conducted upon insufficient grounds, contrary to good faith, or without proper authority: and in such cases, the courts on motion will order the proceedings to be stayed, with or without costs, according to circumstances.

When debt sucd for uppears to be under forty shillings.

When the debt sued for appears, on the face of the declaration , or is admitted by the plaintiff, or his attorney b, or proved by the affidavit of the defendant', to be under forty shillings, and the plaintiff may recover it in an inferior jurisdiction, the courts on motion will stay the proceedings; it being below their dignity to proceed in such an action. Formerly, when the plaintiff demanded more, the court of King's Bench would not have permitted an affidavit to be read, that the defendant owed him less d; or that the defendant had applied to the plaintiff for his demand, who sent him a bill for goods, to the amount of 1l. 18s.e: but the practice has been since altered as above, agreeably to the usage of the court of Exche-In the latter court however, on a motion to set aside proceedings as infra diguitation, on an affidavit that the debt sued for does not amount to 40s., the court will not inquire into the amount, if an affidavit be put in, on shewing cause, that the demand exceeded that sum; but will at once discharge the rule with costs f. And it should be observed, that an action cannot be brought in the county court, unless the cause of action arise, and the defendant reside, within the county g: Therefore, though the demand be for less than forty shillings, if the cause of action arise in one county, and the defendant reside in another, the action may be brought in a superior court g. In trover, the court of Common Pleas would not stay proceedings, on an affidavit from the defendant, that the cause of action did not amount to forty shillings; the amount of the value of the article sought to be recovered by such action, being mere matter of calculation, to be ascertained by a jury h. And where a defendant, living within the jurisdiction of the court of requests for Westminster, was sued in the King's Bench, for a debt under forty shillings, and neglected to take advantage of the statute 23 Geo. II. c. 27. by pleading it in bar, the court would not, after verdict for the plaintiff, either suffer a suggestion to be entered on the record, that the defendant lived within the jurisdiction, or stay the proceedings i. So, where a cause has been removed from an inferior court, this court will grant a procedendo, if the debt or damages appear to be under forty shillings k: But the court refused to quash a certiorari upon this ground, in an action for an assault brought against excise officers, who could not have had an impartial trial in the inferior court 1.

by stat. 21 Jac. I.

By the statute 21 Jac. I. c. 4. § 1. "all offences against any penal sta- In penal actions, tute, for which any common informer may lawfully ground any popular " action, bill, plaint, suit or information, before justices of assize, justices " of nisi prius or gaol delivery, justices of oyer and terminer, or justices " of peace in their general or quarter sessions, shall be commenced, sued, " prosecuted, tried, recovered and determined, by way of action, &c. be-" fore the justices of assize, &c. or before the justices of peace of every " county, city, borough, or town corporate, and liberty, having power to " inquire of, hear and determine the same, wherein such offences shall be " committed, in any of the courts, places of judicature, or liberties aforc-" said respectively only, at the choice of the parties which shall commence " suit, or prosecute for the same, and not elsewhere: with an exception " of certain offences, concerning popish recusancy, or for maintenance, " champerty, or buying of titles, &c.a" This statute has been construed to restrain the jurisdiction of the King's Bench, in actions of debt by common informers, in cases where the penalty may be sued for by action, bill, plaint, suit or information, either in the courts at Westminster, or at the assizes or sessions of the peace, as on the statute 5 Eliz. c. 4.: and they cannot in such cases bring debt upon the statute, in the King's Bench, unless the cause of action arise in Middlesex, where the court sits; but must prosecute by information, &c. before justices of assize, &c. as the statute directs b. So, an action to recover a penalty, under the statute 5 & 6 Edw. VI. c. 14. must be brought in the county where the fact was committed, and not commenced in the superior courts at Westminster c. But the statute 21 Jac. 1. c. 4. is confined to such statutes only as were in being at the time of making it, and does not extend to any offence created since that statute; so that prosecutions on subsequent penal statutes are not restrained thereby, but that statute is, as to them, as if it were repealed pro tanto d. It is also settled, that this statute does not give any new jurisdiction to the justices of assize, &c. where they had none before c: and therefore, where the penalty is to be recovered by action, &c. or information, either in the courts of record at Westminster only, or in the king's courts, wherein no essoign, protection, or wager of law shall be allowed, (which words are held to mean the courts at Westminster,) the statute 21 Jac. I. does not apply f; and a suit prosecuted at the assizes, &c. to recover such penalty is erroneous g. And, for the same reason, the statute only restrains the proceedings on penal statutes in the superior courts, where the informer, before the passing of that statute, might have sued in the inferior as well as the superior courts, by action, bill, plaint, suit, or information h. I. c. 4. where the justices of assize and superior courts at Westminster have a concurrent jurisdiction, both as to the subject matter and mode of proceeding a, the suit must be commenced before justices of assize, or at the sessions, and not before the justices at Westminster: For though the statute 21 Jac. I. gives no new jurisdiction to inferior justices, yet it in terms takes away the jurisdiction of the courts at Westminster. But in suits on those statutes that give debt, &c. and mention not justices of assize or of the peace, or where the inferior court has not a concurrent jurisdiction, both as to the subject matter and mode of proceeding, they must be brought in the superior courts, otherwise there would be a defect of remedy b.

For want of affidavit, that offence was committed in county where action brought, &c.

III. st. 4. c. 3. where the application was made in an early stage of the cause; because no affidavit had been filed, that the offence was committed within the county where the action was brought, or within a year before the bringing of it, according to the 21 Jac. By this latter clause the courts had, in certain cases, an express juris- Jurisdiction of diction given them, by motion, to stay proceedings in an action brought for payment of the annuity, or on a judgment entered; and to order the deed, &c. to be cancelled, and the judgment to be vacated. And judgment was set aside for want of a memorial, though it had been omitted at the request of the grantor b. But where an action was brought by executors, on a bond given by the defendant to their testator, for securing an annuity, and, upon a plea of non est factum, they obtained a verdict and judgment, and levied execution thereon, the court held this not to be a case where they could give relief, upon a summary application under the annuity act, for a defect in the memorialc; for the act only meant to refer to such judgments on warrants of attorney, as were intended to be a part of the security for the annuity, and not to extend to cases where a judgment is obtained in the ordinary course of law, on any instrument given for securing the same d. And the court of Common Pleas set aside a judgment and warrant of attorney, given to secure an annuity, for a defect in the memorial, without costs, because it was the case of an executor a.

Application to court, by whom made.

Upon the fourth section of the act, it has been holden, that the application to the court should be made by the person by whom the annuity is payable b; but the court in one instance set aside a judgment entered on the annuity bond, and execution sued out thereon, for a defect in the memorial, upon the application of a judgment creditor of the grantor, with a view of letting in a subsequent judgment of his own c. In a later case however, where the grantor of an annuity had assigned a lease for securing the payment of it, and afterwards sold his interest in the lease to a fair purchaser, it was holden that the latter was not entitled, under that section, to apply to the court, to have the security delivered up to be cancelled, because the memorial required by the act was not duly registered d. And where the attorney for the grantor of an annuity, at the time of the payment of the purchase money, took and retained an unreasonable part thereof for the expenses of the deed, the court on that ground would not set aside the anouity. By the above section, the courts are expressly authorized to order the deed, &c. to be cancelled, as well as to set aside the judgment, or stay the proceedings: But where the application is made to the general jurisdiction of the court, it seems that they will only vacate the warrant of attorney, or set aside the judgment or execution; and not make any order respecting the deeds, &c. which are declared by the act to be null and void, to all intents and purposes f. And in general, the fourth section of the act is not imperative on the court; but it is in their discretion, either to vacate the securities given for an annuity, in case of a violation of that clause of the act, or to do so on certain terms, or to refuse to do so, according to the circumstances of each particular case g.

When no memorial is required.

A mere surety, who charges with the payment of an annuity his estate in fee simple, of which he was seised in possession at the time of granting it, and which was of greater annual value than the annuity, is considered as a grantor, within the meaning of the annuity acts :; and therefore, in such case, no memorial is required b. Where, on a fair and bond fide sale of an interest in land, the consideration, in part or in the whole, is an annuity to be paid to the vendor, such consideration is not a pecuniary consideration, or money's worth, within the meaning of the statute 53 Geo. III. Therefore, where the plaintiff had assigned an interest in coal mines to the defendant, in consideration of an annuity for her life, and for the payment of which a bond was conditioned; the court of Common Pleas held, that such bond did not require enrolment c. A memorial of an annuity deed, enrolled within thirty days after execution of the deed by the grantee, is good, though enrolled before execution by the grantor<sup>d</sup>. And a memorial, when necessary, need not state that the annuity is redcemable e; nor the name of the party, to whom the warrant of attorney for securing it was given ; nor for what penal sum it authorizes a confession of judgment f.

Time of enrolling memorial.

What need not be stated therein.

What a sufficient statement.

It is sufficient to state in the memorial, that the annuity was granted for the lives of A. B. &c. (naming them,) without stating their description, by residence or otherwise, or adding that the annuity was granted for their joint lives, or the life of the survivor, or for a term of years determinable on those lives f. And where an annuity deed contained a covenant by the grantor, that he would not at any time during the continuance of the annuity, go upon the seas, or to parts beyond them, without first giving the grantee seven days notice in writing of such his intention, in order to enable him to pay such additional premiums of insurance as might be incurred on account thereof, which premiums the grantor covenanted to pay to the grantee; the court of Common Pleas held, that it was not necessary to state such covenants in the memorial, under the statute s. So, where the grantor of an annuity assigned a policy of insurance on his own life to the grantee, whereby the latter was enabled to insure the life of the former at a less premium than he otherwise could have done, the court held, that such assignment was no part of the consideration, and need not therefore have been set out in the memorials. "So, where an annuity was granted by an indenture, which also contained a release of a former annuity; the court held, that it was sufficient to describe the annuity deed in the memorial, as a grant of an annuity b.

When part of the consideration for an annuity had been deposited in the What is, or not, hands of the grantee's attorney, till certain houses, out of which the annuity was granted, should be completed, but it appeared that the money deposited had all been paid over to the grantor, in a short time after the date of the deeds, and there was no fraud in the transaction, the court refused to set aside the annuity, on the ground that the power given to them by the above act was discretionary, and that this was not the case of a fraudulent retainer contemplated by the act c. But where, upon the grant of an annuity, the agent of the grantee, on paying the consideration money, retained, or caused to be returned to him, a considerable sum for the expense of deeds, investigating title, journies, &c., (two witnesses, brought from a considerable distance for the purpose of attesting the execution of the annuity deed, having first retired,) the court of Common Pleas held this to be an illegal retainer, for which the grantee was responsible; and on that ground set aside the annuity, ten years after it had been granted and acted on, though the grantee alleged that he had given no authority for, and was ignorant of, such retainer d. And where an annuity being in arrear, and the rents of an estate on which it was secured being unpaid, the trustee of the estate, who had negotiated the annuity between the grantor and grantee, advanced a sum to the latter, in anticipation of the coming rents, and received from him, on such advance, the commission he usually received on annuity payments, the court of Common Pleas set aside an execution, which, the rents proving insufficient, was afterwards issued for this sum, in the name of the grantee, against one who, as surety for the payment of the annuity, had given a warrant of attorney to confess judgment e; and also another execution, which, under similar circumstances, the grantee afterwards issued for this sum, against the grantor f.

It having been decided by the court of King's Bench, that the memo- Description of rial of an annuity must contain the description and place of residence of the witnesses to the annuity deed s, it was, in consequence of that decision, enacted and declared, by the statute 3 Geo. IV. c. 92.h that "by the " said act of the fifty-third of the reign of his late majesty, no further or " other description of the subscribing witness or witnesses to any deed, " bond, instrument, or other assurance, whereby any annuity or rent charge " was or might be granted, was required in the memorial thereof, besides " the names of all such witnesses; and that so the said act should be " deemed, construed and taken." And, in a case arising after the passing of 3 Geo. IV. c. 92. where the witnesses to the deeds were an attorney's clerks, the court of Common Pleas held, that they were sufficiently described in the memorial, as clerks to their employer, stating his place of residence. It having been determined, however, by the court of King's Bench, that the memorial of an annuity must contain the christian names of the subscribing witnesses to the securities; the initials of their christian names not being deemed sufficient b; it was enacted and declared, by the statute 7 Geo. IV. c. 75. that "by the said act of 53 Geo. III. c. 141. no " further or other name or names of the subscribing witness or witnesses " to any deed, bond, instrument, or other assurance, whereby any annuity or rent charge is or may be granted, is or are required in the memorial "thereof, besides the names of all such witnesses, as they shall appear " signed to their attestations respectively, of the execution of such deed, " &c.; and so the said act shall be deemed, construed and taken:" And if the witnesses to the deed are accurately described in the memorial, it is sufficient, though they did not see the parties execute c.

Doubts having also arisen, whether under the said act of the fifty-third year of the reign of his late majesty, the omission to enrol a memorial of any one of the assurances for securing an annuity or rent charge, did not vitiate the whole transaction, notwithstanding the enrolment of a memorial of another deed, bond, instrument or other assurance, granting the same d, it was further enacted and declared, by the statute 3 Geo. IV. c. 92.e that "every deed, bond, instrument, or other assurance, granting any " annuity or rent charge, and of which a memorial shall have been, or " shall be duly enrolled, pursuant to the said act, notwithstanding the " omission to enrol any other deed, bond, instrument, or assurance, for se-" curing such annuity or rent charge, shall be valid and effectual, accord-" ing to the intent meaning and true effect thereof, notwithstanding a " memorial of any other deed, bond, instrument, or assurance, for securing " the same annuity, shall not have been duly enrolled, pursuant to the " said act: Provided always, that nothing therein contained, shall extend " to give any other force or validity, to any deed, bond, instrument, or " other assurance, of which a memorial shall have been duly enrolled as " aforesaid, than such deed, bond, instrument, or other assurance, would " have had, if any deed, bond, instrument, or other assurance, for secur-" ing the same annuity, of which a memorial shall not have been duly " enrolled, had never been executed."

The lackes of the party applying, under the above acts, does not, it seems, Lackes alone furnish of itself an answer to the application. But where it appeared that he had acquiesced in the payment of the annuity, and had lain by till the persons acquainted with the original transaction were dead, the court refused to interfere, and relieve him in a summary way b. So, where an cjectment was brought to recover possession of lands extended under an elegit, upon a judgment confessed, which had been entered up on a warrant of attorney given for securing an annuity, it was holden to be too late for the grantor to object to the consideration of the annuity, upon a summary application for staying the proceedings, after verdict in such ejectment; because he had an opportunity of making his defence to the action. And it seems that an annuity paid without objection for more than six years, shall be protected, by analogy to the statute of limitations, against any objection dehors the memorial, for a supposed defect of consideration, without strong reasons to the contrary d. But where the objection to the annuity was, that some of the deeds were not witnessed by all the persons mentioned in the memorial, the court on application set aside the warrant of attorney, though at the distance of near twenty years, and after the principal parties and witnesses to the transaction were dead; the merits of such objection not depending on any testimony lost by the delay. And a scire facias to revive a judgment entered up by warrant of attorney, given to secure the payment of an annuity, and a fieri facias issued thereon, have been holden, in the Exchequer, not to be such proceedings, as to call upon the granter of the annuity to avail himself of an objection to the memorial f.

If a question, respecting the validity of an annuity, has been decided by After question a court of competent jurisdiction, the court of King's Bench will not suffer it to be agitated again, if the point has been directly determined; but that is not the case, where the question has only incidentally occurred, and has not been positively decided g. In a modern case however, where, upon a previous application to set aside an annuity, for non-compliance with the requisites of the act, the rule was discharged upon discussion of the merits, the court of King's Bench would not entertain a similar application between the same parties, on the same state of facts, though grounded upon a new objection to the annuity, which was not before urged or considered h. And "where a rule to shew cause is obtained in this court, for the purpose Objections to of setting aside an annuity or annuities, the several objections thereto, intended to be insisted upon by the counsel, at the time of making the rule nisi. absolute, must be stated in the rule nisi:" which practice has also been adopted in the court of Common Pleas.

In actions for libels.

In replevin.

Pending bill in Chancery, &c.

On indictment for perjury.

In an action of trespass, the proceedings were stayed, in the court of King's Bench, on the ground that the plaintiff had before brought an action of replevin, and recovered damages for the same cause of action *. But, in a qui tam action for insuring lettery tickets, contrary to the 16 Geo. III. c. 34. the court of King's Bench would not stay the proceedings, upon an affidavit of the defendant, that a former action had been brought against him in the Common Pleas, for the same offence, in which he had had leave to compound; but said he must plead such matter specially b. And the court would not stay the proceedings, in an action against a sheriff's officer, on the 32 Geo. II. c. 28. § 12. though a similar action had been commenced against the sheriff, for the same offence c. Yet, where actions had been brought against both, and a verdict obtained in each, the court stayed the proceedings, on payment of one penalty, and the costs in both actions d. So, where A: and B. having recovered in separate actions for libels, against different parties engaged in the management and publication of the same newspaper, commenced fresh actions against the same parties, each suing that party against whom the other had recovered, the court would not interfere in a summary way, to set aside the latter proceedings e. And where the plaintiff brought replevin for goods levied under a warrant of distress, for an assessment made by a special sessions under the highway act, 13 Geo. III. c. 78. § 47. on the ground of the premises for which he was assessed, being situated without the township which was liable to repair the road, the court of Common Pleas refused to set aside the proceedings f. And they would not stay proceedings in an action, on the ground of a bill depending in Chancery for the same causes; nor in order to abide the event of a decision in the mayor's court, as to the existence of the debt, on a foreign attachment h. So, in a late case, the court of King's Bench refused to stay execution after verdict and judgment, which was affirmed on error, until the trial of an indictment for perjury against two of the plaintiff's witnesses in the action; and because this seemed to be a new and dangerous experiment, the court ordered the rule to be discharged with costs . And where a true bill of indictment for perjury was found, and the judge at the assizes having refused to try it, on account of manifest imperfections in the record, a new bill was preferred, whereupon the defendant was found guilty, but a new trial was granted; and then the prosecutor, instead of taking down the old record again, preferred a new indictment for the same offence, and removed it into the King's Bench by certiorari; the court refused to stay the proceedings upon that indictment, until the prosecutor paid the costs of the former proceedings's.

In an action brought against the sheriff, for money levied under a fieri fucias, without any previous demand, the court of King's Bench stayed the proceedings, upon payment of the sum levied, without costs b. But the court of Common Pleas would not stay the proceedings, in an action for the escape of a certificated bankrupt, taken in execution, and released by the sheriff upon production of his certificate c: nor, in an action on a replevin bond, because the action was commenced before breach; for it might have been pleadedd: So, where a plaintiff deposited a negotiable. After deposit of instrument, on which he was suing, in the hands of a third person, at the same time giving him notice of the action; the court held, that he did not thereby part with his right of action; and though the depositary sued on the same instrument, they would not, at the instance of the defendant, stay the proceedings in the first action c. And that court refused to stay the proceedings in an action brought by the provisional assignee of the insolvent debtors' court, on an objection that it was not proved, at the trial of the cause, that the assignee had the authority of the latter court to proceed, pursuant to the statute 1 Geo. IV. c. 119. § 11 f.

When an action is brought pending a reference, which it has been agreed shall operate as a stay of proceedings g, or otherwise contrary to good faith, the courts will not suffer the plaintiff to proceed in it: And they will stay the proceedings, when the action is brought by an attorney, without proper authority; for otherwise the defendant might be twice charged h. So, where an action was brought against an agent for prize money, the court of King's Bench set aside the proceedings, with costs to be paid by the attorney; because the letter of attorney from the plaintiff, to receive the prize money, was not duly attested, pursuant to the 20 Geo. II. c. 24. 6 6.1 And, in the Common Pleas, where claims were made on a prize agent, by several persons, for prize money due to a sailor, he was permitted, as a public officer, to pay the money into court, for the benefit of the claimant who should prove his authority to receive it k. husband's name, for breaking and entering her house, and taking her goods, the court of King's Bench refused, on the application of the defendants, to set aside the proceedings; though supported by an affidavit of the husband, that the action was brought without his authority<sup>2</sup>.

On the merits.

On shewing cause against a rule for staying proceedings, in an action on a promissory note, in the King's Bench, on an affidavit that the note was obtained without consideration, it being objected that the court would not interfere in this matter, which was proper for the trial of the cause; the court said, it was often done on such applications, if the other side did not contradict the assertion of the defendant; but when there were contradictory affidavits, the court would not interfere in this summary way, but put the defendant to insist on it as a defence at the trial b. And where an action had been settled, by payment of the debt, and giving a note of hand for the costs, amounting to 11. 11s. 6d. which note not being paid on demand, the plaintiff's attorney signed judgment, the court set it aside; saying, that he taking the debt, and note for the costs, the amount was liquidated, and judgment could not be signed in an action that was so settled; and that an action might certainly have been brought on the note in the county court, and the value recovered, at much less expense than by signing judgment in the court above. But where there was an undertaking to pay the costs of an action in a limited time, and they were not so paid, it was holden that the plaintiff might proceed in the action for nominal damages d.

Other grounds for staying proceedings. There are other grounds for staying the proceedings; not absolutely, but for a time, or until something be done for the benefit of the defendant: These are, pending a writ of error; until security be given for the payment of costs; or until the costs are paid, of a former action for the same cause.

Pending error.

A writ of error regularly sued out is a supersedeas of execution, in the King's Bench, from the time of its allowance e; or, in the Common Pleas, from the delivery of it to the clerk of the errors : provided bail, when requisite, be put in thereon in due time g. But this does not prevent the plaintiff from proceeding by scire facias, or action of debt on the judgment, against the principal; nor, after the return of non est inventus to a capias ad satisfaciendum, by scire facias, or action of debt on the recognizance, against the bail. In such cases however, if the writ of error be not evidently brought for the mere purpose of delay, the courts will stay the proceedings upon terms, pending the writ of error h. But this is not a matter of course i: and if it be apparent to the court, that the writ of error is brought merely for delay, they will not stay the proceedings k.

How that is to be made out, depends upon the circumstances of each particular case. In general, the court will not stay the proceedings, where the defendant or his attorney has declared, that the writ of error was brought only for delay, or used expressions tantamount to such a declaration a: But the declaration of an attorney's clerk b, or of one of several defendants c, or the belief of the plaintiff, or his attorney d, that it is brought for delay, is not sufficient; nor that the defendant had acknowledged the debt to be due, before and since the commencement of the action e; nor that he had said to the plaintiff, that when he could put off the matter no longer, he would go to gaol f; nor that his attorney had declared, that the debt would be settled, and that time was all the defendant wanted s. The court of King's Bench, in one case h, ordered the proceedings to be stayed, pending a writ of error, on a judgment of nonsuit; although there was no declaration of the defendant, or his attorney, that it was brought for delay: and there was a similar decision in the Common Pleas . But it is now settled, in both courts, that the proceedings cannot be stayed, pending a writ of error on such judgment, unless some real error be pointed out k. And where the defendants, on a judgment recovered in the Common Pleas, first brought a writ of error in the King's Bench, and then brought another returnable in Parliament, after which they nonprossed the first writ of error, and then obtained a rule to shew cause, why the proceedings in an action upon the judgment brought in the King's Bench should not be stayed, pending the second writ of error, the latter court discharged the rule with costs; as it plainly appeared, from the defendant's own conduct, that there was no foundation for a writ of error, and that it could only be brought for vexatious purposes 1.

In order to stay the proceedings in an action of debt on judgment, pend- In debt on judging a writ of error, it is necessary, if the action be bailable, that the defendant should be first in court, by putting in and perfecting bail m. And where an action is brought upon a judgment of the Common Pleas, the court of King's Bench will not stay the proceedings, pending a writ of error, without the defendant's giving judgment in the second action n, and undertaking not to bring a writ of error upon that judgmenta. But if the action be brought upon a judgment of the King's Bench, these terms make no part of the rule; because in general, actions on judgments are vexatious, and the plaintiff might have his execution on the first judgment b: And where the proceedings were stayed without imposing these terms, and the plaintiff died before judgment affirmed, the court would not afterwards permit judgment to be entered nunc pro tunc c.

Saing out execution on second judgment, pending error on first.

If the defendant bring a writ of error, after which the plaintiff bring an action on the judgment and recover, he cannot sue out execution on the second judgment, in the King's Bench, till the writ of error be determined d. But where, several years having clapsed after judgment obtained, the plaintiff brought an action upon the judgment, and after judgment signed in that action, the defendant sued out a writ of error upon the first judgment; the court of King's Bench held, that the plaintiff might notwithstanding take out execution on the second judgment. And so, in the Common Pleas, the plaintiff may take out execution on the second judgment, notwithstanding the writ of error, unless the defendant move to stay the proceedings f.

In C. P.

On a scire facias, or action of debt on recognizance againt bail, when a writ of error is allowed on the judgment in the original action, before the expiration of the time allowed for the bail to surrender their priucipal, the court of King's Bench, without regard to the time when the application is made, will stay the proceedings, until the writ of error be determined s; the bail undertaking to pay the condemnation money, or surrender the defendant into the custody of the marshal, within four days next after the determination of the writ of error, in case the same shall be determined in favour of the defendant in error h: And so, in the Common Pleas, where the application is made by the bail, within the time allowed for surrendering their principal, the court will stay the proceedings against them, pending the writ of error, without their giving judgment in the scire facias, or action of debt on the recognizance; which would preclude them from surrendering the defendant i. But if the bail in that court do not apply to stay the proceedings pending error, till their time to surrender is out, the court will not give them any time for that purpose, but only four days to pay the money in, after the judgment is affirmed k: And in such case, they must undertake to pay not only the condemnation money, but also the costs of the action against themselves,

But bail, in that court, are not allowed four days to surrender their principal, after the determination of a writ of error, where the plaintiff has proceeded by subpæna, and the writ of error was brought after the return of the capias ad satisfaciendum d.

Where error was not brought till it was too late for the bail to surrender, the court of King's Bench in one case would not stay the proceedings e. But, in a subsequent case f, the proceedings were stayed; the bail undertaking to pay the condemnation money, and the costs on the scire facias, in four days after affirmance; and in this case, there being no bail on the writ of error, the court made the bail also undertake to pay the costs on the writ of error, in case the judgment was affirmed; and said, it was a favour they were asking, and they would make them submit to equitable terms. By the affirmance of the judgment in these cases, is meant the final affirmance of it; and therefore where the judgment on a writ of error was affirmed in the Exchequer Chamber, and afterwards another writ of error was brought, returnable in Parliament, the proceedings against the bail were further stayed, till the determination of the se-

So, in a joint action by three plaintiffs for a libel, the defendant may call on the attorney of one of them, for an account of the places of residence and occupations of the other two b. So, in an action of trespass and assault, the court compelled the plaintiff to disclose to the defendants his proper addition and place of residence; his identity being material to their defence on the trial, and the proceedings were stayed until the disclosure war made c. And, where the defendant in assumpsit having pleaded in abatement, that four others were jointly liable with himself, the plaintiff applied to the defendant's attorney to give the places of residence and additions of those persons, which he refused, unless the action were discontinued; the court of King's Bench, under these circumstances, made a rule absolute for the defendant to deliver such particulars, or in default thereof for setting aside the plea d. Security for costs.

When required.

It was not formerly usual to require security for costs, where the plaintiff resided abroad $\mathbf{e}$, except in cjectment $\mathbf{h}$, or actions qui tam $\mathbf{i}$: For it was considered, that such a proceeding might have affected trade, by excluding foreigners from our courts; and would be a means of clogging the course of justice. of King's Bench will not stay proceedings on a quo warranto information, until the prosecutor give security for costs, on the ground that the relator is in insolvent circumstances, where it appears that he is a corporator, and no fraud is suggested a. And the court of Common Pleas refused to require the plaintiff to give security for costs, although it was sworn that he was insolvent, and that the action was brought in his name, for the benefit of J. S. who was alone benefitially interested in the result b. So, where an insolvent debtor, having assigned his property under the insolvent acts, brought an action to recover a debt incurred before the assignment, the assignees having refused to sue, that court would neither set aside the proceedings in such action, nor require the insolvent to give sccurity for costs c. But where the plaintiff had been discharged under the insolvent act, after issue joined and before notice of trial given, the court of King's Bench stayed the proceedings, until the assignee, or some creditor of the plaintiff. should give security for costs d. And where, in trespass against parish officers for distraining for poors' rates, it appeared that the plaintiff had refused to pay the rates by the desire of his landlord, who was also attorney in the cause, the court stayed the proceedings, until he gave security for the costs e. An infant plaintiff cannot be compelled to give security for costs, on the ground of the insolvency of his prochein ami f; nor an uncertificated bankrupt, suing for his own benefit, as for the produce of his earnings since the bankruptcy g; though it is otherwise, where the action is brought or proceeded in by a bankrupt, whether certificated or uncertificated, for the benefit of his assignees h: And where the plaintiff having become bankrupt before plea pleaded, the defendant obtained an order for giving security for costs, and afterwards pleaded bankruptcy, the court of King's Bench held that the plea could not be set aside; but that the order for giving security for costs should be rescinded, the plaintiff paying the costs of that application, and the defendant's rule discharged 1. So, where a commission of bankrupt issued against the plaintiff, who was gone with his family to New York, upon the petition of the defendant, who was the only creditor, and chose himself sole assignee; and the plaintiff brought an action against the defendant, to try the commission; the court of Common Pleas refused to stay the proceedings, till he should give security for costs; for in this case, the defendant having possessed himself of all the plaintiff's property as assignee, had thereby rendered it impossible for the latter to give any pledge or counter security to those who might become bound for him k.

It was formerly the practice, in the King's May be made Bench, to compel the plaintiff to give security for costs, without requiring a previous application to be made to him, or his attorney 1: but it was afterwards determined, that where the plaintiff resided in this country, the court would not grant a rule requiring him to give such security, on the ground of bankruptcy, &c. unless application had been made to him for that purpose m. A distinction however was made, between compelling security for costs, and ordering a stay of proceedings; it having been determined, that where the plaintiff resided abroad, the court would compel security for costs, without a previous application to his attorney; but they would not order a stay of proceedings, unless such application had been made n. And at length it was decided, agreeably to the original practice, and seems to be now settled, that the court will grant a rule for the plaintiff to give security for costs, though an application has not been made to

In a second ejectment, the courts will stay the proceedings, until the costs are paid of a prior one, for the trial of the same title b; and also the In other actions. costs of an action, if any has been brought, for the mesne profits c. In other actions, it was not formerly usual to stay the proceedings in a second action, until the costs were paid of a prior one for the same cause d; and particularly if the merits did not come in question on the former trial. And there is said to be no general rule, by which a plaintiff is compelled to pay the costs of a first action, before he is suffered to proceed with the second: If that were the case, it might in many instances work injustice; for the plaintiff might have no other means of paying the costs, than by proceeding for the recovery of his debt f. And therefore, where a plaintiff having declared in assumpsit, against trustees of a turnpike road generally, went to trial, and withdrew his record, and after suffering himself to be maprossed, sued the same trustees a second time by name, for the same cause of action; the court refused to stay the proceedings in the second action, until the costs of the first were paid g. So where a plaintiff, being nonsuited, was taken in execution by the defendant for the costs, and whilst in execution, brought another action for the same cause; the court refused to stay further proceedings in the second action, until the costs of the first were paid h. And it seems, that where proceedings have been set aside for irregularity, the plaintiff is not bound to pay the costs of them, before he commences a fresh action. But in actions of tort, for a malicious arrest or prosecution, or for a trespass, &c. the court will compel the plaintiff to pay the costs of a first action, before he is allowed to proceed in a second for the same cause k: And in actions for the recovery of a debt, though they will not in general stay the proceedings in a second action, until the costs of a former one are paid, yet of late years this has been done in several instances, on the ground of vexation 1; and

Of compromising, and compounding the Action.

WHEN the proceedings are regular, and cannot be stayed, on any of the grounds stated in the preceding chapter, the defendant in general, if he has no merits, either settles or compromises the action, by paying or giving security for the debt and costs, compounds it, (if penal,) confesses it, or lets judgment go by default.

Staying proceedings, on payment of debt and costs.

In actions for the recovery of a sum certain, where the parties are agreed as to the amount of the debt, it is of course to stay the proceedings, on payment of the same, together with the costs of the action a. But where the prothonotary, on a rule to stay proceedings on payment of debt and costs, refused to allow costs, on account of gross misconduct on the part of the plaintiff's attorney, the court of Common Pleas would not direct the prothonotary to review his taxation b. If the parties are not agreed, the defendant cannot move to stay the proceedings; but must either pay into court, on the common rule, what he conceives to be due, or let judgment go by default: and, in actions for general damages, wherein the defendant cannot pay money into court, he has no option, but must let judgment go by default, unless he can settle amicably with the plaintiff. A judge's order, that upon payment of debt and costs by a certain day, all proceedings shall be stayed, is only conditional on the defendant: and therefore, if the debt and costs are not paid, the plaintiff must proceed in the action. But the order is sometimes drawn up, so as to make it obligatory on the defendant to pay the costs, in which case the plaintiff may proceed for the recovery of them by attachment d. And an attorney who stays proceedings, upon an undertaking to pay costs, is bound to fulfil his engagement, although his client die before bail is put in e.

The practice of staying the proceedings, on payment of the debt and costs, though frequently confounded with, is in reality very different from that of bringing money into court, on the common rule; upon which the proceedings are not always stayed, but the plaintiff is at liberty to proceed at his peril, for more than the sum brought in: And the practice we are now treating of extends to every sort of action, brought for the recovery of

So, where separate actions were brought against several persons for the same debt, who, (if at all) were jointly liable, the defendant in one action having paid the debt and costs in that action, the court stayed the proceedings in the others, without costs e. Where an indorsement was made upon a note of hand by the payee, that if the interest was paid on stipulated days during his life, the note should be given up; default having been made in payment of the interest, the court of Common Pleas refused to stay the proceedings, on payment of it, and costs f.

But, in an action on a money bond, the court of King's Bench, in one case 1, would not stay the proceedings, on payment of the penalty; being of opinion, that damages might be recovered beyond that amount. This case, however, seems to have been since overruled m; and it is now settled, that the proceedings may be stayed in all cases, on payment of the penalty and costs. We have already seen n, in what cases On bail bond. the courts will stay the proceedings, in actions upon bail bonds: It will be sufficient to add in this place, that as the bail may render the principal, they have rendered him, the proceedings on the bail bond may be stayed, on payment of costs<sup>2</sup>, provided the plaintiff has not lost a trial. But in order to stay the proceedings on the bail bond, the bail, in the Common Pleas, must pay the costs of the actions against the principal and the other bail, as well as the debt and his own costs<sup>3</sup>; though it is otherwise in the King's Bench, where the court, we have seen<sup>5</sup>, will stay the proceedings in all the actions on the bail bond, on payment of the costs of one of them. In an action of debt on recognizance, where the proceedings are stayed on payment of the debt and costs, the bail above must pay the costs in that, as well as the debt and costs in the original action, though they apply within the time allowed them for surrendering the principal d: But where the principal is surrendered in time, the plaintiff cannot afterwards proceed against the bail, for the recovery of costs, in the action on the recognizance<sup>6</sup>.

On recogniz-

On bond, for payment of money.

In debt on bond, conditioned for the payment of a less sum, it was usual for the courts, even before the statute 4 Ann. c. 16. § 13. to relieve the defendant against the penalty of the bond, on payment of the principal, interest and costs; but then the whole penalty must have been brought into court, and when the plaintiff was satisfied, the defendant might have taken what remained . By the above statute it is enacted, that "if at " any time, pending an action upon any such bond with a penalty, the " defendant shall bring into court all the principal money and interest due " on the bond, and also such costs as have been expended in any suit or " suits in law or equity upon such bond, the said money, so brought in, " shall be deemed and taken to be in full satisfaction and discharge of the " said bond; and the court shall and may give judgment to discharge " every such defendant of and from the same accordingly." Upon this statute, the application to the court may be and is usually made before judgment 6: And in an action upon a bond, conditioned for the payment of money generally, without naming any day of payment, the court of King's Bench will refer it to the master to compute interest, as well as the principal and costs h; interest being due on such a bond, though not ex-

It was indeed said by the court, upon reference to the master, in the case of Hughes v. Poidevin, 15 East, 254. that it was usual to pay the costs, when the proceeding on the recognizance was by action; and accordingly a rule was made in that case, for the payment of them: and a similar rule was made, in the case of Thomas v. Bayley's bail, E. 53 Geo. III. K. B. But these decisions were overruled by the court, in a subsequent case of Creswell v. Hearn & another, 1 Maule & Sel. 742. And it seems to be now settled, as stated in the text, that where the principal is surrendered in time, the plaintiff cannot afterwards proceed against the bail, for the recovery of costs, in an action on the recognizance.

pressly reserved. And the plaintiff is entitled to the costs of proceedings in equity, relating to the same matter b; but not to the costs of a former suit, wherein the judgment has been reversed on a writ of error c: for there is no reason, why the defendant should pay for the error or mistake of the plaintiff. In the Exchequer, the court granted an application, on In Exchequer. behalf of the defendants, to refer it to the master, to see what was due for principal interest and costs on a bond, which was the cause of action; and to stay all proceedings, upon payment of the sum due and costs d. But that court would not refer it to the master, to take an account of what was actually due for principal and interest upon a bond, after it had been put in suit, and the plaintiff had obtained a verdict thereon e.

It was formerly holden, that this statute did not extend to an action of On bond, for debt on bond, conditioned for the payment of an annuity, or of money by instalments f. But it is now settled, upon the equity of the statute, that in such an action, when the defendant is solvent, the courts will stay the proceedings, on payment of the arrears and costs, and giving judgment as a security for future payments, with a stay of execution till they become due g: And where, in an action on an annuity bond, it appeared that there were mutual accounts subsisting between the parties, the court of King's Bench made a rule for referring them to the master; and that upon payment of what, if any thing, should be found due to the plaintiff, all further proceedings should be stayed h. But the courts will not stay the proceedings, when the defendant appears to be insolvent; or the bond is conditioned for the payment of a gross sum of money absolutely, at a day certain, and afterwards defeazanced, in consequence of a subsequent agreement to pay the money by instalments 1; or where, though the bond be conditioned for the payment of money by instalments, it is expressly agreed, that if default be made in any one payment, the bond is to stand in force for the whole principal and interest then remaining due k. So, where the defendant gave a warrant of attorney to secure a sum certain, to be paid half yearly by instalments, with interest, on specified days, and that the plaintiff should be at liberty to enter up judgment thereon immediately, "but no execution to be issued, till default made in payment of the said sum, with interest as aforesaid, by the instalments, and in the manner hereinbefore mentioned;" the court held, that the plaintiff might take out execution for the whole, on default of payment of the first instalment 1. If default be made in payment of the interest on a bond, the principal whereof is not yet due, the courts will not stay proceedings, on

And if an instalment of an annuity secured by bond, be not paid on the day, the bond is forfeited, and the penalty is the debt in law: therefore, where the defendant had been charged in execution for the penalty of 1000l. under such circumstances, previous to the insolvent act of 34 Geo. III. c. 69. the court of King's Bench refused to order that sum to be reduced in the marshal's book, to the sum actually due for the arrears of the annuity, in order that he might take the benefit of that act b.

In trespass.

In actions for general damages, it is a rule, that the proceedings cannot be stayed, on making satisfaction to the plaintiff: And accordingly, in an action against the sheriff, for a false return to a fieri facias, the court of King's Bench refused to stay the proceedings, on payment of the money But there are some exceptions to this rule. In replevin for instance, where the defendant avows for rent, the courts will stay the proceedings, on bringing it into court, and payment of costs d. But the proceedings cannot be stayed, when the avowry is for damage feasant e; because the courts in such case have no rule to guide them in ascertaining Where the defendant in replevin made cognizance as bailiff of the lord of a manor, under a distress on the plaintiff as constable of a township, for palfrey rent, the court of Common Pleas would not stay the proceedings, upon payment of costs, on the application of the ·defendant f. But, in a subsequent case, where cognizance was made by the defendants, as bailiffs of the commissioners appointed by an inclosure act, under a warrant of distress, for non-payment of several sums of money, ordered by the commissioners to be paid by the plaintiff by virtue of the said act, the proceedings in replevin were stayed by the court of King's Bench, on payment of the costs of the action and distress and replevying the goods, and delivering up the replevin bond to be cancelled; there being no special damage g. There is indeed a case, where the latter court, under particular circumstances, stayed the proceedings in an action of trespass for seizing goods, on the defendant's undertaking to restore the goods, or pay the full value of them, with the costs of the action h: But this seems to be contrary to their usual practice, in actions of that nature; and in a subsequent case, the court of Exchequer refused to stay the proceedings in such an action, upon the like terms, where it would not end the suit, and particularly as the value of the goods was not admitted i.

In though for money, the courts will give the defendant leave to bring In trover. it into court at And where trover is brought for a specific chattel, of an ascertained quantity and quality, and unattended with any circumstance that can enhance the damages above the real value, the courts will make an order for staying the proceedings, upon delivering it to the plaintiff, and payment of costs b: And this is the more reasonable, as the action of trover comes in place of the old action of detinue. But the courts will not stay the proceedings, when there is an uncertainty, either as to the quantity or quality of the thing demanded c; or there is any tort that may enhance the damages above the real value, and there is no rule whereby to estimate the additional damages d. In trover for a promissory note, alleged to have been dishonoured, the court of King's Beach made an order for staying the proceedings, upon delivering up the note, and payment of costs, with liberty for the plaintiff to proceed for damage sustained, but not for nominal damages, by reason of the detention . And, in a subsequent case, where trover was brought by the assignees of a bankrupt, for a steam engine, &c. the court made a special rule for staying the proceedings, on delivering to the plaintiffs a part of the goods for which the action was brought, and payment of costs up to that time, provided the plaintiffs would accept thereof in discharge of the action; or otherwise, that the articles delivered should be struck out of the declaration, and the plaintiffs be subject to costs, unless they should obtain a verdict for the remainder of the goods, or prove a deterioration of the part delivered up f. But, in an action of trover, where the value of the goods converted was not ascertained, the court of Common Pleas refused to stay proceedings, upon delivery of the goods to the plaintiff, or payment of the value of them g.

subject to any defeazance, must cause such defeazance to be written on the same paper or parchment, on which the warrant of attorney is written; or cause a memorandum in writing to be made on such warrant of attorney, containing the substance and effect of such defeazance." In the construction of this rule, it has been determined, that if the attorney employed to prepare a warrant of attorney to confess judgment, which is to be made subject to a defeazance, neglect to insert such defeazance on the warrant, the security is not thereby avoided against the innocent party; but the attorney is guilty of a breach of duty imposed on him by the court, and answerable for it on motion b: And the court of King's Bench will not set aside a warrant of attorney, on the ground that the defeazance only states the amount of the sum secured by the judgment, without noticing collateral securities. So, in the Common Pleas, the rule does not require the consideration of a judgment to be indersed on a warrant of attorney d: And if a warrant of attorney be given to confess judgment absolutely for a contain sum, although it be understood between the parties that it is given only to indemnify the plaintiff against his suretyship for a smaller sum, that is not such a defeazance as is necessary to be indorsed on the warrant of attorney; and the plaintiff need not defer execution till the contingency happen e. It is no ground for impeaching an annuity, that the memorial does not state the defeazance of the warrant of attorney, in the recital of that instrument; it being explicitly set out in the recital of the deed f. But if the defeazance on a warrant of attorney state that it is given to secure the payment of a sum on demand, and, in case default shall be made, then judgment to be entered up, and execution issue, an actual demand must be made, and a proposal to settle amicably does not amount to such a demand s. Where a warrant of attorney was given with a defeazance, stating it to be given as a security for a certain sum, and lawful interest thereon; the court held, that it was to be construed as a continuing security, and not merely as a security for money then due h.

A warrant of attorney to confess judgment need not be by deed; nor does it require an attesting witness. deemed to be a prisoner within the meaning of the rule. So, where a defendant, on being arrested at the suit of a third person, is taken to the house of a sheriff's officer, to whom he voluntarily offers to give a warrant of attorney, it is necessary for an attorney to be present on his part, at the time of its execution b. But it having been deemed sufficient for the plaintiff's attorney to be present, and subscribe the warrant, as attorney for the defendant c, another rule was made, in the King's Bench d, that " no warrant of attorney executed by any person in custody of a sheriff " or other officer, for the confessing of judgment, shall be valid or of any " force, unless there be present some attorney on the behalf of such per-" son in custody, to be expressly named by him, and attending at his re-" quest, to inform him of the nature and effect of such warrant of attor-" ney, before the same is executed; which attorney shall subscribe his " name as a witness to the due execution thereof." And, to prevent Must formerly frauds and impositions in the execution of warrants of attorney for con-bave been read over by, or to fessing judgments, a rule was made in the Common Pleas, that "every party executing " warrant of attorney for confessing judgment, shall be read over by the " person who is to execute the same, or by some other person to him, be-" fore the execution thereof: and that if judgment shall be entered up on " any such warrant of attorney, which shall not be so read over as afore-" said, such judgment, upon motion, may be set aside as irregular :" But this latter rule appears to be disused f.

The object of these rules was not merely to procure the attendance of Object of these an attorney, to explain the nature of the instrument to be executed, but also to advise the defendant confidentially, and as a friend; and rules thus framed for the protection of a prisoner, cannot be waived by him, when in a situation where he is incapable of exercising his judgment: Therefore, when a defendant in custody executes a warrant of attorney to confess a judgment, there must be an attorney present on his part; the presence of the plaintiff's attorney being insufficient, though the defendant consent to his acting as his attorney also g. And, in the Common Pleas, if a prisoner on mesne process give a warrant of attorney, the rule that his attorney must be present is not dispensed with, though two other persons not in custody join in the warrant h: The presence of an attorney's clerk is not sufficient i. And the above rules have been construed to extend to warrants of attorney executed abroad k.

But still it is sufficient, if there be an attorney present on behalf of the defendant, though he be not an attorney of the same court in which the judgment is to be entered 1: And, in the Common Pleas, if the defendant himself be an attorney, or practise as such, it is deemed sufficient,

In what cases attorney's presence unnecessary. though no other attorney be present on his behalf. So, a warrant of attorney given by a defendant in custody, was in that court holden to be good, where an attorney was present on his behalf, though he was a total stranger to the defendant, and introduced by the plaintiff's attorney b. These rules only extend to warrants of attorney given by a defendant in custody upon mesne process in a civil action, to a plaintiff at whose suit he is in custody: Therefore, where a warrant of attorney is given by a defendant in custody upon process of execution, or upon criminal process, or to a third person, at whose suit the defendant is not in custody, an attorney's presence is unnecessary. And where a warrant of attorney was executed in the presence of an attorney's clerk, and it appeared from the defendant is affidavit, that he was the more induced to execute it, because he had been informed, that if he did execute it under an arrest, and without his attorney being present, it would be void, the court refused to set aside the proceedings.

Relief given, under particular circumstances. On the other hand, though the case is not strictly within the rule, yet the courts will sometimes interpose and give relief, under particular circumstances; for it is their province to guard against the arts of designing men, practised upon persons under the pressure of distress and imprisonment. Thus, if it could be shown, that a party, even in execution, had been prevailed on to acknowledge a judgment, for more money than was really due, the courts would give relief under the circumstances &; because cases of fraud and impositions are exceptions to all rules whatsoever. And in a case where, interlocutory judgment being signed against a prisoner in custody of the marshal, the plaintiff's attorney took a cognovit from him for 2001. with a defeazance on paying 491. (the real debt,) and costs, but no attorney was present on the part of the defendant; though this case was not strictly within the rule, which only mentions prisoners In custody of sheriff's officers, yet the court of King's Bench interfered for the relief of the prisoner h. So where a defendant, on being arrested by a sheriff's officer, gave a cognovit to the plaintiff, who was attorney in the cause, without an attorney being present on his part, such cognovit was holden to be void, by the court of Common Pleas, although the plaintiff swore he did not know the defendant was in custody'. But, in the King's Bench, a cognovit given by a defendant in custody on mesne process is valid, although no attorney be present on the part of the defendant, unless it be shewn that some undue advantage was taken of him k.

it, the courts will notwithstanding give the other party leave to enter up judgment . But the death of either party is, generally speaking, a countermand of the warrant of attorney b: And therefore, upon a motion to enter up judgment on an old warrant of attorney, if it appear to the courts, that either party is dead, they will not grant the motion c. Yet, if the warrant of attorney be to enter up judgment at the suit of A. his. executors or administrators, it seems that on the death of A., the courts will give his executors or administrators leave to enter up judgment thereon d. And if either party die in vacation, within a year after giving the warrant of attorney, judgment may be entered up of course, at any time after, in that vacation e; and it will be a good judgment at common law, as of the preceding term, though it be not so upon the statute of frauds, in respect of purchasers, but from the signing f: And even where the party dies after a year, if the courts can be prevailed upon to grant u rule for entering up judgment, they will not afterwards set it aside s. And, in the Common Pleas, where a warrant of attorney was given by two persons, to enter up judgment on a joint bond against me, not us, the court rafter the death of one of them, gave leave to enter up judgment against the other i. the debt. And, in an early case b, it was ruled upon motion, that if a woman give a warrant of attorney, and then marry, the plaintiff may file a bill, and enter judgment, against both husband and wife, by the practice of the court. But, in a subsequent case, it is said, that if a feme sole give a warrant to confess a judgment, and marry before it is entered, the warrant is countermanded, and judgment shall not be entered against husband and wife, for that would charge the husband. In a still later case, however, judgment was allowed to be entered up against husband and wife, on a warrant of attorney given by the feme, dum sola?

Must be strictly pursued.

In entering up judgment on a warrant of attorney, the authority given by it must be strictly pursued: Therefore, if a plaintiff enter up judgment in debt on a mutuatus, on a warrant of attorney to enter up judgment in debt on bond, the court will set it aside as irregular . So, judgment cannot be entered up against two defendants, on a warrant of attorthey to confess a judgment against three persons, one of whom afterwards refused to execute; and the judgment against the two was set aside on motion, but without costs, and on the terms of no action being brought s. And if a warrant of attorney be given to appear and confess judgment of a particular term, the judgment should be entered accordingly of that term, and cannot be entered of any other h. But if the warrant of attorney be given, to appear and confess judgment generally, or (as is most usual,) of a particular or any subsequent term, judgment may be entered of any term after giving the warrant i. Evidence of signing.

The judgment upon a warrant of attorney, being in debt, is always final; and signed in like manner as a final judgment by confession or default in an adverse suit, which will be treated of in the next chapter. To prove the time of signing the judgment, however, the day-book kept at the judgment office is not evidence; but an office copy of the judgment ought to be produced, or the docket of the judgment b.

In order to compound a penal action, an application must be made to the court wherein it is depending, founded upon the statute 18 Eliz. c. 5. § 3°. by which it is enacted, that "no common informer or plaintiff shall " or may compound or agree with any person or persons that shall offend, "or that shall be surmised to offend, against any penal statute, for an " offence committed, or pretended to be committed, but after answer made " in court, to the information or suit in that behalf exhibited or prose-" cuted; nor after answer, but by the order or consent of the court in " which the same information or suit shall be depending; upon pain of " standing on the pillory, being disabled to sue on a penal statute, and " forfeiting ten pounds, half to the king and half to the party grieved:" And, by a previous statute d, "actions popular prosecuted by collusion, " shall be no bar to those which are prosecuted with good faith; and the " defendant, being lawfully condemned or attainted of covin or collusion, " shall suffer imprisonment for two years." But these statutes extend only to common informers, and not to cases where the penalty is given to the party grieved. And, in the Common Pleas, a notice of action required by a penal statute, was held to be no commencement of the suit, so as to subject the plaintiff or his agent to an attachment, for attempting to compound an offence, previous to the suing out of the writ f.

When and how made.

The application for leave to compound a penal action must be made to the court in bank, and not at nisi prius, on the trial of the cause g: and it is made by consent h, upon an affidavit, setting forth the nature of the action, the state of the cause, the agreement of the parties, and that no more than a certain sum is given or taken h, &c. which application should regularly be made in an early stage of the cause; but under favourable circumstances, it may be made after verdict k: And in one case, where the defendant was in execution, the court of King's Bench, on an affidavit of his poverty, gave the plaintiff leave to compound with him. But, in the Common Pleas, where part of the penalty goes to the king, the consent of the crown must be obtained, before the motion can be granted for leave to compound a penal action, whether the verdict has passed for the plaintiff or not b. Upon the application being made, it is in the discretion of the courts to give or withhold their leave to compound; and it was refused by the court of King's Bench, in a case where an action was brought on the statute 25 Geo. II. c. 30. for keeping a disorderly house d. where part of the penalty was given to the poor, the court would not give the parties leave to compound a penal action, on the statute 13 Geo. II. c. 19. although the overseers, at a vestry, had agreed to compound it, without receiving any part of the penalty e. On a bond fide composition f, Costs on. though not on a collusive one f, the plaintiff may be allowed a reasonable sum for his costs. And, in compounding a penal action on the post-horse act, which gives costs to the prosecutor, the court of Common Pleas allowed him to receive the deficient duties, not amounting to 40s. and full costs of suit, though exceeding together the 40s. paid to the crown s. But where no costs are given to the plaintiff, as in an action on the statute of usury, the crown is entitled to a moiety of the sum agreed to be paid to the plaintiff for his costs; for whatever the defendant may pay under the name of costs, is considered in fact as an addition to the penalty h.

When leave is given to compound a qui tum action, it is a general rule, Composition that the king's half of the composition shall be paid into the hands of the master of the crown office in the King's Bench i, or one of the prothonotaries in the Common Pleask, for the use of his majesty; which is now usually done before the rule is drawn up. And where the defendant in a Attachment for qui tam action obtained a rule to stay proceedings, on paying a sum agreed upon between him and the plaintiff, the court of King's Bench considered it as an undertaking by him to pay that sum; and for the non-payment of it, granted an attachment 1: But for preventing any doubt in future, an order was made, that "every rule to be drawn up for compounding any qui tam action do express, that the defendant doth undertake to pay the sum for which the court has given him leave to compound such action "." So, in the Common Pleas, where a defendant, in a penal action, In C. P. obtains a rule to stay proceedings on payment of part of the penalties, the court will grant an attachment against him for non-payment n: And in How recovered, for the debt and costs. But it is said to have been the constant practice In C. P. in the Common Pleas, to take cognovits before declaration, and judgments have been entered thereon: which practice was recognized, in a late case, Again, the confession is either of the whole or part of the cause of action. If it be of the whole, and not upon terms, the plaintiff's attorney may immediately sign final judgment h, and take out execution thereon; but if it be not of the whole, he can only sign judgment for the part confessed, and the action must proceed for the residue. When a judgment is confessed upon terms, in the King's Bench, it being in effect but a conditional judgment, the court will take notice of it, and see the terms performed: but when the judgment is acknowledged absolutely, and a subsequent agreement made, this does not affect the judgment; and the court will take no notice of it, but put the party to his action on the agreement i. Decision on stat. S Geo. IV. e. S9.

A bond, upon the face of it, appeared to be conditioned for the payment of a sum certain, but by an indenture of the same date, declaring the nurposes for which the bond was executed, it was agreed that it should be lawful for the obligees to commence an action upon the bond, and proceed to judgment, whenever they should think fit; and upon judgment being obtained to issue execution, and that the judgment should be a security for the payment to the obligees, on demand, of all sums of money which then were or might thereafter become due to them: a judgment having been entered up by virtue of this deed, the obligees issued execution, without assigning breaches or executing a writ of inquiry; and the court held, that the indenture, by virtue of which the judgment was entered up, was in legal effect a cognovit actionem, within the meaning of the 3d section of the statute 3 Geo. IV. c. 39; or if not, that it was a contrivance to defeat the provisions of that statute: and the indenture not having been filed with the proper officer, within twenty one days after its execution, nor judgment entered up within that period, as required by the statute, the court, upon application by the assignees of the obligor, who had become bankrupt, ordered the execution to be withdrawn a.

Pling bill, or common bail, on.

If a cognovit be given by an attorney, it seems that the plaintiff must first file a bill against him, before he signs judgment thereon b: and in general, common bail must be filed for the defendant upon a cognovit; though, if judgment has been irregularly signed, without filing common bail for the defendant according to the statute, till after the term succeeding that in which the writ was returnable, and after the judgment itself has been entered up, the defendant, we have seen c, having given a cognovit, is estopped from objecting to the irregularity, if the plaintiff has filed common bail nunc pro tunc, before the time of making the objection. We have also seen d, in what cases the bail are, or are not discharged, by taking a cognovit from the principal. And a certificate, it may be remembered, will discharge a cognovit, given after a secret act of bankruptcy, for a debt previously due, with interest and costs c.

Judgment by default, what.

Judgment by default, which is an implied confession of the action, is either by non sum informatus, where the defendant's attorney, having appeared, says that he is not informed of any answer to be given to the action; or by nil dicit, where the defendant himself appears, but says nothing in bar or preclusion thereof: And the latter judgment, which is the more usual, is either for want of any plea at all; or for want of an issuable plea, after a judge's order for time, on the terms of pleading issuably; or when the defendant pleads a plea not adapted to the nature of the action, or which may be considered as a nullity, or is false and vexatious, or not pleaded in due time, or proper manner.

On the expiration of the time for pleading, a rule to plead having been given, and a plea demanded, when necessary, the plaintiff's attorney should search for a plea, if not delivered to him, with the clerk of the papers, who receives special pleas in the King's Bench, and with the clerk of the judgments, who keeps the general issue book at the King's Bench office, or at the prothonotaries' office in the Common Pleas; and if no plea be delivered, or found at either of those offices, the plaintiff's attorney may sign judgment, as for want of a plea: And judgment may be signed in like manner, if the defendant do not rejoin a, plead to a new assignment, or join in demurrer, when necessary; or, in the King's Bench, if he do not return the paper or demurrer book in due time. If the defendant plead a false plea of judgment recovered b, or other plea that is not issuable c, after a judge's order for time to plead, on the terms of pleading issuably, the plaintiff, we have seen c, may consider the plea as a nullity, and sign judgment. So if the defendant, being under an order to plead issuably, plead several pleas, one of which is not issuable, the plaintiff, in the King's Bench, may sign judgment as for want of a plea, although the other pleas are issuable d: Where the defendant had obtained an order for staying proceedings, upon payment of debt and costs, which had been taxed, and afterwards abandoned the order, and pleaded a judgment recovered, the court held, that the plaintiff was at liberty to sign judgment, the plea filed being a fraud upon the judge's order. And judgment may be signed in the Common Pleas, if a declaration in debt demand two thousand pounds, and contain several counts, each of which states a less sum, e. g. five hundred pounds, and the defendant, being under terms of pleading issuably, plead thereto, that he does not owe the said sum of five hundred pounds f. But if the defendant, when under an order to plead issuably, put in a plea which, though informal, goes to the substance of the action, the plaintiff cannot sign judgment, as for want of a plea g; nor can judgment be signed, if one of several pleas be merely demurrable h.

promise,") in manner and form, &c. with a conclusion to the country, is not so unintelligible, as to entitle the plaintiff to sign judgment as for want of a plea. So, the plea of nil debet in an action of debt on judgment, or not guilty in an action of debt on a penal statute, is not such a nullity as will warrant the plaintiff in signing judgment; nor can judgment be signed in a qui lam action, for entitling the plea with the names of the parties, without the addition of qui lam, &c. to the plaintiff's name. So, a plea, in debt for 1800l. that the defendant does not owe the said sum of 10l. above demanded, &c. is, it seems, sufficient, and the amount may be rejected as surplusage. And a mis-statement of the defendant's christian name, in the commencement of his plea, does not entitle the plaintiff to treat it as a nullity, and sign judgment as for want of a plea.

Or, may be considered as a nullity.

In the King's Bench, when a plea is clearly absurd on the face of it, as where it attempts to set up as a defence, a judgment recovered in the Exchequer in Ireland, before the cause of action accrued, the plaintiff may consider it as a pullity, and sign judgment as for want of a plea, without a previous application to the court s: And a plea of set off for money due on a recognizance, and also for money due upon promises, pleaded to an action of debt on bond, as if to an action of assumpsit, was holden in that court to be a nullity, and that the plaintiff might sign judgment h. So, where a sham plea was pleaded, of judgments recovered in the court of piepoudre in Bartholomew Fair, in terms obviously denoting fictitious proceedings, the court reprobated the practice; and, considering the plea as a nullity, suffered the plaintiff to sign judgment as for want of a plea, and made the defendant's attorney pay the costs of it, and of the appli-And where the defendant first pleaded in abatement, and afterwards, without applying to the court for leave to withdraw that plea, pleaded a judgment recovered, the court held that the plaintiff was at liberty to sign judgment as for want of a plea k. So, in the Common Pleas, where the defendant pleaded the statute of additions in abatement, the court held the plea to be a nullity, and gave the plaintiff leave to sign judgment 1: and Lord Alvanley, in delivering the opinion of the court, observed, that perhaps it would have been the more regular mode of proceeding for the plaintiff to have signed judgment as for want of a plea, without any application to the court, and thus have put the defendant to move to have that judgment set aside m. In the latter court, if the defendant plead a subtle plea, to ensuare the plaintiff, the court will permit the plaintiff to sign judgment, unless the defendant will amend n. But, unless the plea be manifestly absurd on the face of it, or probably a sham plea, the plaintiff, in the King's Bench, will not be justified in signing judgment as for want of a plea, without a previous application to the court, which is also necessary, after the defendant has been ruled to abide by his plea. If the defendant plead in abatement, without an affidavit of the truth of the plea, or a plea of tender without paying money into court, or if, after craving oyer of a deed, he do not set forth the whole of it, the plaintiff, in either of these cases, may sign judgment as for want of a plea. But judgment cannot be signed, in the King's Bench, after a plea in abatement, because the affidavit to verify the truth of it was sworn before the defendant's attorney. And in general, when the matter is doubtful, it is the safest course not to sign judgment, but to take issue on the plea, demur thereto, or move the court to set it aside.

When sham pleas, however, are pleaded, calculated to raise issues requiring different modes of trial, as a set off for money due on a recognizance or judgment, the issue upon which is triable by the record, and for money due on simple contract, the issue upon which is triable by the country, the court of King's Bench, on an affidavit that the pleas are false, will suffer the plaintiff to sign judgment as for want of a plca, and make the defendant, or his attorney, pay the costs occasioned by the pleas, with the costs of the application. And the plaintiff may sign judgment, as for want of a plea, if the plea be palpably a sham plea k. So, where a sham plea is such as to make it necessary for the plaintiff's attorney to consult counsel, and thereby cause delay and expense, the court will permit the plaintiff to sign judgment, and make the attorney pay the costs1: And, in a similar case, the costs were ordered to be paid by the attorney, though it appeared that he was expressly instructed by the defendant to plead a dilatory plea m. But the court of King's Bench will not grant a rule for the plaintiff to sign judgment as for want of a plea, merely on an affidavit that the plea is false, unless it be also shewn that it is vexatious, and calculated to create unnecessary delay and expense ". ment as for want of a plea, on the ground that improper pleas have been pleaded, there must be an affidavit, in the King's Bench, that they are untrue. But if such pleas have been pleaded under a rule to plead double, it is not necessary first to move to set saide the rule.

So, if the defendant plead in abatement to one count, and in bar to others, after the four days allowed for pleading in abatement, it seems that the plaintiff may sign judgment s. But a judge's summons returnable before judgment signed, though after the time for pleading has expired, operates as a stay of proceedings h; therefore, the plaintiff in such case cannot sign judgment, without first attending the summons h: And, in general, though a plea be not pleaded in due time, yet if the other party do not take advantage of it immediately, the defendant may deliver his plea at any time before judgment is actually signed against him i.

ters being drawn up, or instructions given for it to the clerk of the rules, they are considered, in the King's Bench, as a nullity, and the plaintiff may sign judgment ; though it seems that, in the Common Pleas, the practice is for the defendant to apply to the court, to strike out one of them b: And, in both courts, the plaintiff may sign judgment, if the plea, when necessary, be not signed by a counsel c, or serjeant d.

A judgment by default, we have seen., is irregular, when the defendant, in an action not bailable, has not been served with a copy of process; or when there has been no declaration regularly delivered, or filed and notice thereof given to the defendant ; or when it is signed before the defendant's appearance, or without entering a rule to plead, or demanding a plea, when necessary; or before the time for pleading is expired; or after a plea has been regularly delivered, or filed s. Afterwards, the prothonotaries were deputed and appointed by the court, to take order for the entering of all such judgments, before they were entered of record; and a rule was made, for preventing abuses, that " no clerk or attorney should enter of record any of the said judgments, or set down any costs of suit thereon, before the said costs were rated and allowed by one of the judges of this court, or by the prothonotary in whose office the same should be entered of record, and warrant given by him, under his hand, for the entering of the said judgment *:" And, by a subsequent rule, "the protho- When signed. notaries shall not sign any judgment by confession, either by non sum informatus or nihil dicit, unless the same be brought to be signed within twenty days after the end of Trinity, Michaelmas, or Hilary term, and at or before the first day of Trinity term, in every year; unless the attorney or clerk do produce before them a warrant or warrants of attorney, bearing date after the end of such term, and then the judgments on such warrants so produced, may be signed at or before the essoin day of the succeeding term in every year, and not after b:" But, notwithstanding this rule, judgments are now signed at any time in the vacation c. In the King's Bench by bill, or in the Common Pleas, judgments by Entries on roll. default are entered on a roll of the term of which they are signed; but, in the King's Bench by original, they are entered of the term of the declaration: and, in the latter court, the entry is the same, whether the judgment be for want of a plea, or for not rejoining, surrebutting, or joining in demurrer, or for not returning the paper book; but, in the Common Pleas, where the pleadings are supposed to be entered of record as they are pleaded, the judgment roll states the previous proceedings, and the particular default upon which the judgment is given. In the King's By whom made, Bench, the entries are made by the plaintiff's attorney; in the Common Pleas, by the clerk of the judgments, with whom the writ of inquiry is left a for that purpose e; and there is no necessity, in that court, for a subsequent continuance, between the parties, after judgment by default, and writ of inquiry awarded f: but, in the King's Bench, it is said to be otherwise.

By the late bankrupt and it is provided that "no treditor, though for a valuable consideration, who shall sue out execution upon any judgment chained by default, confession, or nil divit, shall avail himself of such execution, to the prejudice of other fair creditors, but shall be paid rateable with such creditors." On this statute, the court of King's Bench would not set aside an execution issued upon a judgment obtained by nil divit, and served and levied by seizure upon the property of a bankrupt, before his bankruptcy; the statute not rendering the execution in such case void, but merely enacting, that the plaintiff in such execution shall be paid rateably with the other creditors.

In general.

By reference to master, in K. B. or prothonotaries, in C. P. in actions on bills or notes.

On covenants for payment of sum certain, &c.

After interlocutory judgment, the amount of the damages sustained by the plaintiff is ascertained, either by reference to the master in the King's Bench, or prothonotaries in the Common Pleas, or by writ of inquiry. In general, a writ of inquiry is awarded: but this is a mere inquest of office, to inform the conscience of the court; who, if they please, may themselves assess the damages, with the assent of the plaintiff c, or direct them to be assessed by the proper officer: And it is accordingly the practice, in actions upon bills of exchange and promissory notes, instead of executing a writ of inquiry, to apply to the court in term time'd, on an affidavite of the nature of the action, &c. for a rule to shew cause f, why it should not be referred to the master in the King's Bench, or prothonotaries in the Common Pleas, to see what is due for principal and interest, and to tax tho plaintiff his costs, and why final judgment should not be signed for that sum, without executing a writ of inquiry; upon which the court will make the rule absolute h, on an affidavit of service, unless good cause be shewn to the contrary i: In vacation, a judge on summons, and the signature of counsel, will grant his fiat k for drawing up the rule! And a similar rule or order may be obtained, in actions on covenants for the payment of a sum certain m, as upon a mortgage , or for rent o, or arrears of an anmulty of the poor on an award. So, where there was a demorrer to one count on a bill of exchange, and judgment for the plaintiff, and a pleas to other counts on which issue was jained, the court of King's Bench referred it to the master, to see what was due to the plaintiff on the former. In such case, however, a nolle prosequi must be entered on the other counts d. But this entry need not be made before the reference to the master: It is sufficient, if done at any time before final judgment.

In the King's Bench, where interlocutory judgment was signed, and the plaintiff died on a subsequent day in the term, the court granted a rule to compute principal and interest on the bill on which the action was brought f: and a similar rule was made absolute, on producing a copy of On copy of the bill, verified by affidavit of the plaintiff's attorney; the original having been stolen out of his pocket, and no tidings of it obtained s. In the Ex- In Exchequer. chequer, it was not formerly usual to refer the question of damages to the master, in actions upon bills of exchange, &c. h; but this practice has since been adopted, and put upon the same footing as in the other courts 1.

The practice we are now speaking of is confined to cases, where it ap- When not pears on the declaration, that the action is brought upon bills of exchange or promissory notes k, or other actions wherein the quantum of damages depends on figures, and may be as well ascertained by the master or prothonotaries, as before a jury: And therefore, where the defendant had suffered judgment by default, in an action of assumpsit on a foreign judgment, the court of King's Bench refused to make the rule absolute, for a reference to the master; saying, this was an attempt to carry the rule further than had yet been done; and as there was no instance of the kind, they would not make a precedent for it 1. In a subsequent case m, the court refused to make the rule absolute, in an action upon a bill of exchange for foreign money; the value of which is uncertain, and can only be ascertained by a jury n: and, in another case o, they would not direct the master to allow re-exchange, in an action upon a bill of exchange drawn in Scotland, upon and accepted by the defendant in England. It should also be observed, that such a rule cannot be had in assumpsit for a sum certain, due upon an agreement p; nor in an action upon a bottomree bond q; or to ascertain the damages sustained by the plaintiff, in an action: of debt on a judgment recovered on a bill of exchange : And in covenant

The plaintiff, in the King's Bench, may obtain a rule for referring a bill of exchange to the master, on the day on which interlocutory judgment is signed for want of a pleab, or for not producing the record c; but where it is signed upon demurrer, it has been the practice not to move for such rule until the following day d: And, in that court, the rule absolute for computing principal and interest on a bill of exchange, must be served on the defendant, before final judgment can be signed, as well as the rule nisie; and in serving the latter rule, where there are two defendants, the service should be on both f; but it is sufficient to serve a copy of the rule, without shewing the original f. It has also been decided, in the King's Bench, that the plaintiff's attorney is not bound to serve the defendant with notice of computing principal and interest, on a rule or order of reference s, or a copy of the master's appointment for that purpose h, unless the defendant has obtained and served him with a rule to be present at the taxation 1; the defendant having notice of the proceeding, by service of the rule nisi, so as to be present if he pleases. A writ of inquiry of damages is a judicial writ, issuing out of the court where the action is brought; and must be sued out, after interlocutory judgment, in all actions wherein damages are recoverable, as in assumpsit, covenant, case, trespass, &c. except where they are referred to the master or prothonotaries, on bills of exchange or promissory notes, &c., or are confessed by the defendant. After final judgment, a writ of in- After final quiry is in general unnecessary; and the court of King's Bench would not direct such a writ to be executed, at the instance of the defendant, after judgment by default in an action of debt. But where an action is brought on a judgment, the plaintiff may have a writ of inquiry, after judgment by default, to recover interest, by way of damages, for the detention of the debt c. And in actions upon bonds, or on any penal sum, for nonperformance of covenants, &c. a writ of inquiry is necessary, for assessing the damages, after judgment for the plaintiff on demurrer, or by confession or nihil dicit, by the statute 8 & 9 W. III. c. 11. § 8. In actions on the statute 2 & 3 Edw. VI. c. 13. for not setting out tithes, there must also be a writ of inquiry, after judgment by default, to ascertain the value of the tithes d. So, in an action of debt for foreign money, a jury must find the value of the money d: And it seems, that in debt for use and occupation, a writ of inquiry is necessary, after judgment by default, before signing final judgment d.

When the jury, upon the trial of an issue, omit to assess the damages, the omission may in some cases be supplied by a writ of inquiry c: As to which it seems, that where the matter omitted to be inquired by the principal jury, is such as goes to the very point of the issue, and upon which, if it had been found by the jury, an attaint would have lain against them by the party, if they had given a false verdict, there such matter cannot be supplied by a writ of inquiry; because thereby the party might have lost his attaint, which would not lie upon an inquest of office !. in detinue, where the jury omitted to assess the value of the goods, the court refused to supply the omission by a writ of inquiry. And so, where the jury who try the issue in replevin upon a distress for rent, omit to inquire of the rent in arrear, and value of the goods or cattle distrained, pursuant to the statute 17 Car. So, where the parties being at issue in assumpsit, a demurrer was joined upon the evidence, and the jury discharged, without assessing the damages; and afterwards judgment was given for the plaintiff, and a writ of inquiry of damages awarded; the court held, that though the same jury might have assessed the damages conditionally, yet it may as well be done by a writ of inquiry of damages, when the demurrer is determined; and the most usual course is, when there is a demurrer upon evidence, to discharge the jury without further inquiry f. Notice of inquiry, to whom given.

In country causes.

What notice required, in K. B. & C. P. The writ of inquity in ordinary cases may be executed, on due notice, before the sheriff or his deputy, or by leave of the court, under special circumstances, before the chief justice, or a judge of assize, as an assistant to the sheriff it. And where the writ of inquiry is executed before the chief justice, or a judge of assize, it is usual to move for the sheriff to return a good jury. The motion for this purpose is a motion of course in the King's Bench, requiring only counsel's signature. In the Common Pleas, it is made in court, and the rule is absolute in the first instance. But an inquisition taken before two under-sheriffs extraordinary, was set aside by the court of Common Pleas; for the high sheriff can appoint no name than one under-sheriff extraordinary, to take an inquest.

The notice of inquiry should be in writing ; and if the defendant have appeared, and his attorney be known, it should be delivered to such attorney k: But if the defendant have not appeared 1, or his attorney be unknown m, the notice should be delivered to the defendant himself, or left at his last place of abode: And, in a joint action, the notice of inquiry ought to be given to both defendants n. In country causes, if an agent be employed, notice of inquiry, in the King's Bench, should be delivered to the agent in town, who issues the subpænas, and not to the attorney in the country o; but, in the Common Pleas, it seems that it may be given either to the attorney in the country, or to the agent in town P. If the venue be laid in London or Middlesex, and the defendant live within forty computed a miles from London, there must in general be eight days' notice of inquiry, exclusive of the day it is given , and inclusive of that on which the inquiry is executed; which notice is also sufficient in country causes: for the statute 14 Geo. II. c. 17. § 4: which requires ten days' notice of trial at the assizes, does not extend to notices of inquiry. days' notice suf-

The object of the statute, in requiring fourteen days' notice to be given to defendants residing above forty miles from town, was to secure to them ficient. the full benefit of the notice for eight days, part of which time would necessarily be consumed in its reaching them in the country, and in giving them time to communicate upon it with their agents in town; and therefore a defendant, who was residing at an hotel in town, from the time of his arrest till he was served with notice of executing the writ of inquiry, was holden not to be entitled to more than eight days' notice in a town cause, though his general residence was above forty miles from town d. So, where the defendant was residing in London, before and at the commencement of the action, eight days' notice of executing a writ of inquiry was deemed sufficient, though the defendant had in the intermediate time permanently removed above forty miles from London, inasmuch as he had not given the plaintiff previous notice of such removal. But a defendant who is master of a vessel belonging to a port above forty miles from London, and who has no regular residence on shore, is entitled to fourteen days' notice of executing a writ of inquiry '. In replevin, after judgment In replevin. given on demurrer for the avowant, fifteen days' notice of executing the writ of inquiry must be given to the plaintiff, in like manner as where he is nonsuited before issue joined, on the statute 17 Car. Notice of inquiry, after notice of trial, in K.B.

In C. P. after notice of trial.

After demurrer to declaration.

'On issue of nul tiel record.

In Exchequer, after notice of trial

After demurrer to declaration, &c.

In the King's Bench, when the plaintiff, upon any pleading of the defendant, tenders an issue, and the paper book is made up and delivered with notice of trial, and the defendant strikes out the similiter, and returns the book with a demurrer, if judgment be given thereon for the plaintiff, and a writ of inquiry be necessary to ascertain the damages, the defendant's attorney shall be obliged to accept notice of executing the writ of inquiry, from the time of giving the notice of trial b; but the plaintiff in such case ought to give notice of the hour and place of executing the inquiry . In the Common Pleas it is a rule, that " in every cause where the plaintiff concludes to the country, and gives notice of trial upon the back of his pleading, if the defendant do not join issue, thereon before the rule is out, the defendant's attorney shall, after judgment obtained, be obliged to accept notice of executing a writ of inquiry, from the time that notice of trial was so given on the back of such pleadingd:" And it is also a rule in that court, that "where the defendant demurs to the plaintiff's declaration, the defendant's attorney shall be obliged to accept notice of executing the writ of inquiry, on the back of the joinder in demurrer:" And where the defendant pleads such a dilatory plea as the plaintiff is obliged to demur to, his attorney shall accept notice of executing the writ of inquiry, on the back of the demurrer e:" So, upon an issue of nul tiel record, notice of executing a writ of inquiry may be given, in the Common Pleas, upon the issue book, as well as upon a joinder in demurrer f. In like manner, it is a rule in the Exchequer g, that "in all cases where the plaintiff concludes to the country, the plaintiff's attorney or clerk in court may give notice of trial, at the time of delivering his replication or other subsequent pleading, in case issue shall be joined thereon, or of executing a writ of inquiry in default of joining issue; which shall be deemed good notice of trial, from the time of the delivery of such replication, or other subsequent pleading, in case issue shall be joined; and if the defendant do not join issue on such replication, or other subsequent pleading, and the plaintiff sign judgment for want thereof, the defendant's attorney or clerk in court shall take notice of executing a writ of inquiry, from the time that notice thereof was given as aforesaid: And that in all cases where the defendant demurs to the plaintiff's declaration, replication, or other subsequent pleading, the defendant's attorney or clerk in court shall be obliged to accept notice of executing a writ of inquiry, on the back of the joinder in demurrer; and in case the defendant pleads a dilatory plea, to which the plaintiff is obliged to demur, the defendant's attorney or clerk in court shall be obliged

When the inquiry is to be executed before the chief justice, or a judge of assize, the notice should be given for the sittings or assizes generally a; but otherwise the notice should express the particular time and place of executing it b. A writ of inquiry may be executed at any time before, or on the day it is returnable c; but not on a Sunday c: and where the notice was to execute it by ten o'clock, the court set it aside for uncertainty e. So, in the Common Pleas, notice of executing a writ of inquiry between the hours of ten or eleven and two o'clock, has been deemed insufficient f; but notice of executing an inquiry at eleven o'clock is good, if executed before twelves: And, in that court, where notice was given of executing a writ of inquiry on Tuesday the fourteenth day of January instant, when the fourteenth of January fell on a Thursday, the court ref fused to set aside the execution of the writ of inquiry on that ground, rejecting the word Tuesday as surplusage h. So, where notice of executing a writ of inquiry was given for Wednesday the eleventh of June instant, when Wednesday fell on the tenth of June, on which day the writ of inquiry was executed, the court refused to set it aside, the defendant not swearing that he was thereby misled i. The usual way is to give notice that the inquiry will be executed between two certain hours k, as between ten and twelve o'clock in the forenoon, or between four and six in the afternoon of a particular day, on or before the return of the writ. On a notice of inquiry so given, however, the party is not tied down to the precise time fixed by the notice; for the sheriff may have prior business, which may last beyond it: Therefore, where notice was given of executing an inquiry, between ten and twelve o'clock, and the irregularity complained of was, that the defendant and his witnesses attended till twelve, and after the hour was elapsed, and they were gone, the writ was executed; the court of King's Bench refused to set aside the inquisition, conceiving it was clearly a trick of the defendant's attorney, to leave the place immediately after the hour was passed 1.

With regard to the place of executing an inquiry, it must be executed Place of exewithin the county where the action is laid. In London, inquiries are executed at the secondaries' office, No. 28, in Coleman street; in Middlesex, at the sheriff's office, in Red Lion square; and in other counties, at a certain place appointed for that purpose: and the notice should be given accordingly. Notice of inquiry may be continued b, or countermunded in this manner as notice of trial; but, in the King's Bench, the continuance or countermand of notice of inquiry must be delivered to the agent in town, and not to the attorney in the country. A notice of inquiry can be continued but once ; and the notice of continuance should be served two days previous to the time appointed for executing the inquiry to but if notice of a writ of inquiry, to be executed at a particular hour and place, be continued, the notice of continuance need not express any hour or place. The notice of countermand ought to be in writing; and may in this court be given to the attorney in the country, as well as the agent in town h: And it seems, that where eight days notice is sufficient for effecting an inquiry, two days notice of countermand will serve; but if fourteen days notice of inquiry be requisite, then there must be six days notice of countermand.

In London and Middlesex, the writ must be left at the sheriff's office, the day before the time appointed for its execution k: And if either party propose to attend by counsel, he should give notice thereof to his adversary 1; or he will not be allowed for it in costs. If such notice be not given, the sheriff, if required, will postpone the execution of the inquiry, till the other party has an opportunity of attending by counsel m: And, in the King's Bench, it is in all cases in the discretion of the master, on the taxation of costs, to allow or disallow the fee to counsel, as well as the expense of preparing the brief, &c." Previous to the execution of the inquiry, witnesses may be subpænaed on either side o: and the execution of it may be adjourned by the sheriff, after it is entered upon p. If the plaintiff do not proceed to execute the inquiry according to notice, or countermand in time, the defendant, on an affidavit of attendance and necessary expenses, shall have his costs, to be taxed by the master or prothonotaries 4. The motion for this purpose is a motion of course, in the King's Bench, requiring only counsel's signature: In the Common Pleas, the costs are granted on a side-bar or treasury rule.

Letting judgment go by default is an admission of the cause of action: and therefore, where the action is founded on a contract, the defendant

So, where an action was brought on a policy of assurance on a foreign ship, wherein there was a stipulation, that the policy should be deemed sufficient proof of interest, the plaintiff, on the writ of inquiry, was only bound to prove the defendant's subscription to the policy, without giving any evidence of interest c. And suffering judgment by default, in an action for use and occupation, amounts to an admission that the defendant occupied a house under the plaintiff, who need not shew that it was his own house; and if the defendant insist that he did not occupy the particular house to which the evidence has been directed, but some other, he must prove the fact d. On Interest, in what the execution of a writ of inquiry, though it has not been usual, a sheriff's jury ought to give interest, in cases where the courts at Westminster would allow it . And although the jury, on the execution of a writ of inquiry, cannot give interest in an action for work and labour, yet where they have deducted ten per cent. on the whole amount of the plaintiff's demand, in conformity with an agreement between the parties, that such deduction should be made for ready money, they may re-allow the plaintiff a proportional part of that deduction, on the balance found to be due to him, and which had remained for a considerable time unpaid f. In Practice, in the Common Pleas, there is no rule for judgment given on the return of the inquiry, but the plaintiff's attorney waits four days after the return day, inclusive of both days; after which, the inquisition being previously obtained from the sheriff, the prothonotaries will tax the costs thereon 1: And, in that court, when final judgment is signed upon an inquisition on a writ of inquiry, the inquisition must immediately be left with the Plaintiff may afterwards sue for causes of action, of which he gives no evidence on inquiry.

Pending the rule for judgment, or time allowed in the Common Pleas, the defendant may move to set aside the inquisition, for want of due notice b; or on account of an objection to the jury, or mode of returning them, as that some of the jury were debtors taken out of prison for the purpose of attending c, or that they were returned by the plaintiff's attorney d; or for excessive damages c. And where the damages are obviously too small f, and there has been any contrivance by the defendants, or surprise on the plaintiff h, or the sheriff or jury have been mistaken in point of law , but not otherwise k, the plaintiff may, at anytime before final judgment signed 1, move to set aside the inquisition. But the court will not grant a rule for setting aside an inquisition, after judgment by default, in an action for words, on the ground that the under-sheriff directed the jury to consider the poverty of the defendant, in mitigation of damages " On motion to set aside an inquisition, taken on a writ of inquiry before the under-sheriff, for excessive damages, the court would not admit minutes of what passed before the under-sheriff to be read, unless verified by affidavit; and such motion cannot be supported, on the affidavits of the parties themselves, unless corroborated by others n. And where the defendant moved to set aside an inquisition for excessive damages, the court of King's Bench imposed the terms of bringing part of the damages into court, before they granted a rule to show cause o.

If two defendants in trespass suffer judgment by default, and the plaintiff execute writs of inquiry, and take several damages against them separately, it is irregular; and if the plaintiff enter up final judgment for those several damages against the defendants, it is erroneous. But the court of King's Bench will permit the plaintiff to set aside his own proceedings, before final judgment, on payment of costs p. And if the plaintiff, on the execution of the writ of inquiry, give no evidence on one or more of the counts in his declaration, he may afterwards sue for the causes of action contained in those counts: Thus, where the plaintiff in a former nction declared on a promissory note, and for goods sold, but upon executing a writ of inquiry, after judgment by default, gave no evidence on the count for goods sold, and took his damages for the amount of his promissory note only, the court of King's Bench ruled, that the judgment thereupon was no bar to his recovering, in a subsequent action, for the goods sold .

The want of a writ of inquiry is aided by the statute of jeofails b. Want of, aided. And where a writ of inquiry had been many years executed, and costs New writ and taxed upon it, but no final judgment entered up; there being occasion to dered, prove the debt in Chancery, and the writ of inquiry being lost, a rule was made, in the King's Bench, for a new writ of inquiry and inquisition, according to the sheriff's notes, and that the master should indorse the costs, which by the commitment book appeared to have been taxed. After an award of a writ of inquiry of damages, if final judgment be given for a certain sum, with the plaintiff's assent, it is no cause of error, although the record contain no entry of an inquisition executed d.

After final judgment, we have seen e, a writ of inquiry is in general un- Proceedings on necessary. But, by the statute 8 & 9 W. III. c. 11. § 8. it is enacted, that " in all actions upon any bond or bonds, or on any penal sum, for " non-performance of any covenants or agreements in any indenture deed

Construction of statute.

A Sea

This statute was made in favour of defendants; and it is highly remedial, being calculated to protect them against the payment than is justly due, and to take away the necessity of proceedings in equity, to obtain relief against an inconscientious demand of the whole penalty, in cases where small damages only have accrued a: and accordingly, it has received a very liberal construction. Where covenants and agreements are contained in the condition of a bond, they are holden to be within the statute, as well as where they are in a different instrument b: And though it was formerly doubted c, yet it is now settled, that the statute is compulsory on the plaintiff, to proceed in the method it prescribes d. conditioned for the payment of an annuity, or of money by instalments, is holden to be within the statute; or a bond conditioned to perform an awards. And where a bond, upon the face of it, appeared to be conditioned for the payment of a sum certain, but by an indenture of the same date, declaring the purposes for which the bond was executed, it was agreed that it should be lawful for the obligees to commence an action npon the bond, and to proceed to judgment, whenever they should think fit; and upon judgment being obtained to issue execution, and that the judgment should be a security for the payment to the obligues, on demand, of all sums of money which then were, or might thereafter become due to them; and judgment having been entered up by virtue of this deed, the obligees issued execution, without assigning breaches or executing a writ of inquiry; the court held, that this was a bond substantially conditioned for the performance of an agreement, within the statute 8 & 9 W.III. c. 11. § 8. and that the obligees ought to have assigned breaches thereon h. But the provisions of the statute do not extend to post obit bonds i, or other bonds conditioned for the payment of money k, which are provided for by the statute 4 Ann. c. 16. § 13.; nor to bail, or replevin m bonds;

now, as it seems, to bonds given to the Lord Chancellor, by the petitioning oreditor for a commission of bankrupt, under the statute 6 Geo. IV. c. 16: § 13. And where judgment is entered upon a warrant of attorney, it is not within the statute. It is not necessary for the crown to assign breaches, under the above statute, and if any one breach he proved, the crown is entitled to judgment?

. In cases where the statute applies, judgment is signed for the penalty, as at common law but it can only stand as a security for the damages sustained: and, after signing judgment, the plaintiff must proceed on the statute by suggesting breaches on the roll; of which a copy should be given the defendant, with notice of inquiry for the sittings or assizes s. A writ of inquiry h is then sued out, and delivered to the sheriff; who summons the jury, and returns the jury process, with a panel of the names of the jurors: and the writ being executed, is returned to the court, with the finding of the jury 1, and execution awarded for the damages and costs: But no second judgment is given by the court, on the return of the inquiry . On the execution of a writ of inquiry on this statute, after judgment on demurrer, the execution of an instrument which the defendant had stated, in setting out the condition of the bond in his plea, need not be proved 1: But, in debt on bond conditioned for the performance of covenants, if the condition be not set out in the pleadings, the plaintiff, on executing a writ of inquiry under the statute 8 & 9 W. III. c. 11. must prove that the bond mentioned in the suggestion, and produced to the jury, is that on which the action was brought m.

Preparing for defence, on the HITHERTO we have supposed the action to be rightly brought, and considered what is to be done, when the defendant has no merits. We have seen that in such case he should compromise or compound the action, confess it, or let judgment go by default. But when the defendant has merits, he should prepare for his defence; and for that purpose may, if circumstances render it necessary, crave oyer and copy of deeds, &c. claim inspection and copies of written instruments, books, court rolls, &c. or call for particulars of the plaintiff's demand; or he may move the court to change the venue, consolidate actions unnecessarily divided, or strike out superfluous counts; or he may bring money into court.

Oyer of deeds, &c. in what cases demandable by defendant, and how given.

By plaintiff.

Oyer of deeds, &c. is demandable by the defendant, or by the plaintiff. If the plaintiff, in his declaration, necessarily make a profert in curiff of any deed, writing, letters of administration, or the like, the defendant may pray oyer of the deed, &c. *; and must have a copy thereof delivered to him, if demanded, paying for the same after the rate of four-pence per sheet b: And a defendant, who prays over of a deed, is entitled to a copy of the attestation, and names of the witnesses, as well as of every other part of the deed c. So likewise, if the defendant in his plea make a necessary profert in curid of any deed, &c. the plaintiff may pray over d; and shall have a copy, at the like rate c: And the party, of whom over is demanded, is bound to carry the deed, &c. to the adverse party f. In an action on a bond, in which articles are referred to, over of the bond may be demanded, but not of the articles s; though time to plead may be obtained, till the plaintiff give a copy of them, on an affidavit that defendant has no copy s.

Formerly, demanded in court. Formerly, all demands of over were made in court, where the deed is by intendment of law, when it is pleaded with a profert in curiâ<sup>h</sup>: And therefore, when ager is craved, it is supposed to be of the court, and

In practice however, over is now usually demanded, and granted by the attornies b: And where the defendant is entitled to have oyer of a deed, it cannot be dispensed with by the court p nor can he be compelled to plead without it; even though the deed be lost. not be granted of a deed operating under the statute of uses d: And where a tenant in a writ of entry pleaded such deed, without a profert, and over was required to be granted by a judge's order on a given day; the court directed such order to be rescinded; and the demandant having signed judgment for want of over, it was also set aside, the order being mercly in the nature of an interlocutory proceeding d. When the deed is in the hands of a third person, the court will oblige him to give over, and produce it e.

When a deed is shewn in court, it remains there, in contemplation of When necessary law, all the term in which it is shewn; for all the term is considered in law but as one day: and at the end of the term, if the deed be not denied, the law doth adjudge it to be in custody of the party to whom it belongs; but if it be denied, then it shall remain in court till the plea is determined; and if it eventually turn out not to be a good deed, it shall be destroyed f. But letters testamentary, or of administration, are not supposed to remain in court all the term; for the party may have occasion to produce them elsewhere s. Hence it is, that over of a deed cannot in strictness be demanded, but during the same term it is pleaded h: And as a general imparlance is always to a subsequent term, it follows that over of a deed cannot be demanded after such imparlance i. A different doctrine is indeed laid down in one case k, which must be understood of a special imparlance, to another day in the same term.

.The defendant having demanded over of a deed, ought to insert it as the Inserting deed head of his pleat and if he do not, the plaintiff, in the Common Pleas, may insert it there for him, in making up the issue *: but it is otherwise in the King's Bonch, where the defendant may either set forth the over in his plea or not, at his election b. If a plaintiff state the legal effect of a deed, the defendant has a right to see it on over; and if the meaning vary from that attributed to it in the declaration, he should, in order to take advantage of the variance, plead non est factum, without setting out the deed: If it do not support the breach, he should set it out and demurc: and if he set it out, the court must adjudge upon it, as parcel of the record; though it was not strictly demandable at the time of granting it d. If the defendant, however, set out the deed on over, and plead non est factum, the only question at the trial of that issue 1s, whether the deed, whereof the tenor is set out, was executed by the defendant or not . But the defendant, in the King's Bench, is not bound to set forth the over in his pleaf; and if he do not, the plaintiff, if he would avail himself of the deed, must pray it to be enrolled at the head of his replication s. If the Consequences of defendant, after craving over of a deed, do not set forth the whole of it, the plaintiff, we have seen h, may sign judgment as for want of a plea; but he cannot demur for that cause i: or if the defendant, in his plea, set out the deed untruly, the plaintiff by his replication may pray that it be enrolled, and so procure it to be truly set forth k: And if there be any variance, however trifling, between the deed and the over, it is fatal at the trial, on the plea of non est factum 1.

not compel a party to allow the inspection of his title deeds, and give a copy thereof, to a person who supposes that such deeds contain a reservation in his favour of manorial rights, unless it appear that the party holds the deeds as trustee for the applicants. In the Common Pleas, if one part only of an indenture be executed, the court will compel the party having the custody of it to produce it for intraction, upon an action commenced against him by the other party; unless he can shew some sufficient reason to the contrary b: And it is not a sufficient reason, that the plaintiff seeks for inspection, for the purpose of discovering some defeat in the deed c. Se, where the plaintiff made an affidavit, that he sued the defendant, to recover damages for breach of an agreement in not entering into partnership, pursuant to a partnership deed drawn up and executed by the plaintiff, but remaining in the custody of the defendant or his attorney, and that the plaintiff possessed neither a copy nor counterpart of the deed, the court granted a rule, enabling the plaintiff to inspect and take a copy of the deed, although the defendant swore that he had not executed the same d. But where two parts of an indenture were executed by both parties, each keeping one, and one part was lost, the court of Common Pleas would not compel the other party to produce his part, in order to support an action against him on the instrumente: So, upon an affidavit that no copy or counterpart of a lease, on which the plaintiff had sued, was in his possession or power, and that the attorney who drew the lease and counterpart had absconded; the court refused to order the defendant, who was in possession of the lease, to permit a copy of it to be taken! And inspection was refused in that court, to the plaintiff in replevin, of a deed to which he was no party, assigning to the avowant the reversion of the demised premises g. In the King's Bench, we have seen h, the plaintiff may have a rule nisi, for the defendant to produce a deed before the commissioners of the stamp office, to be stamped; or to the plaintiff's attorney, in order that he may ascertain the names of the witnesses, so as to subpæna them. And a rule for the production of a deed to be stamped, has been granted by the court of Common Pleas i: though, in a former case, that court refused to make a rule on the plaintiff, in an action on a bond, to allow an officer of the stamp duties to inspect the bond, because the defendant suspected it to be forged k.

dence, they would not grant it and accordingly, where an action was brought upon a special agreement contained in a note, and a rule made to show cause why the plaintiff should not give the defendant a copy; upon cause shewn, the rule was discharged, because the contract upon which the action was founded was a parol contract, of which the note was only evidence, and therefore the defendant ought not to have a copy b. In actions upon policies of assurance, the plaintiff, his attorney or agent, by the statute 19 Geo. II. c. 37. & S. shall, within fifteen days after being required so to do in writing by the defendant, his attorney or agent, declare in writing what sums he hath assured, or cause to be assured, in the whole, and what sums he hath borrowed at respondentia or bottomree for the voyage, or any part of it:" And, in actions of this nature, a judge at chambers will make an order for the assured to produce to the underwriters, upon affidavit, all papers in possession of the former, relative to the matters in issue . But under a judge's order to produce papers, and give copies of letters, &c. it is sufficient to give extracts of those parts of them which are relevant to the subject<sup>d</sup>. By the statute 53 Geo. III. c. 141. § 5. " the grantor of an annuity is entitled to a copy of every deed, &c. whereby it was granted; and if not delivered within twenty one days after notice, a summons may be taken out from a judge of the King's Bench or Common Pleas, and an order obtained thereon, for the production of such deed, &c. and for suffering the complainant to take copies thereof, and examine the same." In other cases, the general rule is, that a plain- In other cases. tiff shall not be obliged to furnish evidence against himself. And the court of King's Bench would not compel the plaintiff to-deliver to the defendant a copy of an agreement, in order to enable the latter to plead in abatement, that the agreement was signed jointly by himself and others 4. But where the action is founded on a written instrument, as a bill of exchange or promissory note g, special agreement, or undertaking in writing to pay the debt of a third person h, &c. if a special ground be laid, as that the demand is of long standing, and the defendant has no copy of the instrument, or that there is reason to suspect its being forged, &c. the court on motion, or a judge on summons, will make an order for the delivery of a copy of it to the defendant or his attorney, and that all proceedings in the action be in the mean-time stayed. In a late case, however, the court of Common Pleas would not compel the defendant to produce bills of exchange on which the action was brought, and permit the plaintiff to take copies of them, upon an affidavit, which was contradicted by the defendant, that the bills had come into his hands by fraud, and had not* been satisfied . And, in an action on a bill of exchange, that court would not compel the plaintiff to deposit the bill in the hands of the prothonotary, for the purpose of enabling the defendant to inspect it, in order to see whether or no it was a forgery. When the copy of an agreement is delivered to the defendant, in pursuance of a judge's order for that purpose, the judge, it is said, will in general make it a part of the order, that the defendant shall consent to make no objection to the tamp b.

Where the defendant has the custody of a written instrument, which he holds as a trustee, the courts in some instances will order him to give an inspection and copy of it to the plaintiff, at his expense, and to produce it for various purposes: Thus, where the defendant was a stake-holder, the court ordered him to give the plaintiff, at his expense, a copy of the articles for Epsom races, and to produce the same at the trial. So, where an action is brought by a sailor for his wages, on ship's articles, against the captain in whose custody they are, it seems that under the equity of the statute 2 Geo. II. c. 36. § 8. the defendant, if required, must produce and give a copy of the articles d. And where the dispute was between the plaintiff a factor in Smithfield, and the defendant a grazier, the court of King's Eench, upon the defendant's motion, made a rule for the plaintiff to shew cause, why he should not produce at the trial, the several books wherein he entered the account of beasts sold, and of monies received, on the defendant's account; and no cause being shewn, the rule was made absolute. The rule laid down by Lord Mansfield in cases of this nature was, that whenever the defendant would be entitled to a discovery, he should have it here, without going into equity f. And on a motion in trover, for inspection of lists of sales, the question being whether the goods were included in those sales, it was said by Buller, J. "The proper way is to move for a rule to shew cause, why the defendant should not have time to plead till the next term, unless the plaintiff will give the inspection required; and the reason for granting such time is, that the party may have the thing granted by applying to a court of equity; and therefore the court will give time, till he can file his bill for that purpose:" and a rule to shew cause was granted accordingly g.

Inspecting books, &c. of a private nature.

The courts in general will not oblige a plaintiff to discover the evidence in support of his action, previous to the trial; and therefore, they will not make a rule upon him to produce his books h, &c.: Nor can a rule be had for the inspection of books, &c. of a private nature, in the hands of third persons. So, where a commission of bankrupt had been sued out against the plaintiff and superseded, as being founded on a concerted act of bankruptey, and a second commission was issued, and the plaintiff brought trespass against the messenger to try its validity; the court of Common Pleas would not order the bankrupt's books to be produced to the

The books of the Quarter Sessions have been considered as public books, which every one has a right to inspect f. spect the parish books, so far as they apply to the question in dispute, may be absolute in the first instance. So, the books of the commissioners of the lottery, and their numerical lists, are of a public nature; and are kept by the commissioners in trust for the ticket holders, who are entitled to an inspection of them by rule of court. But access is not allowed to parish books c, &c., for the trial of questions of a private nature, or in collateral actions, brought by or against persons who have no interest therein. Court rolls, &c.

The Court rolls and books of a manor are of a public nature; the tenants have an interest therein, and the lord, who has the custody of them, is considered merely as a trustee g: Hence it is of course, in the King's Bench, to grant leave to inspect the court rolls, &c. of a manor, on the application of a tenant of the manor, who has been refused that permission by the lord. And one who has a prima facie title to a copyhold, is entitled to inspect the court rolls, and take copies of them, so far as relates to the copyhold claimed, though no cause be depending for it at the time '. So, where a copyhold tenant was forbidden by the lord to cut underwood upon the copyhold, without the lord's licence, the court granted a mandamus for the lord to permit the tenant to inspect the court rolls, so far as related to the cutting of underwood, after application to and refusal by the lord; although there was not any suit depending k. But this privilege is confined to the tenants of the manor: for the lord or tenants of a different manor, having no interest in the court rolls, &c. cannot claim the inspection of them 1: And even though the party applying be a tenant of the manor, the court will not grant a mandamus to inspect court rolls, for the purpose of supporting an indictment against the lord, for not repairing a road within the manor m. In the King's Bench, if the rule be moved for on behalf of a copyhold tenant, it is absolute in the first instance "; but otherwise it is only a rule nisio: In the Common Pleas, it is always a rule to shew cause p: and the court expect an affidavit to shew that the person, on whose behalf the motion is made, is a tenant of the manor, and has applied to the lord or his steward, for an inspection and copies of the

When taken out, in K. B.

In C. P.

When the declaration does not discusse the particulars of the plaintiff's demand, as in actions of assumpsit, or debt for goods sold, or work and labour, &c. the defendant's attorney or agent may take out a summons before a judge, for the plaintiff's attorney or agent to shew cause, why he should not deliver to the defendant's attorney or agent, the particulars in writing of the plaintiff's demand, for which the action is brought, and why all proceedings should not in the mean time be stayed h. This summons may be taken out, and an order obtained thereon, in the King's Bench, before the defendant has appeared i. And, in the Common Pleas, though the practice was formerly otherwise k, it is ordered by a late rule l, that " in future, defendants, on being served with process or arrested, will be allowed to obtain orders for the particulars of the plaintiff's demand, without waiting till appearance entered or bail put in, or declaration filed and delivered; and that in this respect, the practice of this court will be made conformable to that of the court of King's Bench." It is also usual in that court, on granting an order for particulars, which is considered as a matter of favour, to require from the defendant some admission; as of the signature of a note, &c.

In assumpsit for non-performance of a contract for the sale of a house, with counts to recover back the deposit, the plaintiff having in his first count alleged that the defendant, who was to make a good title, had delivered an abstract which was insufficient, defective and objectionable, the court of Common Pleas obliged the plaintiff to give a particular of all objections to the abstract, arising upon matters of fact; but said he was not bound to state in his particulars, any objections in point of law. So, if an action be brought on a bond conditioned for the performance In debt on of covenants, or to indemnify, &c. the defendant may call for a particular of the breaches for which the action is brought: And where a general form of declaring is given by act of parliament, as upon the statute 9 Ann. c. 14. or upon the 25 Gco. II. c. 36. it seems reasonable that the plaintiff, if required, should give an account of the particulars of his demand, in order to enable the defendant to prepare for his defence. But whenever the particulars of the demand are disclosed in the declaration, as in special assumpsits, covenant, or debt on articles of agreement, &c. or in actions on matters of record, an order for such particulars does not seem to be requisite.

In actions for wrongs, the injury complained of is in general stated In actions for in the declaration; and therefore, in such actions, it is not usual to make an order for the particulars: but circumstances may occur which render it necessary. And if a bill of particulars state the transaction upon which the plaintiff's claim arises, it need not specify the technical description of the right which results to the plaintiff out of that transaction d. After the delivery of a bill of particulars, the defendant, in the King's Beach, has the same time to plead, as he had when the summons for it was returnable. And in the Common Pleas, we have seen , the plaintiff cannot sign judgment for want of a plea, till the expiration of twenty four hours after the delivery of a bill of particulars, though the time for pleading be expired, and a demand of plea given, more than twenty four hours before that time. In the Exchequer, the defendant cannot obtain an order for the particulars of the plaintiff's demand, without an affidavits, that he is unacquainted with them: but he is entitled to receive such particulars from the plaintiff, although he may have had a statement of them before the action was brought h. And, in the Common Pleas, where the declaration was delivered at the same time as a bill of particulars which was insufficient, and another order was afterwards obtained for better particulars, the court held, that as the defendant's attorney had not returned the declaration, with the insufficient particulars, he had waived the irregu-An amendment was allowed, in the latter court, after the plaintiff had been monsuited for a defect in the bill of particulars, and a new trial granted on payment of costs c. And the plaintiff, in the Exchequer, is not entitled to be paid the costs of the first trial, previous to and as the terms of the amendment; but the court will order them to abide the event of the cause d. But where a particular was delivered under a judge's order, and the plaintiff delivered a second particular, without an order, containing merely an echo of the counts in the declaration, that court would not allow him to give evidence of any claim contained in the second particular, which was not included in the first e.

At the trial, the particulars of the plaintiff's demand, or of the defend- Effect of partiant's set off, if delivered, are considered as incorporated with the declaration, plea, or notice; and on production of the order, and proof of their delivery, the parties are not allowed to give any evidence out of them f. Therefore, where the particular of the plaintiff's demand was a promissory note only, and on being produced it appeared to be improperly stamped, so that it could not be given in evidence, the plaintiff, though he might otherwise have gone into the consideration of the note, was held to be precluded therefrom by his particular g. But an erroneous date to a bill of particulars, which is not calculated to mislead the defendant, will not preclude the plaintiff from recovering his demand h. So, where the plaintiff declared in debt for rent, without shewing in what parish the lands were situate, and delivered a particular of his demand, describing them in a wrong parish, the court held that the plaintiff might recover; it not appearing that any misrepresentation was intended, or that the defendant held more than one parcel of land of the plaintiff, so as to be misled by it i: So, where the plaintiff declared on three bills of exchange, in three several counts, but, according to his particular, only sought to recover on the bill set forth in the first count; and the defence was, that the defendants were not partners when the latter bill was drawn, and the plaintiff tendered in evidence the other two bills, for the purpose of establishing the fact of partnership; which evidence was rejected, on the ground that these bills were not included in the particular; the court of Common Pleas granted a new trial a. So, in ejectment to recover premises forfeited for non-payment of rent, a difference between the amount of rent proved to be due, and the amount demanded in the lessor of the plaintiff's particular, is not material b. And although the plaintiff, after delivering a particular of his demand, cannot at the trial himself give evidence out of it, yet if the defendant's evidence shew that there were other items which he might have included in his demand, he is entitled to recover all that appears to be due to him '. An item, however, of the plaintiff's demand, appearing on the face of the defendant's set off, given in under a judge's order, is not such an admission as supersedes the necessity of the plaintiff's proving it d. ## CHAP. XXIV.

Of CHANGING the VENUE, CONSOLIDATING ACTIONS, and STRIKING OUT COUNTS.

THE law having settled the distinction between local and transitory Origin, and proactions, it seems that towards the reign of Richard the second, it was gress, of changing the venue. greatly abused a; for a litigious plaintiff would frequently lay his action in a foreign county, at a great distance from where the cause of it arose, and by that means oblige the defendant to come with his witnesses into that county. To remedy which, it was ordained by statute b, "to the in-" tent that writs of debt and account, and all other such actions, be from " henceforth taken in their counties, and directed to the sheriffs of the " counties where the contracts of the same actions did arise; that if from " henceforth, in pleas upon the same writs, it shall be declared that the " contract thereof was made in another county than is contained in the " original writ, that then the same writ shall be utterly abated." The design of this statute was to compel the suing out of all writs arising upon contract, in the very county where the contract was made c, agreeably to the law of Henry the first d: Unusquisque per pares suos judicandus est, et ejusdem provinciæ; peregrina verð judicia modis omnibus submovemus . But as the statute only prescribes, that the count shall agree with the writ, in the place where the contract was made, it did not effectually prevent the mischief f: And therefore a statute of Henry the fourth g directs all attornies to be sworn, that they will make no suit in a foreign county; and there is an old rule of court h, which makes it highly penal for attornics to transgress this statute.

Soon after the statute of Henry the fourth, a practice began of pleading in abatement of the writ, the impropriety of its venue, even before the plaintiff had declared. At first, in the reign of Henry the fifth, they examined the plaintiff upon oath, as to the truth of his venue: But soon after, they began to allow the defendant to traverse the venue, and try the traverse by the country i. This practice being subject to much delay, the judges introduced the present method of changing the venue upon motion, on the equity of the above statute k; which Lord Holt says i, began in the time of James the first: And accordingly we find, that among the fees of the court of King's Bench, as found by a jury under the King's commission in 1630, one is, "for every rule to alter a visne "." The form of the rule and affidavit are also stated by Styles b, as established in 23 Car. I c.

In what cases changed, and in what not.

By plaintiff.

But whenever the practice began, it is now settled, that in transitory actions, the venue may be changed upon motion, either by the plaintiff or defendant: And, in an action against several defendants, it may it seems be changed at the instance of some of them only d. The plaintiff shall not directly alter his venue, after the essoin day of the next term after appearance; though he would pay costs, or give an imparlance e: Yet he may in effect do it, by moving to amend f; and that, after the defendant has changed the venues, or pleaded h, and even after two terms have elapsed from the delivery of the declaration i. An amendment was allowed in the King's Bench, in an action for a penalty under the bribery act, by altering the venue from the county at large to an interior jurisdiction, after the time limited for commencing a new action; the particularity of the declaration making it appear probable to the court, that the plaintiff was proceeding on the same fact for which the action was originally brought, when laid by mistake in the wrong county, though there was no affidavit that it was the same k: And in another case, such amendment was allowed, though it appeared that there were distinct causes of action in the two different counties, upon an affidavit that the plaintiff proceeded on a mistake, in supposing that both causes of action could be proved in the county where the election was holden 1. But, in the Common Pleas, where the defendant had put off the trial at the assizes, on the absence of a witness, the court refused to let the plaintiff amend, by changing the venue to Middlesex m. And that court will not amend a declaration, by changing the venue, unless the plaintiff shew substantial ground for it: Therefore, where the plaintiff moved to amend, by changing the venue from Bedfordshire to Middlesex, on the ground that the action depended on a question of law, as to the construction of an inclosure act, and would therefore be tried better and more expeditiously in town; the court, on an affidavit of the defendant, that the cause of action arose in Bedfordshire, discharged the rule n. dlesex, by laying the venue in another county, he cannot avail himself of his privilege by amending, so as to change the venue to Middlesex a.

The defendant is in general allowed to change the venue in all transi- By defendant, tory actions, arising in a county different from that where the plaintiff has laid it b; and he may even change it from London to Middlesex c, or vice versá d. But the venue cannot be changed in local actions e: And in When cause of transitory actions, where material evidence arises in two counties, the venue may be laid in either f: and if it be laid in a third county, the courts will not change it; for the defendant in such case cannot make the necessary affidavit, that the cause of action arose in a particular county, and not elsewhere s. Thus, where the venue was laid in London, and it appeared from the affidavit, that the cause of action arose upon a bridge called King's bridge, partly in the county of Kent, and partly in the county of the city of Canterbury, and not elsewhere, the court refused to change the venue h. And, for a similar reason, the venue cannot be changed in an action against a carrier i, or lighterman k, or for an escape l, or false return m. So, in scire facias to repeal a patent n, or action for infringing it o, the defendant cannot change the venue from Middlesex, to any other county; nor can the venue be changed, in such an action, from one county to another P.

When the cause of action arises out of the realm, the courts will not change the venue; because the action may as well be tried in the county where the venue is laid, as in any other where the cause of action did not arise q. So, where the cause of action partly arose in Derbyshire and partly in Ireland, the court of King's Bench refused to change the venue from London to Derbyshire, on an affidavit that the cause of action arose in the county of Derby and in Ireland, and not in London, or elsewhere than in the county of Derby and in Ireland : And as it is necessary, for changing the venue, that the cause of action should be wholly confined to a single county, the courts will not change it in an action of debt on bond

And it is now holden in the King's Bench h, agrecably to the practice of the court of Common Pleas i, that the venue cannot be changed, unless upon a special ground k, in an action upon a promissory note, or bill of exchange. And if an action be bona fide brought on a promissory note, the plaintiff may retain the venue, though the action be for other causes also; and the court will not restrain the plaintiff from proceeding in the county he has elected, for the other causes !. But the venue may still be changed in an action upon a policy of insurance, not being by deed m; or in any other action, the right of which is founded upon simple contract n. And in covenant upon a lease, for diverting water from a mill, &c. a view being proper to be had, the venue was changed in one case, to the county where the premises lay; though most of the plaintiff's witnesses resided in the county where the venue was laid o: But, from a subsequent case it seems, that the granting of a view is not alone a sufficient reason for changing the venue, in an action of covenant p.

The venue may be changed in an action for criminal conversation, on the usual affidavit, that the whole cause of action, if any, arose in the county to which it is changed; for the whole cause of action is the trespass committed on the plaintiff's wife q. So, the venue may be changed in an action for an assault r. And the court of Common Pleas will change it in a penal action, on the usual affidavit, as well as in any other s. In an action on the case, for overturning the plaintiff in a stage coach, the venue may be changed into the county where the accident happened t. And it is no reason against changing the venue, that if changed, the cause is likely to be tried by persons interested in the question, if they are likely to have as strong an interest on one side as on the other. But, in an action for scandalum magnatum, the courts will never change the venue b; because a scandal raised of a peer of the realm is not confined to any particular county, but reflects on him through the whole kingdom; and he is a person of so great notoriety, that there is no necessity for obliging him to try his cause in the neighbourhood. So, in an action for a libel, published in Libel. a newspaper in one county, and circulated in other counties c, or contained in a letter, written by the defendant in one county, and directed into another d, the court of King's Bench will not change the venue; because the defendant cannot make the common affidavit, that the cause of action arose in a single county, and not elsewhere: But the court will change the venue into a county in which the libel was both written and published e: And the distinction seems to be, between a libel which is dispersed through several counties, and a letter which is written in one county and not opened in another; on the former, the venue cannot be changed, on the latter it may f.

Action for scandalum magna-

Though the courts in general will not change the venue, when it is laid On special in the proper county, yet they will change it even then, upon a special ground g: Thus, in debt on bond, where the venue was laid in London, and the plaintiff's and defendant's witnesses lived in Lincolnshire, the court of King's Bench changed it into the latter county h. So, where the cause of action arose in another county than that in which the venue is laid by the plaintiff, and the justice of the case requires the trial to be had there, all the witnesses residing at a great distance from the county where the venue is laid, the courts, on the application of the defendant, will change the venue, on his agreeing to admit a particular fact, which in point of form exists in the original county i. But in an action by an attorney for an escape, it is not a sufficient ground for deviating from the general rule not to change the venue in such case, that the witnesses on both sides reside in the county to which the venue is wished to be changed k.

gestion on the roll, with a nient dedire, in order to have the trial in an adjoining county a: And the parties by consent may change the venue in local actions b, or have them tried out of their proper county, such consent being entered by suggestion on the roll c. On the other hand, though the courts will in general change the venue, where it is not laid in the proper county, yet if an impartial or satisfactory trial cannot be had there, they will not change it; as in an action for words spoken of a justice of the peace, by a candidate upon the hustings, at a county election d. And, in order to avoid delay, the courts will not change the venue, except by consent, or upon an affidavit of merits, into the city of Bristol or Norwich, where there are no Lent assizes, in Michaelmas or Hilary term ; nor into Hull, Canterbury, &c. where the justices of nisi prius seldom come s; nor into the city of Worcester or Gloucester, out of the county at large, because the assizes for the city and county at large are holden at the same place h. But now, since the latitat is holden to run into Wales, it has become the common practice to change the venue directly from an English to a Welch county e: and this is so much a matter of course, that the rule for changing it is absolute in the first instance, on the usual affidavit f. So, the venue has been frequently County palatine. changed into the counties palatine; because the courts can send down the record there by mittimus g: and, in one instance, it was changed into the next adjoining county h. But where the venue is changed into a county palatine, the courts will require an undertaking from the defendant, not to assign for error the want of an original i. And, in the Common Pleas, it is considered as a matter of favour to change the venue to a county palatine; and therefore, where it would be attended with inconvenience to the plaintiff, that court will not grant the indulgence k. So, they will not permit one only of several defendants to change the venue to a county palatine; because they have in that case no authority to bind the other defendants, to the terms of not assigning for error the want of an original 1: And where one of several defendants had suffered judgment by default in Middlesex, the court would not, on the application of another defendant, change the venue to a county palatine m. So, where the venue was laid in a county palatine, and after a writ of inquiry executed, and final judgment signed, a writ of error was brought, and error assigned for want of an original, the court would not amend the declaration, by changing the venuen: And where, in an action by original against four defendants, the venue was changed into a county palatine, on the application of three of them, who appeared separately by one attorney, and undertook not to assign the want of an original for error, the court of King's Bench required

Berwick upon Tweed. a similar undertaking from the fourth, who had appeared by a different attorney. Where the cause of action arises in Bernick, and the venue is laid elsewhere, it is not settled, whether it can be changed into Northumberland, as being the next adjoining county<sup>b</sup>: But it seems that the courts, upon a proper suggestion, will order the cause to be tried there <sup>c</sup>.

Motion for, when made, in K. B.

In the King's Bench, the motion for a rule for the defendant to change the venue is in general a motion of course, requiring only counsel's signature; and must formerly have been made within eight days after the declaration delivered d, which was the time allowed by the rules of the court, for pleading e: And accordingly it is said f, that if a declaration be delivered so early in term, that the defendant has eight days in that term, he cannot move to change the venue the next term. But it is now settled, that where the defendant has not obtained an order for time to plead, he may move to change the venue, at any time before plea pleaded s: and he is even allowed to change it, after an order for time to plead, though upon the terms of pleading issuably h; but not after an order for time to plead, where the terms are to plead issuably, and take short notice of trial, at the first or other sittings within term, in London or Middlesex; because a trial would by that means be lost i. And the venue cannot in general be changed, at the instance of the defendant, after plea pleaded; even though he afterwards have leave to withdraw his plea, and plead it de novo, with a notice of set-offk. In the Common Pleas, the motion is for a rule to shew cause; and may be made, as in the King's Bench, at any time before plea pleaded, notwithstanding the defendant may have previously applied for and obtained further time to plead m, unless he be under terms of taking short notice of trial in London or Middlesex "; or for the adjourned sittings after term in London o. But the motion cannot in general be made after the defendant has pleaded in abatement p, or in bar q; though if he plead pending a rule nisi for changing the venue, this will not prevent the court from making it absolute : and being for a rule to shew cause, the motion cannot regularly be made on the last day of term, unless the declaration was delivered so late in the term, that the defendant had not an opportunity of making it sooner a. In the Exchequer, In Exchequer. the court will not change the venue in any case where a trial has been had b: And in that court, the defendant cannot change the venue, after having obtained an order for time to plead, "on all the usual terms;" it being considered as one of these terms, that the defendant shall not afterwards move to change the venue c: Therefore, when the order is intended to be without prejudice to a change of venue, it should be so expressed in the summons c. And the court will not order the venue to be changed, after an order for time to plead, although the defendant proposes to give judgment of the term c.

In order to change the venue, when not laid in the proper county, the Affidavit, in defendant, in all the courts, must make a positive affidavit, that "the plaintiff's cause of action (if any,) arose in the county of A. and not in the county of B. (where the venue is laid,) or elsewhere out of the county of  $A^{d}$ ." An affidavit was necessary, because the motion to change the venue succeeded and was equivalent to a plea in abatement c; and the form of the affidavit, which was settled so long ago as the reign of King Charles the second , has been ever most religiously adhered to s. court, have occasion to change the venue in vacation, he may obtain a judge's order for that purpose, on producing a motion paper, signed by a counsel or serjeant, with the usual affidavit, and a copy of the declaration.

Bringing back venue, on undertaking to give material evidence. Yet, as it would be hard to conclude the plaintiff, by the single affidavit of the defendant, he is at liberty to aver, that the cause of action arose in the county where the venue is laid, and go to trial thereon at the same time that the merits are tried, by undertaking to give material evidence, arising in that county. This practice is equivalent to joining issue, that the cause of action arose in the first county: and if the plaintiff fail in proving it, he must be nonsuited at the trial; which has in this case the same effect, as quashing the writ by a judgment on a plea in abatement, viz. quod defendens eat sine die, and the plaintiff must begin again a.

Motion for discharging rule, in K. B.

When made.

In the King's Bench, when the rule to change the venue is absolute in the first instance, the only way by which the plaintiff can bring it back, is by a separate motion: And when the venue has been irregularly changed, as where the affidavit is defective b, &c. the motion is for a rule nisi, which the court will make absolute, on an affidavit of service, unless good cause be shown to the contrary. But when the venue has been regularly changed, the motion is a motion of course, requiring only counsel's signature; and the court will require an undertaking to give material evidence in the county in which the venue was originally laid c. It was formerly holden, in the King's Bench, that the plaintiff must move to discharge the rule for changing the venue, before replication d; and therefore that he came too late after issue was joined, and delivered to the defendant's agent e. But now as the plaintiff may alter his venue, by moving to amend f, so, for avoiding circuity, he may move to discharge the rule for changing the venue, on undertaking to give material evidence in the county where it is laid, at any time before the cause is tried: and it was accordingly discharged in one case, after the cause had been twice taken down for trial g. If the venue be changed from A. to B., on the usual affidavit, that the cause of action arose wholly in B., when in fact a part of it arose in another county, it was holden in one case h, that the venue might be brought back to A. as a matter of course. But in a subsequent case i it was determined, that though the venue be changed by the defendant upon a false affidavit, yet the plaintiff cannot bring it back to the county where it was first laid, without the usual undertaking to give material evidence in that county: and of course, if the venue be laid in a county where no part of the cause of action arose, it cannot be brought back into that county; nor will the court, in such case, change it into the county where the cause of action arose . So, where the venue had been changed by the defendant from London to Staffordshire, on the usual affidavit, that the cause of action arose in the latter county, and not elsewhere, the court of King's Bench would not bring it back to London, on an affidavit that the cause of action arose partly in Staffordshire and partly in Worcestershire, and that a material witness resided in London, and on the plaintiff's undertaking to give material evidence in one or other of those counties; particularly as no special facts were stated, to shew that the defendant's affidavit was not correct b. And mere hardship and delay In county palain being obliged to try a cause at Lancaster, when all the plaintiff's witnesses reside in London, is no ground for bringing back the venue to the latter place, unless the defendant was under terms to take short notice of trial in London, and had undertaken not to assign for error the want of an original writ c.

In the Common Pleas, the rule for changing the venue being only a rule Making absonisi, the court, on shewing cause, will either make it absolute or discharge it, according to circumstances d. On a motion to change the venue from London to Worcester on the usual affidavit, an affidavit stating that the action was brought for the seduction of the plaintiff's daughter, and that she was so ill it was not expected she would live till the assizes, was holden, in that court, to be an answer to the application 6. And it was determined in one case f, that an application to change the venue from A. to B. in an action for goods sold and delivered, upon an affidavit that the cause of action arose at B. and not elsewhere, might be successfully answered, by an affidavit that the goods were sold at C, without an undertaking by the plaintiff, to give material evidence in A. So, where it appeared that the action was brought on a charter-party of affreightment g, or that the cause of action principally arose in Ireland h, or partly in a foreign country i, the court discharged a rule for changing the venue. But the circumstance of an action's being brought on a writing, is not a ground for rejecting an application to change the venue, unless the declaration disclose the existence of the writing k. And in general, where there has Undertaking to been no irregularity, the court will not try the matter upon affidavits; but if there be a positive assidavit that the cause of action arose in a different county from that where the venue is laid, they will require an undertaking from the plaintiff to give material evidence in the latter county, if the

What is deemed material evidence, and what not.

whole cause of action is supposed to have arisen there, but if it arose in several counties, the court will retain the yenue, on the plaintiff's undertaking, in the alternative, to give material evidence in some of them b. And when the whole cause of action arises abroad, the court will discharge the rule for changing the venue, without any undertaking by the plaintiff to give material evidence in this country. In the Exchequer, as in the Common Pleas, the rule to change the venue is a rule to shew cause d: And it is the practice in the former court, as in the King's Bench, not to discharge the rule for changing the venue, without an undertaking to give material evidence in the county in which it was originally laid; it not being sufficient, as in the Common Pleas, when the cause of action is supposed to have arisen in several counties, to undertake to give material evidence in some of them e.

Originally it was required, that the plaintiff should give no evidence at the trial but what arose in the county wherein the venue was retained f: and if he gave no such evidence, he must have been nonsuited of course. But when it was laid down (more liberally,) in Swaine's case g, that the plaintiff might lay his venue in any county, wherein part of the cause of action arose, he was then bound only to give some evidence, (dare aliquam evidentiam,) and not the whole, in the county where the venue was laid h, or, in the Common Pleas, when it arose in several counties, in some of them i; which continues to be the rule at this day. however must be material: and therefore it is not sufficient merely to prove, that the witnesses to the contract reside in the county where the venue is laid k: And the undertaking to give material evidence, does not apply to collateral issues, but must be confined to matters stated in the In the King's Bench, when the venue has been changed, in an action brought by the assignee of a bankrupt, the plaintiff's undertaking, upon bringing it back to Middlesex, is satisfied by the production of the commission of bankruptcy tested at Westminster m. And, in an action for an escape, the issuing of the writ, under which the party was taken, is deemed material evidence n; or the patent, in an action for infriuging it ". So, where a rule to change the venue from Middlesex to London was discharged, on the plaintiff's undertaking to give material evidence in Middlesex, the court held that the undertaking was complied with, by proving a rule of court, obtained by the defendant in Middlesex, for paying money into court; although that rule was obtained after the rule for changing the venue was discharged a. So, where a rule to change the venue from A. to B. had been discharged, on the plaintiff's undertaking to give material evidence in C., proof of the delivery of the goods for which the action was brought, to a carrier in C., to be delivered to the defendant in B., was holden, in the Common Pleas, to be a sufficient compliance with the undertaking b: And, in that court, if the plaintiff retain the venue, on the usual undertaking to give material evidence within the county, yet if the plea and issue joined be such as to render that evidence irrelevant, the performance of the undertaking is it seems dispensed with: Thus, if the local evidence be the trading of a bankrupt, or a petitioning creditor's debt within a county, yet, if the defendant do not give notice of his intention to dispute the commission, under 6 Gco. IV. c. 16. § 90. so that the mere production of the commission and proceedings under it proves the trading and petitioning creditor's debt, the undertaking it seems need not be further complied with c. But it is no answer to an application, in the latter court, to change the venue from London to Essex, on the usual affidavit, in an action commenced by the assignees of a bankrupt, that the commission was issued, and bankruptcy declared in Middlesex, and the assignees chosen in London d: For though it was admitted, that if the cause of action arise in two different counties, the defendant has no right to change the venue, yet it was said, that the cause of action, and the right to bring the action, are two different things: A cause of action may arise in the life-time of a testator; but the right to bring the action by the executors must accrue after his death c.

When the venue is laid in the proper county, but there is a special Motion for ground for changing it into another, as where, in an action on a specialty, the witnesses reside in a distant county f, or a fair and impartial trial ground. cannot be had in that where the venue is laid f, the defendant should move the court, on an affidavit of the circumstances, for a rule to shew cause, why the action should not be laid in the county where the witnesses reside, or in the adjoining county to that in which the cause of action arose. The affidavit for this purpose should state the nature of the cause Affidavit, in of action, and of the defence theretog; and that all the witnesses reside in a distant county, or the grounds upon which a fair and impartial trial cannot be had in that where the venue is laid: And the court will not When made entertain a motion to change the venue, in an action on a specialty, before issue joined; for till then, they cannot know whether the defendant intends to set up any defence to the action, or what is the question intended to be tried, or the witnesses it will be necessary to examine on the trial of the cause.

Consolidating actions, in general.

If two actions are depending at one time, by the same plaintiff against the same defendant, for causes which may be joined, and particularly if the defendant be holden to bail in both, the courts will compel the plaintiff to consolidate the actions; and, on account of the vexation, to pay the costs of the application b. But the court refused to consolidate two actions brought on two bonds, although they were precisely similar to each other. And where three actions were successively brought by the same plaintiff against the same defendant, upon three notes of hand, which became due at different times, the court of King's Bench refused to consolidate them d. So, where three actions were brought for bribery, at an election for members of parliament, and in each action there were counts for forty different penalties, for distinct acts of bribery, that court would not consolidate, on account of the difficulty of doing justice between the parties, if so many distinct acts of bribery were to be discussed in one action c. And the courts will not consolidate actions against different defendants: Thus, where it was moved that four several declarations in trespass, against four different defendants, might be put into one, on an affidavit that the trespass, if any, was committed by all jointly; the court of King's Bench said, they never went so far as the case of different defendants, but only where the declarations are between the same parties: The plaintiff may have the benefit of the other's evidence, in his action against either; but this would be to deprive him of that benefit f. So, the court of King's Bench will not consolidate several informations in nature of quo warranto, against several persons, for distinct offices; for there must be an information against each, to enable each to disclaim s.

On policy of assurance.

Consolidation rule, in K. B.

In actions upon a policy of assurance, against several underwriters, the court of King's Bench, by consent of the plaintiff, will make a rule, on the application of the defendants, which is called the Consolidation rule h, for staying the proceedings in all the actions except one, upon the defendant's undertaking to be bound by the verdict in that action, and to pay the amount of their several subscriptions and costs, in case a verdict shall be given therein for the plaintiff. This rule, though attempted before without success i, was introduced by Lord Mansfield into general use, in the court of King's Bench, to avoid the expense and delay arising from the trial of a multiplicity of actions upon the same question a; and if the plaintiff will not give his consent, the courts have the power of granting imparlances in all the actions but one, till the plaintiff has an opportunity of proceeding to trial in that action b. On the other hand, if the plaintiff consent to the rule, the courts will make the defendants submit to reasonable terms; such as admitting the policy, producing and giving copies of books and papers, and undertaking not to file a bill in equity, or bring a writ of error c. In the Common Pleas, there is no rule of court, but a Judge's order, judge's order is obtained, for consolidating actions d.

The court will not allow a consolidation rule to be opened, on the ground Opening rule. that fresh evidence has been discovered, since it was entered into c: But it has been set aside, for the absence of a material witness, on bringing money into court f. And though the defendants undertake to be bound. In what cases by a verdict in one action, yet this must be understood to mean such a verdict as the courts think ought to stand, as a final determination of the matter; and therefore where the defendant, after a verdict for the plaintiff in one action, obtained a new trial, the court of King's Bench would not make a rule, previous to the new trial, for the other defendants to pay the money to the plaintiff, pursuant to their undertaking s. So, if the court think it reasonable to open a consolidation rule, and try a second cause, they will extend to the second trial, all such terms imposed on the successful party in the first, as are requisite for attaining the justice of the case h. And the consolidation rule relates solely to the verdict: Therefore, where several causes are consolidated, if a writ of error be issued in the cause tried, and execution taken out for want of bail in error being duly put in, and writs of error be issued in the other causes, and bail duly put in thereon, execution in those causes is thereby stayed. So, where the defendant having entered into a consolidation rule, the plaintiff obtained a verdict in the cause tried, which was afterwards turned into a special verdict, to enable the defendant to remove it by writ of error to the King's Bench, which was done, and bail put in accordingly; the court of Common Pleas stayed execution in the action against the defendant, till the determination of the writ of error was known, on his giving security to be bound by the judgment of the King's Bench k. But where several underwriters to a policy had entered into a consolidation rule, by which they undertook to abide the event of a verdict, and the cause was referred by consent before trial, and the arbitrator awarded the aggregate sum due to the assured from the underwriters at large; the court of Common Pleas would not order it to be referred back to the arbitrator, to insert the amount of the sum due and payable from each underwriter individually, without the consent of such underwriters. And, in that court, if a verdict be given in favour of the plaintiff, to the satisfaction of the judge who tried the cause, the plaintiff may proceed to tax his costs on the verdict, and get the defendant's attorney to attend the prothonotaries, who will tax the costs in the other actions; and if the debt and costs are not paid, the court should be moved, on an affidavit of the facts, for leave to enter up judgment and take out execution, &c. b. In actions upon a policy of assurance, against several underwriters, where the parties had not entered into a consolidation rule, the attorney for the plaintiff made out a full brief in one cause, but only a short statement in the rest; and the master, on taxation, having allowed for full briefs in all the causes, the court of King's Bench made a rule for him to review his taxation c.

Striking out superfluous counts.

As the courts, for the sake of avoiding expense, will consolidate unnecessary actions, so when it appears, on the face of the declaration, that some of the counts are superfluous, they will order them to be expunged; and if there be any vexation, will make the plaintiff pay the costs of the application d. Thus, where several counts in a declaration are precisely the same, or, which more frequently happens, there is only a formal difference between them, and the same evidence will support each e, as if the plaintiff declare specially and generally, for a matter that may be given in evidence upon a general count, the courts will expunge the superfluous So, if the declaration contain special counts for work and labour, besides the general counts, the special counts may be struck out on motion, if they appear to be unnecessary : and, in the King's Bench, where the plaintiff was an attorney, the rule was made absolute with costs f. And, if there be any doubt, the court will refer it to the master, to determine whether superfluous counts are introduced vexatiously g. But where there is a material difference between the counts, the courts will not determine upon affidavits, whether they are well founded in point of fact; for if not, the plaintiff will be sufficiently punished by being deprived of costs, on such of the counts as are found for the defendant h: Therefore, where the declaration, which was in debt for penalties, on the statute 9 Ann. c. 14. consisted of 480 counts, for money won at play of different persons, at different times, and a rule nisi was granted for limiting the declaration to ten counts, the court of King's Bench, on shewing cause, discharged the rule with costs a. So, where the declaration consisted of 286 counts, upon as many banker's notes for a guinea each, payable to bearer, with the common counts for money lent, and money had and received, the court refused to strike out the counts upon the notes; as it might have put the plaintiff to unnecessary difficulty in proof at the trial, or made it necessary for him to have a writ of inquiry on a judgment by default b. But in a similar case, the court made a rule by consent, to strike out all the counts but one, the defendant undertaking to permit all the other notes to be given in evidence, either before the master or a jury, under the count upon an account stated. And where the counts do not appear on the face of them to be superfluous, the court of King's Bench will not order them to be struck out, merely on the ground that the causes of action are not included in the particulars of the plaintiff's demand d. action on a bill of exchange, the court of Common Pleas refused to strike out, as unnecessary, a count for interest; though, besides counts on the bill, the declaration contained the usual money counts c. where there were counts in a declaration for work and labour as an attorney, and for work and labour generally, that court refused to strike out the former counts as unnecessary f.

If a declaration contain slanderous or impertinent matter, the court will Slanderous, imorder it to be expunged g: And where a declaration unnecessarily contains indecent language, the courts it seems will order it to be referred for scandal and impertinence; and direct the master or prothonotary to tax exemplary costs h. So, if a declaration be unnecessarily long, the court will expunge the superfluous matter: as where, in an action of covenant upon an indenture, the plaintiff recites the whole of it, and not merely such parts as are necessary; or where, in an action of trover, he sets out a long inventory of goods, with frequent and unnecessary repetitions and descriptions. So, in an action against forty six defendants, the court of Common Pleas ordered the word "defendants" to be substituted for the names of the defendants, in all the places where they occurred, except the first k. In these cases, when the objection is clear, the courts will order Expunging in the superfluous counts or matter to be expunged on motion, in the first instance; but otherwise they will refer it to the master 1, or prothonotary m, and decide upon his report. In general, however, the court of King's Bench will not refer a declaration to the master, to strike out superfluous

CHAP. XXV.

Of BRINGING MONEY into COURT.

THE practice of bringing money into court is said to have been first in- Origin of bringtroduced in the reign of Car. II. at the time when Kelyng was chief justice, to avoid the hazard and difficulty of pleading a tender a. And it is In what cases allowed in cases where an action is brought upon contract, for the recovery of a debt b, which is either certain, or capable of being ascertained by mere computation, without leaving any sort of discretion to be exercised by the jury c. In these cases, when the dispute is not whether any thing, but how much is due to the plaintiff, the defendant may have leave to bring into court any sum of money he thinks fit; and the courts will make a Rule for. rule, that unless the plaintiff accept of it, with costs, in discharge of the action, it shall be struck out of the declaration, and paid out of court, to the plaintiff or his attorney; and the plaintiff, upon the trial, shall not be permitted to give evidence for the sum brought in d: which rule should be accompanied with the general issue, or other plea, to the residue of the demand e.

Thus, in assumpsit f, or covenant g, for the payment of money, the defendant may bring money into court; and in covenant to find diet and lodging, or pay ten pounds, the court allowed him to bring in the ten pounds h. In debt for rent, the defendant may bring money into court in In debt for rent. the King's Bench i, as well as in the Common Pleas k, and Exchequer 1; although, in the former court, it was refused, in the time of Lord Hardwicke m; and in a case previous to that time n, the court said they never did it in debt. But there is a distinction between those actions of debt, wherein the plaintiff cannot recover less than the sum demanded, as on a record, specialty, or statute giving a sum certain by way of penalty o; and those actions wherein the plaintiff may recover less, as in debt for rent p, In debt for rent.

When an action, however, is brought for several penalties on the game laws, the defendant, we have seen c, may have leave to pay one penalty into court, leaving the plaintiff at liberty to proceed for the rest. And the defendant, by act of parliament, may bring money into court in debt, covenant, or other action on a policy of assurance c, or in an action for non-residence g.

In an action for general damages, upon a contract h, or for a tort i, or trespass k, as a tender cannot be pleaded, so the defendant is not allowed to bring money into court: And it cannot be brought into court, in an action for dilapidations 1. But in an action of assumpsit against a carrier, for not delivering goods, the defendant having advertised that he would not be asswerable for any goods beyond the value of twenty pounds, unless they were entered and paid for accordingly, the court of King's Bench allowed him to bring the twenty pounds into court m: So, money may be brought into court, in an action on the case for navigation calls n. And where, in an action for general damages, the bringing of money into court is irregular, if the plaintiff take it out, he thereby waives the irregularity, and cannot afterwards have a verdict, unless he recover more than the sum brought in o. In an action for freight by a foreigner, there being a cross action against him for unliquidated damages, the court of Common Pleas refused to permit the freight to be paid into court, as a fund liable to payment of the damages when ascertained p. But where a separate commission had been sued out against A., and a joint commission against him and B., and the assignees under the first commission had recovered a verdict in trover against C., the court of King's Bench allowed the amount of the verdict to be brought into court, to abide the event of a petition to the Chancellor, to supersede the first commission q.

In an action by an executor or administrator, the plaintiff not being liable to costs, the defendant was not formerly allowed to bring money into

There is said to be no precedent, where there are several defendants, for one to pay money into court 1. Where there are several counts or breaches in the declaration, and as to some of them the defendant may bring money into court, but not as to the others, he may obtain a rule for bringing it in specially, upon some of the counts or breaches only. Thus, where an action of covenant k was brought upon a lease, for non-payment of rent, and not repairing, &c. the court of King's Bench made a rule, that upon payment of what should appear to be due for rent, the proceedings as to that should be stayed; and as to the other breaches, that the plaintiff might proceed as he should think fit. So, in covenant upon a charter-party 1, the defendant was allowed to bring money into court, upon two of the breaches only; viz. for freight and demurrage. But in debt for the penalty of a charter-party, the court of Common Pleas discharged the rule for bringing money into court m: and in another case, they refused to permit the defendant to pay money into court on all the counts in the declaration except the last, and to demur to that count n. If a defendant bring money into court upon some of the counts, and the plaintiff take it out, the latter is only entitled to the costs of those counts o.

made , and in some cases expressly authorized b, after plea, on obtaining a judge's order for that purpose: and if there has been no delay, the courts will give the defendant leave to withdraw the general issue, in order to bring money into court, and replead it, on payment of costs: And he has even been allowed to bring it in, after the granting of a new trial d. In the King's Bench, the motion paper being signed by counsel, the money should be paid to the signer of the writs, who acts in this instance as deputy to the masters; and will give a receipt for the money, on being paid 20s. for every 100l. and so in proportion for every greater or lesser sum, exceeding 10l. and 2s. for every sum under 10l, besides 2s. 4d. for the receipt f. The rule for bringing in the money is drawn up, in this court, by the clerk of the rules in term time, or within a week after, on the motion paper and receipt being left with him as instructions; but after a week from the end of the term, there must be a judge's order for drawing up the rule, which is granted of course, without a summons. In the Common Pleas, if the sum be under five pounds, it may be paid in on a side-bar or treasury rule, which is granted of course by the secondaries; but if it amount to that sum or upwards, a serjeant's hand is necessary for obtaining the rule: and after a week from the end of the term, there must also be a judge's order for drawing it up. The rule in this court being taken to the prothonotaries' office, the clerk there will receive the money, and write a receipt in the margin, on being paid 1d. in the pound, and 1s. 4d. for the receipt. On a plea of tender, with a profert in curiá, the sum tendered must be paid to the signer of the writs in the King's Bench, or prothonotaries in the Common Pleas, who will give a receipt for it in the margin of the plea; and if not paid, the plaintiff may consider the plea as a nullity, and sign judgment s. If the defendant bring money into court on a plea of tender, the plaintiff may take it out, though he reply that the tender was not made before action broughth: Or he may reply a subsequent demand and refusal; and on a verdict for the plaintiff, on issue taken thereon, Lord Mansfield said: "The money having been taken out of court, the plaintiff shall recover only nominal damages, but otherwise the verdict would have been for the sum tendered '."

The rule to bring money into court is commonly drawn up with costs, to be taxed by the master in the King's Bench, or one of the prothonotaries in the Common Pleas: And, in the King's Bench, the court will not in general permit the defendant to bring into court the debt and costs up to a certain day after the action brought, (thereby excluding the costs of the declaration delivered,) upon the ground of an offer to pay the debt and costs up to that period, without having made a tender before action, or obtaining the common rule for staying proceedings on payment of debt and costs, up to the time of the application. But where the plaintiff's conduct appeared to have been oppressive, the court of King's Bench, on motion, discharged so much of the rule for bringing money into court, as related to the payment of costs b. So, where an action was brought for two separate sums of money, one of which the defendant offered to pay, with all costs to that time, and, the plaintiff's attorney having refused to stay proceedings on those terms, the defendant paid that sum into court; but the plaintiff afterwards, finding that he could not support the action for the other part of his demand, took the money out of court, and discontinued the action; the court allowed the defendant his costs, from the date of his offer to pay the sum paid into court, and directed that the same should be set off against the plaintiff's costs previously incurred .

So, in the Common Pleas, according to several recent decisions, where In what cases the defendant, after action brought, and before declaration, offers to pay the debt and costs, and the plaintiff refuses to receive it, the court will permit the defendant to pay the debt into court, with the costs of the action up to the time of his offer only; and if the plaintiff take the money out of court, he will be compelled to pay the costs of the application, and all costs in the action subsequent to the offer d: And in like manner, upon setting aside a writ of inquiry, the court of Common Pleas permitted the defendant to pay money to the plaintiff, under a rule of court, with the costs of the action up to that time, and ordered that the plaintiff's further proceedings should be at the peril of paying the subsequent costs c. So, In Exchequer. in the Exchequer, the court, in a proper case, would it seems adopt a similar mode of proceeding f. But where, in an action for work and labour, the defendants, having offered by letter to pay a certain sum for the debt with the costs up to that time, which was refused by the plaintiff, obtained a rule to shew cause, why the sum offered and the costs should not be paid into court, and further proceedings stayed, and why the plaintiff should not pay the costs incurred since the offer, and why, if the plaintiff refused to accept it, that sum should not be paid into court, and struck out of the declaration; the court of Common Pleas discharged the rule, it appearing that there was nothing oppressive in the plaintiff's conducts: And in general, where money is paid into court upon the common rule, the latter court will not discharge that part of it which directs the payment of costs, unless the defendant have been prevented from making a legal tender, by the fraud or vexatious conduct of the plaintiff:

Therefore, they refused the application, where the defendant had merely pulled out his pocket book, for the purpose of making a tender, six weeks before action brought, and was prevented by the plaintiff's walking away; the defendant never having repeated the offer. A copy of the rule is usually annexed to the plea, or otherwise served on the plaintiff's attorney: And bringing money into court can only be proved, by the rule for bringing it in b.

Bringing money into court is in general considered as an acknowledgment of the right of action, to the amount of the sum brought in c; which the plaintiff therefore, on producing an office copy of the rule, is entitled to receive at all events, whether he proceed in the action or not, and even though he be nonsuited, or have a verdict against him d: And where goods have been sold to the defendant by sample, at a stipulated price, he cannot, after payment of money into court, in an action of indebitatus assumpsit, insist upon any defect in the goods; since, by paying money into court, he admits the original contract c: If a purchaser mean to insist on such an objection, he ought to return the goods e. Bringing money into court being an acknowledgment on record, the party can never recover it back again, though it afterwards appear that he paid it wrongfully f: And the court of Common Pleas will not order money brought in by the defendant through a mistake to be restored, unless it appear that some frand or deceit has been practised upon him g. But bringing money into court is said to be an admission of a legal demand only h: And beyond the amount of the sum brought in, it is no acknowledgment of the right of action i: therefore if the plaintiff proceed further, it is at his peril. So, in actions of trespass against justices of the peace, &c. for acts done by them ex officio, bringing money into court seems to be no admission of the right of action k. And where money has been paid into court, short of the plaintiff's demand, and it is taken out of court, evidence is admissible to shew quo animo it was done; and it is not to be taken conclusively as an admission that the rest of the demand was unfounded 1.

It has been doubted, whether the plaintiff can be nonsuited, after bringing money into court; but there seems to be little reason for such a doubt. When money is brought into court, unless the plaintiff will accept it with costs, in discharge of the suit, it is considered as paid before action brought, and struck out of the declaration; and the action proceeds for the residue of the demand, in like manner as if it had been originally commenced for that only m. And, accordingly, the practice of nonsuiting the plaintiff, after money paid into court, appears to be supported by many authorities 2. It seems, therefore, that after payment of money into court, there may be a nonsuit, a judgment as in case of a nonsuit, a demurrer to evidence, or a plea puis darrein continuance: in short, that the cause goes on substantially in the same manner, as if the money had not been paid in at all b.

When the declaration contains a count on a special contract, bringing In what cases money into court generally is an admission of the contract, so as to supersede the necessity of proving it at the trial c: therefore in such case, if the defendant mean to deny the existence of the contract, he should pay money into court specially, on the other counts of the declaration. where the defendant paid money into court generally, upon a declaration containing a count on a policy of assurance, together with the money counts, the court of King's Bench held, that this was an admission of the contract stated in the special count; and that it was not competent to the defendant to shew that the policy, by which the risk was originally made to cease after the ship had moored twenty four hours in safety, was afterwards altered by the broker, without the defendant's knowledge d. So, where two breaches were assigned in one count of a declaration upon a contract, and the defendant paid money into court upon one of them, the court held that he thereby admitted the whole contract, as set out in that And after payment of money into court by a defendant, in an By farmer of action brought against him on the 2 & 3 Edw. VI. c. 13. by a farmer of tithes, he cannot object to the plaintiff's title to the tithes; because he has admitted the plaintiff's right generally, and has reduced the cause to a mere question of the amount of the damages f. A lender also, upon Tender admits which money is paid into court, admits the contract and facts stated in the declaration: Therefore, where a count averred, that in consideration that the plaintiff would let to the defendant certain tithes, the defendant agreed to pay 411., and that plaintiff did let the said tithes, and permit the defendant to take them; a tender pleaded to all the counts generally, was held to preclude the defendant from shewing a legal interruption to his taking the tithes, if any such interruption had subsisted g. ance, it appeared that the plaintiff, by his conduct previous to the trial, had induced the defendant to believe that the only point to be tried was a question of fraud, and suffered him to prepare his evidence accordingly; the court of Common Pleas would not allow the plaintiff to object to the receipt of that evidence at the trial, upon the ground of the contract having been admitted by the payment of money into court. So, in an action on a valued policy, the payment of money into court, upon a count which states a total loss by capture, is no admission of a total loss; but the plaintiff is bound to prove that he has suffered damage from the capture, beyond the amount of the sum paid into court b. So, the payment of money into court, on several common counts, one of which alone is applicable to the plaintiff's demand, admits a cause of action on that count only : And accordingly, where the plaintiff alleges in his declaration, multifarious and inconsistent demands, arising out of the same transaction, payment into court of a sum insufficient to meet all the demands, cannot we applied by the plaintiff to prove such one of them as he may elect at the triald. Where the declaration stated that the plaintiff had sold to the defendant a quantity of oak bark, at the average price of the season, to be ascertained before a given day, and then averred that before that day the average price was ascertained to be a given sum; it was holden, that the payment of money into court did not admit the average price to be as stated in the declaration. And in assumpsit for goods sold and delivered, and on the money counts, where the defendant had pleaded the general issue, with the statute of limitations, and paid money into court generally; the court held, that such payment did not take the case out of the Proceedings, on taking it out, with costs, in discharge of action.

Costs, how recovered. When money is brought into court, the plaintiff either accepts it, with costs, in discharge of the suit, or proceeds in the action: In the former case, he should take an office copy of the rule, and procure an appointment thereon from the master, or one of the prothonotaries, to tax the costs, and serve the same on the defendant's attorney; or, in default thereof, it will be considered that the plaintiff intends to proceed in the action, to recover a larger sum than that paid into court s. The costs being taxed, should be forthwith paid to the plaintiff or his attorney; and if they are not paid, the plaintiff may proceed in the action; and proof of the rule to pay money into court will of itself entitle him to a verdict, with nominal damages h: Or, in the Common Pleas and Exchequer, the plaintiff, after demanding the costs, may have an attachment for the non-payment of them; and in these courts, he may proceed in the action, without a previous demand of the costs. But, in the King's Bench, the plaintiff must proceed in the action, if they are not paid, and cannot have an attachment b; for the rule in this court is conditional, and not, as in the Common Pleas c, obligatory upon the defendant to pay the costs.

In policy causes.

In the King's Bench, where the defendants, in several actions on a policy of assurance, paid money into court, which the plaintiff took out, without taxing costs at that time, and afterwards the defendants entered into the common consolidation rule, and the plaintiff was nonsuited in the action that was tried; the court held, that the latter was not entitled to the costs in any of the actions, up to the time of paying money into court ". But in actions on policies, in the Common Pleas, where there is a consolidation rule, and money paid into court, although the cause tried follows the general practice, and the defendant, if he succeed, is entitled to the whole costs of that cause, yet the plaintiff is entitled to the costs of the short causes, up to the time of paying the money into court b. So, in the King's Bench, where the defendants in several actions on a policy of insurance, paid money into court, and (the plaintiffs refusing to consent to a consolidation rule) obtained a rule for staying proceedings in the others, until after the trial of one, upon the terms of their admitting their subsaription to the policy, the interest of the plaintiffs, &c. and afterwards judgment passed for the defendant in the cause tried; the court held, that the plaintiffs were entitled, in the other actions to costs, to the time of paying money into court . Where the defendant, having paid money into court generally, upon a declaration containing a count on a policy of assurance, together with the money counts, obtained a rule after verdict, to amend the rule for paying money into court, by confining it to the money counts, and for a new trial, on payment of costs; the court of King's Bench held, that the plaintiff, on taking the money out of court, was entitled to all the costs of the action, and not merely to the usual costs on a rule for a new trial d. And, in the Common Pleas, where in an action on a policy, with the usual money counts, the defendant paid the premiums into court, on the count for money had and received, and the plaintiff took it out, there being no consolidation rule, the latter was holden to be entitled to his full costs on all the counts, although he had failed on the special counts, in another action on the same policy c.

Restoring money brought into court.

In the Common Pleas, if the plaintiff dief, or be nonsuitedg, after money is brought into court, the court will not order it to be paid back to the defendant. So, if the defendant die after bringing money into court, it shall not be paid back to his executors h. But where the bail, upon putting off a trial, had paid a sum of money into court, to abide the event of the suit, and the suit having afterwards abated by the death of the defendant, they were permitted to take the money out of court, although it was opposed both by the plaintiff, and by the administrator of the defendant i. # Of Pleas to the Jurisdiction; Claiming Conusance; and Pleas in Abatement.

General order of pleading.

THE general Order of Pleading is,

- I. To the JURISDICTION of the Court.
- II. To the Person,
  - 1. Of the Plaintiff:
  - 2. Of the Defendant.
- III To the Count.
- IV. To the WRIT; and herein,
  - 1. To the Form:
  - 2. To the Action of the Writ.
  - V. To the Action itself, in bar thereof *.

By this order of pleading, each subsequent plea admits the former: as, when the defendant pleads to the person, he admits the jurisdiction of the court; when he pleads to the count, he admits the competency of the plaintiff, and his own responsibility; when he pleads to the form of the writ, he admits the form of the count b; and in like manner of the rest.

In ejectment.

Pleas to the jurisdiction of the court are either in local or transitory actions. In local actions, it is a good plea to say that the lands are ancient demesne, holden of the king's manor c; or that the cause of action arose in Wales d, or beyond the sea e, or in a county palatine f, cinque port s, or other exempt jurisdiction h. In ejectment, the tenants in possession cannot plead to the jurisdiction, without leave of the court i: And where ancient demesne is pleaded, there must be an affidavit, stating that the lands are holden of a manor, which is ancient demesne; that there is a court of ancient demesne, regularly holden; and that the lessor of the plaintiff has a freehold interest . This plea may be filed de bene esse, in the King's Bench, within the time allowed for pleading in abatement ".

In transitory actions, it is said c, the defendant cannot plead to the Intransitory jurisdiction of the court, unless the plaintiff by his declaration shew, that the cause of action accrued within a county palatine: and even then, it must be averred in the plea, either that the defendant dwells in the county palatine, or that he had sufficient goods and chattels there, by which he may be attached; otherwise the plea cannot be allowed, lest a failure of justice should ensued; and the defendant cannot in such case demuir to the declaration e, or move in arrest of judgment f.

Of a nature very similar to pleading to the jurisdiction of the court, is Claiming conuclaiming conusance; or praying that the cause may be determined before an inferior jurisdiction: concerning which, it will be proper to consider, the several sorts of inferior jurisdictions; in what cases conusance may be claimed; and the time and manner of claiming it.

There are three sorts of inferior jurisdictionsh. The first is to hold Inferior jurisdicpleas, which is merely a concurrent jurisdiction; and can neither be claimed nor pleaded. The second is a general conusance of pleas; which being intended for the benefit of the lord, may be claimed by him, though it cannot be pleaded by the defendant. The third is a conusance of pleas, with exclusive words; as where the king grants to a city, that the inhabitants shall be sued within the city, and not elsewhere: This being an exempt jurisdiction, may be either claimed or pleaded i. Hence it is a general rule, that whenever the defendant can plead to the jurisdiction of the court, there the lord of the franchise may claim conusance, but not vice versá k.

The privilege of claiming conusance is confined to courts of record 1, and local actions in; except where the defendant is a member of the university of Oxford, or Cambridgen: And it is also confined to such actions as were in csse at the time of the grant o; and does not extend to those created since, by act of parliament, except where a common law action is

But conusance may be claimed by a defendant in custody of the marshal. And, in a modern case, it was allowed in the King's Bench, on a claim made by the Vice Chancellor of the University of Oxford, during the vacancy of the office of Chancellor by death, on behalf of the university k. Converge of Pleas must be claimed after appearance m, and before imparlance, n, in the first instance, or on the very first day the party hath in court; even upon the return day of the writ, if the cause of action appear therein: if not, then upon the first day given upon the declaration o. As for instance, in trespass by original, where place is named, or pracipe quod reddat, where land is demanded, conusance must be claimed on the return day of the writ; because, in these cases, the writ states where the cause of action arises P. But in debt or detinue it is otherwise; for it does not appear, till the plaintiff has counted, where the contract or obligation was made; and therefore till then, the lord need not make his claim q. So in replevin, the place where the cattle were taken does not appear, till the plaintiff has counted, if it be between strangers: but if a replevin be sued against the lord of the franchise himself, there the lord's claim would come too late after the count; because the law intends that he knew the place of taking, being himself a party, and so, by not demanding his privilege on the writ, he gives the court seisin of the cause: for the lord must use no delay r.

bridge, over which the university court has jurisdiction, was allowed in the King's Bench; upon the claim of the vice-chancellor, on behalf of the chancellor, masters and fellows of the university, entered on the roll in due form, setting out their jurisdiction under charters confirmed by act of parliament, and averring the cause of action to have arisen within such jurisdiction: although it was objected that the claim was preferred too early, on the mere issuing of a writ of latitat against the privileged member, to answer in a plea of trespass, before declaration; by which it could not appear where the cause of action arose, nor consequently that it arose within the town and suburbs of Cambridge, to which the jurisdiction of the university court in personal actions is confined; and that it was not sufficient to supply that fact by affidavit: But the court held, that it was the usual course to support claims of conusance by affidavits verifying the necessary facts, which it was competent to the plaintiff to deny in the same mode; and that the difficulty was not greater before, than after declaration; and the sooner the claim, if well founded, was preferred, the better for the plaintiff. In the same case it was objected, that if the claim might be preferred upon the latitat before declaration, then it ought to be preferred in the first instance, after the return of the latitat, namely, upon the day of appearance given by the rule of court, that is, in eight days: but the court held, that the first instance after the return day of the writ, which is the first step of the plaintiff entered on the record, continued till the declaration filed, which is the next step taken by the plaintiff on the record; within which time the claim was made. Another objection was, that it appeared by the roll, on which the power of attorney to claim conusance and the claim itself were entered, that the claim was made on the return day of the writ, that is, on the fifteenth of November, before the power of attorney to claim it was executed, which bore date on the 27th: But the court took notice that the claim was in fact made on the 28th, in the letter missive and significatory of the vice-chancellor to them; although, in making up the roll, it was entered by their officer as on the return day of the writ by relation, no subsequent day in court being then given on the record.

As to the manner of making the claim, it is holden, that conusance How claimed. may be claimed by the lord of the franchise in person, or by his bailiff or attorney 2: If it be claimed by attorney, the warrant of attorney must be produced in court, and filed b. The grant of conusance must also be produced c, or an exemplification of it under the great seal c; and if the grant was before time of memory, an allowance must be shewn in the King's Bench, or before justices in Eyrc e. Upon a claim made by the university of Oxford, or Cambridge f, there must be likewise, in addition Pleas in abatement, to person of plaintiff. Pleas in abatement to the person of the plaintiff, are either that he is not in existence, (being only a fictitious person <sup>1</sup>, or dead <sup>m</sup>,) or else that being in existence, he is an alien enemy <sup>n</sup>, attainted of treason or felony <sup>o</sup>, outlawed upon mesne or final process <sup>p</sup>, under a præmunire <sup>q</sup>, excommunicated <sup>r</sup>, or convicted of popish recusancy <sup>s</sup>. When the cause of action is forfeited, as by the plaintiff's being an alien enemy <sup>t</sup>, attainted <sup>n</sup>, or outlawed for felony <sup>x</sup>, there his disability may be pleaded in abatement or in bar, but otherwise it can only be pleaded in abatement.

There are two ways of pleading an attorney's privilege, first, with a profert of a writ of privilege, or of an exemplification of the record of his admission; upon which the plaintiff must reply nul tiel record, and cannot otherwise deny the defendant's being an attorney: secondly, as a mere matter of fact, without a profert d; and then a certiorari shall be awarded, to certify whether he be an attorney or not e. And where an attorney of the King's Bench, in pleading his privilege to an action by original, stated the custom of the court to be, that no attorney ought to be compelled to answer an original writ, unless first forejudged from his office, &c. (which is not the custom of this court, but of the Common Pleas,) the court nevertheless held the plea to be sufficient; as they will take notice of the custom, that an attorney of this court can only be sued by bill, and what is stated as to forejudging may be rejected as surplusage f.

Under the head of pleas to the person, may also be included coverture, Coverture. in the plaintiff g, or defendant h; or that the plaintiffs or defendants, suing or being sued as husband and wife, are not married i: or any other plea Want of proper for want of proper parties, as that there is an executor k, administrator l, or other person m, not named, who ought to be made a co-plaintiff or codefendant. And he may plead a secret partnership in abatement, though the plaintiff had no means of knowing of the partnership, and could not have proved it, had he joined the secret partner in the action q. In these cases, the defendant, if required, must deliver to the plaintiff the places of abode and additions of the parties jointly liable; or in default thereof, the court of King's Bench, we have seen c, will set aside the plea. Statute of additions, Pleas in abatement to the count can only be pleaded in actions by original writ; and are for some uncertainty, repugnancy, or want of form f, not appearing on the face of the writ, or else for some variance therefrom g. To the writ, they are either for matter apparent on the face of it, or for matter dehors h, existing at the time of suing out the writ, or arising afterwards i. To the form of the writ, they are for some apparent uncertainty, repugnancy, or want of form k; variance 1 from the record, specialty, &c.; misnomer m of the plaintiff or defendant n, or of one of several plaintiffs o; or, in actions by original writ, the omission or mistake of the defendant's addition p, that is, of his estate, degree, mystery, or place of abode. But the plaintiff may sue the defendant, either by the addition of his degree or mystery q; and may name him of the place where he lately dwelt r: And as a plea of the statute of additions is bad, without oyer of the original writ, which by the practice of the court is not grantable, it seems that such a plea cannot now be pleaded; and accordingly, in several recent instances, the courts have ordered it to be set And, in general, it may be remarked, that since the courts have refused to allow oyer of the original writ, pleas in abatement thereto, for objections apparent on the face of it, or variance between the writ and to the jurisdiction, the defendant should odachide his plea by praying judgment, if the court will take further cognizance of the suits. But the plea of an attorney, to an action brought against him by bill in the King's Bench, as a common person, stating his privilege not to be compelled to answer any bill exhibited against him in custody of the marshal &c. and concluding that the court would not take further cognizance of the action aforesaid against him, instead of praying judgment of the bill, and that the same might be quashed, will not be taken as a plea to the jurisdiction, but only as objecting to the court's taking cognizance of the action against one of its attornies, in that form; and therefore the court will adjudge the bill to be quashed b. In pleading to the person, the conclusion is, whether the defendant ought to answer, or the plaintiff to be answered; or if excommunication, or other temporary disability, be pleaded, that the plaint may remain without day, until, &c d. In pleading to the writ or count, if the action be by original, the plea should conclude, by praying judgment of the writ or count, and that the same may be quashed : But if the action be by bill, the plea should conclude by praying judgment of the bill only, and not of the declaration, or of the writ and declaration founded thereon g; nor even, as it seems, of the bill and declaration b. It seems to be a rule, that pleas in abatement are not amendable; because they are dilatory, and do not go to the merits of the action 1; which rule has been extended to criminal cases m: and the plaintiff therefore need never demur specially to such pleas n. four days inclusive after the delivery, or filing and notice, of the declaration b; unless the declaration be delivered or filed after term, or so late in the term, that the defendant is not bound to plead to it that term; in both which cases, the defendant in the King's Bench may, within the first four days inclusive of the next term, plead to the jurisdiction of the court, or in abatement, as of the preceding term c: But, in the Common Pleas, the defendant cannot plead in abatement, within the first four days of the next term, without a special imparlance, which may be granted by the prothonotaries d. If such a plea be pleaded after a general imparlance, the plaintiff, we have seen e, may either sign judgment, or apply to the court by motion to set it aside; or he may demur thereto, or allege the imparlance in his replication, by way of estoppel: and if it be not delivered, or left in the office, in due time, it is not to be received, whether a rule to plead be given or not f. And Sunday, or any other day on which the court does not sit, is to be accounted as one of the four days g, unless it happen to be the last h. It is a rule in the King's Bench, that pleas in abatement cannot be filed, before the plaintiff has declared i, and the defendant has appeared k: And if the defendant plead in bar before the bail are perfected, his plea may be considered as a nullity, although the bail afterwards justify 1. So, where the plaintiff declared de bene esse, and the defendant pleaded in abatement before he had put in special bail, and the plaintiff, treating his plea as a nullity, signed interlocutory judgment, the court held it to be regular m. But in a country cause, if the defendant put in special bail in time, he may plead in abatement, though the bail be not perfected till after the four days, if they be ultimately perfected within the time allowed by the practice of the court 1: And a similar practice has since obtained in town causes o.

Must be verified by affidavit.

Before the statute for the amendment of the law, when the defendant pleaded a foreign plea, he was obliged to verify it by affidavit . And now, by that statute b, "no dilatory plea shall be received in any court " of record, unless the party offering such plea do, by affidavit, prove the " truth thereof; or shew some probable matter to the court, to induce " them to believe that the fact of such dilatory plea is true." The affidavit required by this statute may be made by the defendant himself, or by a third person c: and as the statute only requires probable cause, there does not seem to be any necessity for an affidavit, when the plea is for matter apparent on the face of the proceedings, as want of addition d, &c.; nor when the truth of the plea will appear to the court upon an inspection of their own records, as where an attorney of the King's Bench pleaded that he was an attorney of that court, and ought to be sued by bill e. Yet, where the defendant pleaded, after oyer of the original, that it was not returned, the court of King's Bench set aside the plea, for want of an affidavit of the truth of it f. Aid prayer g, in the Common Pleas, or a plea to a soire facias against heir and tertenants, that there are other tertenants not returned h, is holden to be a dilatory plea within the statute, and must be verified by affidavit.

Signing, and filing, or delivery of.

Consequence of not pleading in due time, or proper manner, in K. B. & C P. In the King's Bench, a plea in abatement should be signed by counsel; and filed in the office of the clerk of the papers: and if it be not signed, it is irregular, and the plaintiff may sign judgment as for want of a plea! In the Common Pleas, it is signed by a serjeant; and either delivered to the plaintiff's attorney, or filed in the prothonotaries' office: and, in both courts, an affidavit should be annexed to the plea, stating that it is true, in substance and matter of fact k: And if the plea be not filed in due time, or there be no affidavit annexed of the truth of it m, or a defective affidavit, the plaintiff may consider it as a nullity, and sign judgment; or he may move the court to set it aside. But the court will not, upon motion, quash a bad plea in abatement p. And the plaintiff cannot sign judgment after a plea in abatement, because the affidavit to verify the plea was sworn before the defendant's attorney. well as himself, which affidavit was sworn at Liverpool on the day of filing the declaration in town, before the defendant could have seen it, was holden, in the King's Bench, not to be a nullity, so as to entitle the plaintiff to sign interlocutory judgment as for want of a plea 2: And the court of Common Pleas refused to grant a rule, to quash an insensible plea in abatement; saying, that they would not try the goodness of a demurrer on motion: but the plaintist might, at his own peril, have signed judgment b. In the Exchequer, if a plea in abatement be not supported by a In Exchequer. proper assidavit of the truth of it, the plaintist may sign judgment immediately c: and a mistake in omitting the name of one of the plaintiffs, in the title to the assiduvit, renders it insussicient to support the plea, although it refer expressly to the next plea, in which the title of the cause is right : And, in that court, if the plaintiff has regularly signed judgment for want of an affidavit, the court will not afterwards permit the defendant to make one d.

When a plea in abatement is regularly put in, the plaintiff must reply to it, or demur. If he reply, and an issue in fact be thereupon joined, and found for him, the judgment is peremptory, quod recuperete; but if there be judgment for the plaintiff, on demurrer to a plea in abatement, or replication to such plea, the judgment is only interlocutory, quod respondeal ouster?: In the latter case, the defendant has in general four days time to plead; but this is in the discretion of the courts g: and they will sometimes order him to plead instanter, or on the morrow. In assumpsit, the defendant pleaded that the promises were made by him jointly with another; and issue being taken upon that fact, the jury by their verdict, found that the defendant promised, without stating whether he promised alone or jointly with another; and the court held that this verdict was bad, because it did not distinctly pronounce upon the issue h. After a Second plea in judgment of respondent ouster, it is said, there can be no plea in abatement; for if it were allowed, there would be no end of such pleas i: But this must be understood of pleas in abatement in the same degree, as popish recusancy and outlawry k, being both to the person; for the defendant may plead to the person of the plaintiff, and if that be over-ruled, he may afterwards plead to the form of the writ!

Of Pleas in Bar: and herein, of the General Issue, and what may be given in Evidence under it; of Special Pleas, and when necessary to be pleaded; of pleading several Matters, and the Costs thereon; and of the Plea, and Notice of Set off, &c.

PLEAS in bar are calculated to shew, either that the plaintiff never Pleas in bar, had any cause of action, or if he had, that it is discharged by some subsequent matter: And they are in denial, or confession and avoidance, of the Indenial, or cause of action; or they conclude the plaintiff by matter of estoppel a. Pleas in denial are of the whole, or a part of the declaration; and in avoidance, they are by matter precedent, which shows the plaintiff never had a cause of action, and is called an avoidance in law, or by matter subsequent, which discharges the cause of action, and is called an avoidance in fact b.

In actions upon contracts, the defendant may either plead the general issue, which denies that there was any contract between the parties, in point of fact; as in assumpsit, non assumpsit c: in debt on simple contract, nil debet d; in covenant, or debt on specialty, non est factume; and in debt on record, or scire facias, nul tiel record f: or if there was a contract in point of fact, he may plead some special matter, which shews that it was void in point of law, as by coverture, or the statutes of gaming or usury, &c. or voidable, by infancy, or duress of imprisonment, &c.: or if Performance of there was a good and valid contract, that it has been performed; or if not, that there was some legal excuse for its non-performance, arising from the act of God, or the law, or of the king's enemies, or from the act or default of the plaintiff, either by releasing the defendant from the performance of the contract, refusing a tender, or hindering him from performing it, or by the non-performance of a condition precedent, &c. In an action against an executor or administrator, the defendant may plead any matter which the testator or intestate might have pleaded: and in addition thereto, he may deny the character in which he is sued, by pleading ne unques executor or administrator; or, admitting it, he may plead that no assets have come to his hands, or that he has fully administered them, and that either generally, or specially, with the exception of assets to a certain amount, which are not sufficient to satisfy the plaintiff, or be may plead a retainer to pay his own debt, of equal or superior degree, or debts of a superior degree due to third persons, on bonds or Heir, or devisce, judgments, &c h. And see the Elements of Pleas in Equity, by Mr. Beames, in which there is a clear and learned account of the correspondence as fa goes, between pleas at law and in equity; which latter pleas are treated of as applicable to the relief and discovery sought by original bills, and also to bills not original, as bills of revivor, &c. and to informations filed by the Attorney General. From these Elements it appears, that in equity, as well as at law, there are pleas to the jurisdiction, in abatement, and in bar; and the chief difference between the two courts arises, from pleas in denial of the facts which constitute the cause of action, or ground of complaint, and which at law are referred to the jury by the general issue, which denies the whole, or by pleas in denial of some particular facts necessary to maintain the action; but which, in equity, are the subject of answers. Pleas in equity are treated of by Mr. Beames, under the fourfold division, of pleas to the jurisdiction, to the person of the plaintiff or defendant, to the bill, and in bar: but what he considers as pleas to the bill, as that there is another suit depending for the same cause, &c. would at law be considered as pleas in abatement; and pleas in bar, in equity, are either statutory bars, such as the statute of limitations, or of frauds, &c. or founded on some matter precedent or subsequent, shewing that the complainant never had any title to the relief or discovery he seeks, or if he had, that it is discharged by a release, &c.

The heir, if an infant, may also pray that Parol demurrer. the parol may demur, till he is of full age.

In actions for wrongs, the defendant may either deny the charge contained in the declaration, by pleading the general issue; as in case, not guilly of the premises "; in delinue, non delinet: in replevin, non cepit b: and in trespass vi et armis, not guilty of the trespasses a; or he may plead special pleas, in specially, in justification or excuse of the injury complained of, as in case justification or for a libel or words, by shewing the truth of them, &c.

The defendant may also justify in any species of action of trespass, under a licence from the plaintiff, or legal process, criminal or civil; which latter may issue out of superior or inferior courts, and is original, mesne or final; or he may justify by authority of law, without process, as an individual, on suspicion of felony, &c. or as an officer, or in his aid; or on the ground of inevitable necessity.

Pleas in discharge. The pleas which have been mentioned, in actions for mrongs, go to prove that the plaintiff never had any cause of action: or, admitting that he had, the defendant may plead, as in actions upon contracts, that it was discharged, by some subsequent or collateral matter, as by an accord and satisfaction, arbitrament, release, former recovery, or distress for the same cause, tender of sufficient amends for an involuntary trespass a, or the statute of limitations.

General issue, when proper, and what may be given in evidence under it, or must be pleaded specially. In assumpsit.

It will next be right to consider when the general issue may be properly pleaded; and what may be given in evidence under it, or must be pleaded specially, in the different actions.

In assumpsit, the general issue is proper, where there was either no contract between the parties, or not such a contract as the plaintiff has declared on: And the defendant may give in evidence under it, that the contract was void in law, by coverture b, gaming c, usury d, &c. or voidable by infancy a, duress, &c.; or, if good in point of law, that it was performed b, or that there was some legal excuse for the non-performance of it, as a release or discharge before breach, or non-performance by the plaintiff of a condition precedent, &c. This sort of evidence will shew that the plaintiff had no cause of action. But if he had, the defendant may give in evidence, under the general issue, that it was discharged, by an accord and satisfaction c, arbitrament, release d, foreign attachment c, or former recovery for the same cause f, &c. In short, the question in assumpsit, upon the general issue, is whether there was a subsisting debt, or cause of action, at the time of commencing the suit s. But matter of defence arising after action brought, cannot be pleaded in bar of the action generally; and therefore cannot be given in evidence under the general issue h. And matters of law i, in avoidance of the contract, or discharge of the action, are usually pleaded: It is also necessary to plead a tender, or the statute of limitations k, &c. and to plead or give a notice of set off. Formerly, matters in discharge of the action must have been pleaded specially 1: Afterwards, a distinction was made between express and implied assumpsits: In the former, these matters were still required to be pleaded, but not in the latter in. At length, about the time of Lord Holl, they were universally allowed to be given in evidence, under the general issue n.

The bankruptcy of the plaintiff's, or his discharge under an insolvent act p, Bankruptcy of may be given in evidence, under the general issue, in assumpsit; though they are sometimes pleaded specially. But, in an action by the provisional assignce of a bankrupt, the fact of the bankrupt's estate having been assigned by the plaintiff to new assignees, between the time of issuing the latitat and delivery of the declaration, was holden to be no ground of nonsuit, upon a plea of non assumpsit; but, if it were an answer to the action, should have been pleaded specially q. lowed after the filing of the plaintiff's bill, and before plea pleaded, was holden to be evidence to support the general plea of bankruptcy, given by the statute 5 Geo. II. c. 30. § 7. viz. that before the exhibiting of the plaintiff's bill, the defendant became a bankrupt, and that the cause of action accrued before he became a bankrupt a. And a plea, in the general form, was deemed sufficient to entitle a bankrupt to the benefit of the statute 49 Geo. III. c. 121. § 8. which discharges him, after having obtained his certificate, of all demands at the suit of a surety or person liable for his debt, who has paid the same after the issuing of the commission, in like manner, to all intents and purposes, as if such person had been a creditor before the bankruptcy b. But where the certificate is allowed after plea pleaded, it seems that the bankruptcy must be pleaded specially, and not in the general form prescribed by the above statute. And a certificate obtained at Newfoundland, under the 49 Geo. 111. c. 27. § 3. does not, we have seen d, entitle the defendant to be discharged, on entering a common appearance, but must be pleaded in bar . To a general p'ea of bankruptcy, a replication that the defendant had before been discharged as a bankrupt, by virtue of the statute 5 Geo. 11. c. 30 f, and that he had not paid 15s. in the pound under the second commission is bad on special demurrer g. In covenant, there is properly speaking no general issue; for though the defendant may plead non cst factum, as in debt on specialty, yet that only puts the deed in issue, and not the breach of covenant: and non infregit conventionem is a bad plea h. In this action therefore, the defendant must specially controvert the deed, or shew that he has performed the covenant, or is legally excused from the performance of it; or, admitting the breach, that he is discharged by matter ex post facto, as a re-

In debt, on simple contract.

In debt on simple contract, nil debet is a good plea, or, in actions by executors and administrators, non definet, in all cases where nothing was due to the plaintiff, at the time of commencing the action k: And under this plea, the defendant may not only put the plaintiff upon showing the existence of a legal contract, but he may give in evidence the performance of it. He may also give in evidence, under this plea, a release, or other matter in discharge of the action 1: And it has even been holden, that as the plea is in the present tense, the statute of limitations may be given in

And where the defendant, having waged his law, in the Number of King's Bench, and the master baving assigned a day for him to come in and perfect it, applied by his counsel to the court, to assign the number of compurgators, with whom he should come to perfect it, on the ground that the number being uncertain, it was the duty of the court to say how many were necessary; the court, being disinclined to assist the revival of this obsolete mode of trial, refused the application, and left the defendant to bring such number as he should be advised were sufficient; and observed, that if the plaintiff were not satisfied with the number brought, the objection would be open to him, and then the court would hear both sides f: The defendant afterwards prepared to bring cleven compurgators, but the plaintiff abandoned the action s.

did escape without his coment, privity or knowledge .... And when the deed is the foundation, and the fact but inducement, there wil debet is no pleat, as in debt for a penalty on articles of agreement, or on a bailbond, &c. In the latter action however, if the defendant plead nil debet, and the plaintiff do not demur, but take issue thereon, it lets the defendant into any defence he may have on the meritad.

Denial of particular fact. It sometimes happens, that instead of pleading the general issue of nil debet to the whole declaration, the defendant, for greater certainty, will select and deny some particular fact, necessary to maintain the action; as the demise, in debt for rent on a parol lease, to which he may plead non dimisit*; but he cannot plead this plea, in debt for rent on an indenture f: and it is said, that riens en arrere is not a good plea, without concluding et issint nil debet s.

In debt on bond, or other specialty, the general issue of non est factum is good, in all cases where the deed was not executed, or varies from the declaration. And the defendant may give in evidence under it, that the deed was delivered as an escrow, to a third person; or that it was void at common law ab initio, being obtained by fraud, or made by a married woman, lunatic, &c. or that it became void after it was made, and before the commencement of the action, by erasure, alteration, cancelling, &c. or that a bail bond was taken after the return day of the writ, conditioned for the defendant's appearance on the return day. act of parliament, as by the statutes of usury or gaming, &c. In these cases therefore, the deferidant must plead specially. So, he must plead payment, at or after the day, performance, or any matter in excuse of performance, as non damnificatus to a bond of indemnity, no award to an arbitration bond, or, to a bail bond, no process to arrest the defendant c, &c. He must also plead specially, in discharge of the action, a tender, or set off.

In debt on record, the general issue of nul tiel record is proper, where In debt, on rethere is either no record at all, or one different from that which the plaintiff has declared on d. But as this plea only goes to the existence of the record, the defendant must plead payment, or any matter in discharge of the action: And if an action of debt be brought here, on a judgment in Ircland, the plea of nul tiel record must conclude to the country.

In actions upon the case, the defendant, upon the general issue of not In case. guilty, may not only put the plaintiff upon proof of the whole charge contained in the declaration, but may offer any matter in excuse or justification of it f; or he may set up a former recovery, release, or satisfaction s: For an action upon the case is founded upon the merc justice and conscience of the plaintiff's case, and is in the nature of a bill in equity, and in effect is so; and therefore such a former recovery, release, or satisfaction need not be pleaded, but may be given in evidence: since, whatever will, in equity and conscience, according to the circumstances of the case, bar the plaintiff's recovery, may in this action be given in evidence by the defendant; because the plaintiff must recover upon the justice and conscience of his case, and apon that only. In trover, it is commonly said, there is no special plea, except a release; but this is a mistake: for the defendant may plead specially any thing else, which, admitting the plaintiff had once a cause of action, goes to discharge it, as the statute of limitations h, or a former recovery i, &c. And when words are given in evidence, in order to prove malice, which are not stated in the declaration, the defendant may prove the truth of such words d. So, in an action for a libel, the defendant may give in evidence, on the general issue, in mitigation of damages, not only that there were rumours and reports, of the same tenor as in the supposed libel, previously current, but that the substance of the libelious matters had been published in a newspaper; and he is not required to lay a basis for this evidence, by producing the newspaper at the trial c. In trespass to the person, the general issue of not guilty may be properly pleaded, if the defendant committed no assault, battery, or imprisonment, &c.; in trespass to personal property, if the plaintiff had no property in the goods; and in trespass to real property, if he was not in possession of the land, &c.: And liberum tenementum, or other evidence of title or right to the possession; may be given in evidence under the general issue. defendant must plead specially a release, or other matter in discharge of the action . But in actions against justices, &c. and in various other Against justices, cases, the defendant, by act of parliament b, is allowed to plead the general issue, and give the special matter in evidence. In an action of trespass For false impriand false imprisonment, a constable may justify under the general issue, though he acted without a warrant, provided there was a reasonable charge of felony made; although he afterwards discharge the prisoner, without taking him before a magistrate, and although it should turn out in fact, that no felony was committed d. But a private individual, who makes the charge, and puts the constable in motion, cannot justify under the general issue: he must plead the special circumstances by way of justification, in order that it may be seen whether his suspicions were reasonable e.

When the defence consists of matter of fact, and the general issue may, Pleas amountit ought to be pleaded; it being in such case a good cause of demurrer, that the plea amounts to the general issue f. But it is observable, that in many cases, where the defence consists of matter of law, the defendant may either plead it specially, or give it in evidence under the general issue; as in assumpsit, infancy, accord and satisfaction, or a release, &c. may be either pleaded, or given in evidence upon non assumpsit; and in debt on bond, made by a married woman, the defendant may either plead coverture, or give it in evidence upon non est factum. In these cases, luplied colour. from the nature of the defence, the plaintiff has an implied colour of action; bad indeed in point of law, if the facts pleaded be true, but which is properly referred to the decision of the court. And where, from the Express colour. nature of the defence, the plaintiff would have no implied colour of action, the defendant in some cases is allowed to give him an express colour #. Thus, in the common and almost only case where express colour is now given, if in an action of trespass quare clausum fregit, the defendant plead a possessory title under a demise from a third person, (for if he claim under the plaintiff, there is an implied colour,) this, without more, would amount to the general issue h; for it goes to deny that the trespass was committed in the plaintiff's close: but if the defendant, after stating his own title, supposes (as is usual,) that the plaintiff entered upon him,

In trespace for taking goods, if the defendant plead that A. was possessed of them, as of his proper goods, and sold them in market evert, or that B. stole the goods from A and waived them within his manor, wherefore he took them, the defendant must give colour; for his plea proves that no property was in the plaintiff, so he had no colour of action: And the colour usually given in such cases is, that the defendant bailed the goods to a stranger, who delivered them to the plaintiff, from whom the defendant took them. But, in the same cases, if the defendant plead that A. sold the goods in market overt, without saying that they were his own, or that B. took them de quodam ignoto, and waived them, the plea is good without colour; for it does not deny but that the property was in the plaintiff, and the defendant is not bound to shew expressly in whom it was.

Pleas in bar are single or double; or, in other words, the defendant may rely upon a single ground, or plead several matters in his defence. At common law, the defendant could only have pleaded a single matter to the whole declaration; which rigour often abridged the justice of his defence, and was doubtless one cause of perplexed inartificial pleading; the party endeavouring to crowd as much reasoning as he could into his plea, however intricate, repugnant and contradictory he made it by so doing b. But even at common law, the defendant might have pleaded several matters, to different parts of the declaration; as not guilty to part, and to other part a justification, or release, &c. And where there were several defendants, each of them might have pleaded a single matter to the whole, or several matters to different parts of the declaration c. And now, by the statute for the amendment of the law d, " the defendant or tenant in " any action or suit, or any plaintiff in replevin, in any court of record, " may, with the leave of the same court, plead as many several matters " thereto, as he shall think necessary for his defence: Provided neverthe-" less, that if any such matter shall, upon a demurrer joined, be judged " insufficient, costs shall be given at the discretion of the court; or if a " verdict shall be found, upon any issue in the said cause, for the plaintiff " or demandant, costs shall be also given in like manner; unless the " judge who tried the said issue, shall certify that the said defendant or " tenant, or plaintiff in replevin, had a probable cause to plead such matter,

Upon this statute it has been holden, that the defendant shall not be What pleas are allowed to plead any pleas that are manifestly inconsistent, such as nonassumpsit b, or non est factume, to the whole declaration, and a tender as to part; for one of these pleas goes to deny that the plaintiff ever had any cause of action, and the other partially admits it. So, the defendant is not allowed to plead non assumpsit, and the stock-jobbing act d; or a plea of alien enemy, with non assumpsite, a tender f, or other inconsistent matter s. And he shall not plead several matters which require different trials, as in dower, ne unques accouple en loyal matrimonie and a mortgage, or ne unques seisie que dower h; for the first matter is triable by the bishop, and the others by a jury, and if the former be found against the defendant, the judge cannot certify that he had a probable cause of pleading it. The statute for pleading double does not extend to any action or information upon a penal statute i: And as the king is not bound by this statute k, the defendant cannot plead double in an information of intrusion 1; in quare impedit, where the king is a party m; or in scire facias, for a bond debt to the king n: nor could he plead double, till the statute 32 Geo. accordingly it is now sottled, that, with the exceptions mentioned in the preceding paragraph, the defendant may in general plead as many different matters as he shall think necessary for his defence, though they may appear at first view to be contradictory of inconsistent; as non assumpsit and the statute of limitations, or non est facture and the statute of gaming, or usury b; or in trespass, not guilty and a justification s. accord and satisfaction, or tender of amends d, &c. So, he may plead non assumpsit and infancy, or a release o, or not guilty and liberum tenementum : though as infancy may be given in evidence upon non assumpsit, and liberum tenementum upon not guilty, the pleading of these matters specially seems to be unnecessary. And the plaintiff in replevin may plead in bar to the defendant's avowry or cognizance, that he did not hold as tenant, and no rent in arrear, with a plea of infancy . But, in an action on a deed made beyond seas, the court of Common Pleas would not permit the defendant to plead non est factum, where he relied in some of his pleas, on matters of defence which necessarily imported the execution of the doct. So, in scire facias on a judgment, the defendant having moved to plead several matters, viz. first, payment; secondly, that the judgment was fraudulent; and thirdly, that it was on a warrant of attorney fraudulently obtained; the court refused to allow the three pleas to be pleaded, and put the defendant to his election. And, in a late case k, the court of Common Pleas gave out, that for the future, inconsistent pleas should not be allowed, unless accompanied with an affidavit, to show that they were necessary to the justice of the cause.

In quo warranto. By the statute 32 Geo. III. c. 58. it is enacted, that "it shall be law"ful for the defendant, to any information in the nature of a quo war"ranto, for the exercise of any office or franchise in any city, borough, or "town corporate, to plead that he had first actually taken upon himself, "or held or executed the office or franchise which is the subject of such "information, six years or more before the exhibiting of such informa"tion, &c.: which plea shall and may be pleaded either singly, or to"gether with and besides such plea as he might have lawfully pleaded "before the passing of the act; or such several pleas as the court on mo"tion shall allow." In the construction of which statute it has been holden, that the legislature intended to give a defendant, in such a proceeding, the liberty of pleading several pleas, whether with or without the plea of the statute of limitations; the concluding words of the act being, "or such several pleas, &c." But this statute, as well as the 9
Ann. c. 20. § 4, &c. is confined to corporate offices ": and it does not ap-

In the Common Pleas, the rule to plead several matters is drawn up by the secondaries e; and they will draw it up as a matter of course, on a brief or motion paper signed by a serjeant, without a rule to shew cause, for leave to plead the following pleas, viz. in assumpsit, non assumpsit and non assumpsit infra sex annos, or a release, or set off; non assumpsit as to part, with a tender and set off; non assumpsit and a discharge under an insolvent act, or plene administravit, generally or specially; plene administravit and a set off, or ne unques executor and plene administravit: in debt on bond, non est factum and infancy or duress, or solvit ad diem and a set off; and in trespass, not guilty and liberum tenementum, son assault demesne, molliter manus imposuit, or a tender of amends f. The motion for leave to plead several matters cannot be made, in the Common Pleas, till the defendant has appeared ; but afterwards, it may be made at any time before judgment d: and if the time for pleading be nearly expired, the court, on the same motion, will allow the defendant further time, on putting the plaintiff in as good a situation . The rule nisi being drawn up, a copy of it should be made, and served on the plaintiff's attorney, showing him the original rule; and on the day of shewing cause, the court, on an affidavit of service, will make the rule absolute : which latter rule being drawn up by the secondaries, a copy thereof should be made, and annexed to the pleas, before they are filed or delivered; or, if filed or delivered before the rule is made absolute, it is desined sufficient in this court, to annex a copy of the rule misi to the plans, and to indorse a notice thereon, that the rule absolute will be served, as soon as it is drawn up s. In vacation, a judge on summons will make an order for the clerk of the rules in the King's Bench, or secondaries in the Common Pleas, to draw up the rule, on producing a brief or motion paper, signed by a counsel or serjeant, for that purpose h. In the King's Bench, if several pleas be filed, to the whole or part of a declaration, without a rule to plead several matters being drawn up, or instructions given for it to the clerk of the rules, they are considered as a nullity, and the plaintiff may sign judgment i: or, in the Common Pleas, he may apply to the court, to strike out one of them k: But if a rule be obtained, and the pleas put in, without saying by leave of the court, it is only an irregularity, or at most cause of special demurrer for duplicity ! And where the plaintiff signed judgment as for want of a plea, because the rule to plead several matters was erroneously entitled, the court of Common Pleas set aside the judgment, without costs; affidavit being made that the pleas were true, and that the defendant had a good defence m.

Respecting costs, upon the statute of Anne, the intention of the legislature appears to have been, that if there he several matters pleaded, some of which are found for the plaintiff, he shall be entitled to the costs of those ", notwithstanding other matters are found for the defend-

That this is the true construction of the statute will appear from the following 化甲基甲二酰乙酰胺产品的 化银色

In trespass, the defendant pleaded not guilty and several justifications; upon the trial, the plaintiff not proving his possession of the locus in quo, the defendant had a verdict; and, by direction of Denison, J. the verdict was entered upon the general issue only; upon which there was a motion for a venire de novo: but the court refused the motion, saying, the verdict was complete, and determined the cause; that the plaintiff was not entitled to damages, though they said he might have insisted to have a verdict entered on the other issues, for the sake of costs, which he would be entitled to, unless the judge certified that the defendant had probable cause to plead such plea b.

When the defendant pleads not guilty, and a justification to which the plaintiff demurs, and the plaintiff has judgment on the demurrer, but is nonsuited on the plea of not guilty, he shall nevertheless be allowed the costs of the demurrer, which shall be deducted out of the costs allowed to the defendant. And if one of several pleas, pleaded by the defendant, be adjudged bad, on a demurrer to the plaintiff's replication, the plaintiff is entitled to have the costs of those pleadings deducted from the costs taxed for the defendant upon the postea, if afterwards, upon the trial of the issues joined on the other pleas, the defendant should have a verdict; even though it should appear, on the whole of the record, that the plaintiff had no cause of action d. But if the plaintiff take issue on several pleas, one of which is insufficient in law, and has a verdict on all the issues, except that joined on the insufficient plea, which is found for the defendant, and afterwards judgment is entered for the plaintiff, still he shall not be allowed any costs upon the issue found for the defendant e. And it has been resolved, at a meeting of all the judges, that if there be a certificate upon the 43 Eliz. the plaintiff shall not have the costs of any plea pleaded with leave of the court; although the issue thereupon joined be found for him, and the judge have not certified, that the defendant had a probable cause for pleading the matter therein pleaded f.

In an action for criminal conversation, the defendant pleaded two pleas, In action for viz. not guilty, and not guilty within six years; on the former the plaintiff murrer. joined issue, and obtained a verdict, but to the latter there was a demurrer, and judgment against him: and it was holden, that the defendant this seems to be a mistake; for the defendant being entitled to judgment upon the matters' found for him, is consequently entitled to the costs of them. Il East, 263.

The applicant or defendant in replevia, though not within the words, is plainly within the meaning of the statute 4 Ann. c. 16b. And accordingly, where there are several avownes or pleas in bar in replevia, and some of the issues joined thereon are found for the plaintiff, and some for the defendant, the party for whom the issues are found, which entitle him to judgment on the whole record, shall have the general costs of the cause, but the other party shall be allowed to deduct therefrom, the costs of the issues found for him, unless the judge who tried the cause certify, that the party entitled to judgment had a probable cause to make the avowries, or plead the pleas, upon which such issues were joined c. And in that case, the officer of the court, in taxing the costs, will allow the party for whom the issues are found, not only the costs of the pleadings, but also of such parts of the briefs and expenses of witnesses, as relate to the trial of these issues at and he will not allow the other party the costs of such parts of the pleadings, and of the briefs and witnesses, as are not applieable to the points on which the verdict proceeds. On the other hand, if the judge who tried the cause certify, that the party entitled to judgment had a probable cause for making the avowries, or pleading the pleas, the issues on which are found against him, the officer is not to deduct the costs of those issues f: And, in the Common Pleas, if a defendant in replevin, after trial and verdict for the plaintiff, obtain judgment non obstante veredicto, in consequence of the plaintiff's pleas in bar being bad, he is not entitled to any costs upon the pleadings subsequent to the pleas in bar, because he should have demurred to them s. The certificate of probable cause is not required to be made in court, at the trial of the cause h: and, where the judge refuses to grant it, the court have not a discretionary power, whether they will allow the plaintiff any costs at all; but are bound by the statute to allow him some costs, though the quantum is left to their discretion i. , T. 1

General qualities and conditions of plea. truth the matter pleaded he only an enswer to part, or wice versit, the whole plea is naught, and the plaintiff may demural; but if a plea begin only as an enswer to part, and be in truth but an enswer to part, it is a discontinuance, and the plaintiff must not demur, but take his judgment for the part unanswered, as by nit dicit : for if he demur, or plead over, the whole action is discontinued. Secondly, the plea at common law should be single, consisting only of one fact, or of several facts making together one point: for if a plea contain duplicity, or allege several distinct matters, which require several answers to the same thing, it is bad 4. Thirdly, it should be certain, in point of form as well as substance: but certainty to a common intent is sufficient; and that which is apparent to the court, by necessary collection out of the record, or is necessarily implied, need not be expressed; as in setting forth the feofiment of a manor, it is unnecessary to state livery and attornment . So, that which is alleged by way of conveyance, or inducement to the substance of the matter, need not be so certainly alleged as that which is the substance itself ! Fourthly, every plea, for the sake of certainty, must be direct and positive, and not by way of argument or rehearsal . Fifthly, it should be so pleaded, as to be capable of trial, by the court upon demurrer or nul tiel record, or by the jury upon an issue in fact!. Sixthly, it should be true, and capable of proof; for truth is said to be the goodness and virtue of pleading, as certainty is the grace and beauty of it m. Seventhly, the plea shall be taken most strongly against him that pleadeth it; for every man is presumed to make the best of his own case n. But lastly, wurplusage shall never make the plea vicious, except where it is repugnant, or contrary to matter precedent °.

In many cases, the law doth allow general pleading, for avoiding prolixity and tediousness; and the particulars shall come on the other side p. Thus, when a man is bound to perform all the covenants in an indenture, if they are all in the affirmative, he may plead performance generally: but if any are in the negative, to so many he must plead specially, (for a negative cannot be performed,) and generally to the rest. So, if any are

In mitting forth s title, general estates in fee simple may be generally alleged; but the commencement of estates tail, and other particular estates, must regularly he shewn; unless in some cases where they are alleged by way of indiscement by and the life of tensut in tail, or for life, ought to be average. Every plea dight to have its proper conclusion de When the general issue is pleaded, or the defendant simply denies some material fact alleged in the declaration, he should conclude his plea by putting himself upon the country of but where the plea advances new matter in the affirmative, the defendant should conclude it with an averment, or verification and prayer of judgment si actio: or, in other words, by professing himself ready to verify the plea, and praying judgment, if the plaintiff ought to have or maintain his action against him. An accorry however, wherein the defendant is an actor, and which is in the nature of a county need not he averred i, nor bleas which are merely in the negative, because a negative cannot be proved. When a judgment, or other matter of record, is pleaded, the plea should conclude with a verification by the record: And where in debt, the matter of the plea shews there never was a good cause of action, as in debt on bond against an heir, who pleads riens per discent, the defendant, instead of concluding that the plaintiff ought not to have his action, may conclude that he (the defendant,) ought not to be charged with the debt, by virtue of the writing obligatory s. In an action of debt, the defendant, in pleading a tender, ought to conclude his plea, by praying judgment if the plaintiff ought to have or maintain his action, to recover any damages against him; for in this action, the debt is the principal, and the damages are only accessary: but in assumpsit, the damages are the principal; and therefore, in pleading a tender, the defendant ought to conclude his plea, with a prayer of judgment, if the plaintiff ought to have or maintain his action, to recever any more or greater damages than the sum tendered, or any damages by reason of the non-payment thereof h. In pleading matter of estoppel, the defendant in his conclusion ought to rely upon it 4

Doctrine of set off.

As the defence, in actions upon contracts, frequently consists in setting off mutual debts, it may here be proper to consider the doctrine of set off and in what cases it must be pleaded, or may be given in evidence under the general issue; and in the latter case, the notice of set off.

TANK BOBE IN ARTHUR A CHARLES OF SUN OF

At common law, if the plaintiff was indebted to the defendant in as At common law much, ar even more than the defendant owed to him, yet he had no methed of striking a balance; the only way of obtaining relief was by going into a court of equity. To remedy this inconvenience, it was enacted By statutes. by the statute 2 Geo. II. c. 22. § 13. that "where there are mutual ". debts between the plaintiff and defendant, or, if either party sue or be, " sued as executor or administrator, where there are mutual debts be-"tween the testator or intestate and either party, one debt may be set " against the other; and such matter may be given in evidence upon the " general issue, or pleaded in bar, as the nature of the case shall require; " so as at the time of pleading the general issue, where any such debt of " the plaintiff, his testator or intestate, is intended to be insisted on in " evidence, notice shall be given of the particular sum or debt so intended "to be insisted on, and upon what account it became due; or otherwise " such matter shall not be allowed in evidence upon the general issue." This clause was made perpetual by the 8 Geo. II. c. 24. § 4.: and it having been doubted, whether mutual debts of a different nature could be set against each other, it was by the last-mentioned statute b further enacted and declared, that "by virtue of the said clause, mutual debts may " be set against each other, either by being pleaded in bar, or given in " evidence on the general issue, in the manner therein mentioned, not-" withstanding that such debts are deemed in law to be of a different " nature; unless in cases where either of the said debts shall accrue by " reason of a penalty, contained in any bond or specialty; and in all cases, where either the debt for which the action hath been or shall be " brought, or the debt intended to be set against the same, hath accrued, " or shall accrue, by reason of any such penalty, the debt intended to be " set off shall be pleaded in bar; in which plea shall be shewn, how much " is truly and justly due on either side: and in case the plaintiff shall re-" cover in any such action or suit, judgment shall be entered for no more " than shall appear to be truly and justly due to him, after one debt be-" ing set against the other as aforesaid "." If an account has been settled, and balance struck between the parties, it may be given in evidence on the general issue; but a defendant cannot reduce a plaintiff's demand for goods sold, by producing a debtor and creditor account, in the hand-writing of the plaintiff's clerk, shewing goods to have been sold by defendant to plaintiff, unless he has pleaded or given a notice of set off d.

The actions in which a set off is allowable upon these statutes are debt; In what actions covenant, and assumpsit for the non-payment of money; and the demand what not. intended to be set off must be liquidated e, and such as might have been

But where the insurance is made by the broker in the name of his principal that has not a commission del credered, the losses and returns of premium, not being a mutual debt, cannot be made the subject of a set off. So, if an action be brought against a policy broker, by the assignees or executors of an underwriter, for premiums, where the insurance was made by the broker in his own name on a del eredere commission, the defendant may set off the amount of losses happening and adjusted, or returns of premium becoming due, before the bankruptcy, or in the life-time of the testator . But a loss happening before the bankruptcy cannot be set off, in an action brought by the assignew of an underwriter against a broker, for premiums due to the bankrupt, where the insurance was made in the name of the assured, and the broker was not intrusted with the policy, though he had a del credere commission, and had paid the loss to the assured before the bankruptcy nor where the insurance was made by the broker as agent, without a del credere commission, and there had been no adjustment, though the loss took place before the bankruptcy, and though the policy had always remained in the hands of the broker, and he had actually paid the amount of the loss to his principal s. And a broker who is indebted to the assignees of a bankrupt, for premiums due to them upon policies subscribed by the bankrupt before his bankruptcy, is not entitled to set off returns of premium due upon the arrival of ships after the bankruptcy h. So, in an action by the executors of an underwriter against a broker for premiums due on policies subscribed by the testator, the defendant cannot set off returns of premium which became due after the testator's death i: and it makes no difference in this respect, that the policies were effected under a del credere commission k. A broker having adjusted a loss with an underwriter, and struck his name out of the policy and adjustment, after which he became bankrupt within the usual time of credit, it was holden that the underwriter could not set off against the assured, the balance due to him from the broker, at the time of adjusting the loss on the policy !

But a note indorsed to the defendant, after the bankruptcy, cannot be set offe; nor each notes issued by the bankrupt before his bankruptcy, and payable to bearer, unless the defendant shew further, that such notes came to his hands before the bankruptcy. To enable the holder of a bankrupt's acceptances to avail himself of them, in an action by the assigness against himself on his own acceptance, he must clearly prove, either that the obligation to pay the bankrupt's acceptances subsisted before the bankruptcy, to bring the case within the ordinary law of set off, or that there was some connection in the origin of the transaction, to bring it within the cases of mutual credit.

When either of the debts accrues by reason of a penalty, the debt in- Pleading, or tended to be set off must be pleaded in bar; and the defendant in his giving notice of plea, must aver what is really due f: which averment has been holden to be traversable s, though laid under a videlicet h. But in all other cases, the defendant may either plead or give notice of set off, at his election 1. If, at the timeof the action brought, a larger sum was due from the plaintiff to the defendant, than from him to the plaintiff, the action being barred, it seems many proper to plead the set off; and it is usually pleaded in country causes to save the trouble and expense of proving the service of a notice. A notice of set off can only be given, when the general issue is pleaded, without any other plea m. Though if it be not then given, the court, on motion, will give the defendant leave to withdraw the general mine, and plead it again with a notice of set off " and such notice may be given with the general issue, after the defendant has been ruled to avide by his plead. In point of form, a notice of set off should be almost as certain as a declaration: therefore, where the hotice of set off was in these words, "Take notice that you are indebted to me," for the use and occupation of "as house, for a long time held and enjoyed, and now lately elapsed;" it was deemed insufficient a: and it afterwards appearing, that the debt intended to have been set off was rent reserved on a lease by indenture, which was not mentioned in the notice, the chief justice said it was bad on that account also, for if this had been shown, the plaintiff might probably have proved an eviction, or some other matter to avoid the demand. The notice of set of is usually written under the plea, and delivered therewith to the plaintiff's attorney; and a copy of the notice should be kept by the defendant's attorney, it being necessary to prove the delivery of it at the trial of the cause s.

When the defendant has a set off against the plaintiff, of which he gives notice, but does not appear at the trial to offer evidence in support of it, the plaintiff may either take a verdict for the whole sum he proves to be due to him, subject to be reduced to the sum really due on a balance of accounts, if the defendant will afterwards enter into a rule not to sue for the debt intended to be set off; or, it is said he may take a verdict for the smaller sum, with a special indorsement on the posteti; as a foundation for the court to order a stay of proceedings, if another action should be brought for the amount of the set off h.

Depositions actions by assignees, for debt of bankrupt, unless he give notice of his intention to dispute the commission, &c.

Where the defendant, in an action brought by the assignee of a bankrupt, intends to dispute the trading, petitioning creditor's debt, or act of bankruptcy, the notice should specify which of these matters it is intended to dispute; it not being sufficient to give a general notice, that he intends to dispute the bankruptcy. In a previous case, axising upon the 49 Geo. III. c. 121. § 10. where the general issue had been pleader before the passing of that act, it was deemed unnecessary for the laintiff to prove the petitioning creditor's debt, trading, or act of same time the issue is delivered, with notice of trial on the back of it, is not sufficient: It must be given before issue joined. The notice may be served on the assignee, by delivery to his attorney h: but service of the notice, by leaving it with a maid servant at the dwelling house of the assignee, is not sufficient h. And the notice given by a defendant is not to be considered as part of his regular evidence in the cause; but may be proved at the beginning of the trial, and immediately puts the plaintiff upon strict proof of the trading, petitioning creditor's debt, or act of bankruptey.

In an action of trespass, brought by a bankrupt against his assignees, to try the validity of the commission d, or in trover by a third person against the assignees, although they are not named as assignees on the record, if the plaintiff do not give any notice of his intention to dispute the petitioning creditor's debt, &c. the commission and proceedings under it are prima facie evidence for the defendant, to prove the trading, petitioning creditor's debt, and act of bankruptcy; though the plaintiff may notwithstanding call witnesses to contradict the depositions respecting them f. So, in an action of trespass, against the assignees of a bankrupt and their servants, the proceedings may be read in evidence, where no notice has been given under the statute, of the plaintiff's intention to dispute the bankruptcy, although there are other defendants on the record, besides the assignees s: And where the defendant, in an action at the suit of the assignee of a bankrupt, for the balance of an account, had attended a meeting of the commissioners, and exhibited the account between him and the bankrupt, and afterwards made a part payment to the plaintiff on that account; the court held, that this was prima facie evidence, as against the defendant, that the plaintiff was assignee, and that it was not necessary to produce the proceedings under the commission, the defendant not having given notice of his intention to dispute the bankruptcy h. But where the assignees are no parties to the record, and their title only incidentally comes in question in the course of the defence, it must be proved in the same manner as before the statute; although no notice of contesting the bankruptcy has been given by the opposite party i: And the defendant, though he has not given notice that he intends to dispute the proceedings under the commission, may nevertheless give evidence to disprove the act of bankruptcy k.

If no notice be given by the opposite party, that the validity of the commission is meant to be disputed, the petitioning creditor's debt is held to be sufficiently proved, by the deposition of the petitioning creditor himself before the commissioners 1. So, in an action for goods and and delivered, brought by the assignees of A. against whom a commission of bankruptcy issued, on the petition of certain persons who alleged that a debt was due to them as assignees of B. a bankrupt; the court held, that the petitioning creditor's debt was sufficiently proved by the production of the proceedings under the commission, no notice of an intention to dispute it having been given; and that it was not incumbent on the plaintiffs to give any other evidence, that the petitioning creditors were the assignees of B. And where, upon the trial of an action of trespass, in which the defendant justified under a commission of bankrupt issued against the plaintiff, no notice having been given to dispute the commission, which was put in, with the proceedings under it, and a perfect petitioning creditor's debt did not appear upon the proceedings; the court of Common Pleas nevertheless held, that the validity of the commission could not be disputed b: But in order to make the depositions evidence of the petitioning creditor's debt, where no notice has been given, it ought to appear therefrom that the debt was due at the time of the act of bankruptcy. And a deposition, stating that the bankrupt absented himself, and admitted that he did so for the purpose of avoiding his creditors, but not specifying the time of such admission, is not prima facie evidence to prove the act of bankruptcy d. In an action by a bankrupt against his assignees, to try the validity of the commission, where notice is given only to dispute the act of bankruptcy, and the defendants read the two depositions on the file of the proceedings, which prove the trading and petitioning creditor's debt, the residue of the proceedings are not to be considered in evidence, and the plaintiff's counsel has no right to inspect them . When the assignees of a bankrupt are nonsuited, they are not entitled, under the above acts, to the costs of proving, after notice, the petitioning creditor's debt, trading, and act of bankruptcy f.

The general issue is delivered, in the King's Bench, to the plaintiff's attorney, or entered in the general issue book, kept by the clerk of the judgments ; and need not be signed by counsel. There are also certain common pleas in that court, which need not be so signed; such as plene administravit, bankruptcy in the defendant h, a special non est factum, solvit ad diem l, comperuit ad diem to a bail bond k, or nul tiel record to an action on a judgment or recognizance; in covenant, when the plea concludes to the country; and in trespass, son assault demesne, liberum tenementum, or not guilty to a new assignment. In the King's Bench, the defendant cannot commonly waive the general issue, or a general demurrer, and instead thereof give a special plea or demurrere: but it is said, that if the general issue be not entered, the defendant may waive it, and plead specially, without leave of the court, in four days i; or, as it should seem, before the adjournment day of the term g, or within the first five days of the ensuing term h; and even afterwards, where it is not to the prejudice or delay of the plaintiff, the defendant, by leave of the court, may withdraw the general issue, in order to plead specially 1, or to plead it again, with a notice of set off k, or Or, with notice of the defendant's intention to dispute the petitioning creditor's debt, &c !. or upon bringing money into court m. In the Common Pleas, the defendant must always abide by his plea, after the plaintiff has replied to it; and therefore where the plaintiff moved that the defendant might abide by his plea, the court rejected the motion as unnecessary m. . Rule to reply.

WHEN the defendant has put in his plea, he may rule the plaintiff to reply a, by obtaining a rule from the master, in the King's Bench, on the back of the plea; which is entered with the clerk of the rules, and a copy served on the plaintiff's attorney: In the Common Pleas, the rule to reply is given on a pracipe, with the secondaries. This rule may be given at my time in term, or within sixteen days after, in the King's Bench b, or Fychequer', and, in the Common Pleas, when time to plead has been obtained, if the defendant plead, and give a rule to reply, before the expiration of that time, the rule to reply will be of no avail, unless he give notice of his plea d. If the rule be not given till four terms have elapsed, after plea pleaded, the plaintiff must have a term's notice e of the defendant's intention to give it, unless the cause hath been stayed by injunction or privilege f: which notice must be given before the essoin day of the term g; and it is usual to give the rule on the day after the term is expired h. And where a cause has stood over for several terms, the rule to reply must be given of the term in which the judgment of non pros is signed i. The rule to reply expires in four days exclusive after service, in the King's Bench; and Sunday, or any holyday on which the court does not sit, or the office is not open, if it be not the last, is to be accounted a day within the rule k. If the plaintiff do not reply within the time limited, or obtain an order for further time, which may be obtained on a judge's summons, in like manner as an order for further time to plead, the defendant may sign a judgment of non pros1; and it is not necessary for him, in the King's Bench, to demand a replication, the service of the copy of the rule being deemed in that court a demand of itself m: but, in the Common Pleas, a replication must be demanded in writing, by the defendant's attorney n; after which, if a replication be not delivered, or filed at the prothonotaries office, in due time, he may sign a judgment of non pros o. And it seems that such judgment may be signed by one of two defendants in plaintiff, after

If the defendant plead in abatement after a general imparlance, or to the Setting aside jurisdiction of the court after a special imparlance, the plaintiff, we have seen h, may sign judgment, or apply to the court by motion to set aside the plea. We have also seen, that when it is doubtful whether the plea be issuable, the better way, in term time, is to move the court to set it aside i: And in general, if it be not clear that a bad plea may be considered as a nullity, the safest course is not to sign judgment, but to take issue thereon, demur, or move the court to set it aside k. When the defendant pleads a release, fraudulently obtained from the nominal plaintiff, to the prejudice of the party really interested, and for whose benefit the action is brought, or from one of several plaintiffs to the prejudice of the rest, the court on motion will set aside the plea, and order the release to be delivered up to be cancelled: Thus, where the obligor of a bond, after notice of its being assigned, took a release from the obligee, and pleaded it to an action brought by the assignce, in the name of the obligee, the court of Common Pleas set the plea aside; and under these circumstances, would not allow the obligor to plead payment of the bond 1. So, if a person who is sued by a landlord, in the name of his tenant, procure a release from the nominal plaintiff, the court will order the release to be delivered up, and permit the landlord to proceed m: And where a landlord, with the permission of his bailiff, who had made a distress for rent, commenced an action, in the bailiff's name, against the sheriff, for taking insufficient pledges, and the bailiff afterwards, without the landlord's privity, executed a release to the sheriff, who pleaded it puis darrein continuance, the court of Common Pleas set aside the plea, and ordered the release to be delivered up to be cancelled n. So, a plea of release by one of several plaintiffs was set aside by the court of King's Bench, without costs, on the terms of indemnifying

But, except a very strong case of fraud be made out, the court will not control the legal power of a co-plaintiff to release the action b: And unless the plea be set aside, a judge at nisi prius has no equitable jurisdiction, and can only look to the strict legal rights of the parties upon the record: Therefore if, in an action for goods sold, the defendant prove a receipt in full signed by the plaintiff, evidence cannot be admitted, by way of answer to this defence, that the plaintiff had assigned all his effects for the benefit of his creditors, that the action was brought by his trustees in his name, that no money passed when the receipt was given, and that the plaintiff on the record and the defendant had colluded together to defeat the action c.

If the plaintiff perceive that he cannot maintain his action, it is usual for him to take out a rule for leave to discontinue. A rule to discontinue g may be had either before or after declaration h; and it is usually granted upon payment of costs i. An executor or administrator is liable to costs upon a discontinuance, when he has knowingly brought a wrong action k; but when that is not the case, he may have leave to discontinue, without paying costs 1: And where, upon setting aside a verdict for the plaintiff, the costs are directed to abide the event, and then the plaintiff discontinues the action, the defendant is not entitled to the costs of the trial m. The rule to discontinue is a side-bar rule; and What, and when may be had as a matter of course, from the clerk of the rules in the King's Bench, at any time before trial or inquiry n: and leave has been given to discontinue after argument, and before judgment on demurrer . And even after a special verdict, the plaintiff may discontinue, by leave of the court, because that is not complete and final; but in this case it is a great favour p: And it is never granted after a general verdict p, or writ of inquiry executed and returned q, nor after a peremptory rule for judgment on demurrer r. Costs of witment of costs on the writ of error. After notice of trial given, and regularly countermanded, the plaintiff, in the Common Pleas, obtained a rule to discontinue, upon payment of costs; and it appearing that after the notice of trial, and before the countermand, a witness for the defendant, who resided in London, had set out for the York assizes, the question was, whether the expense of this witness could be allowed the defendant in costs: The court held, that as the countermand was regular, the costs for this witness could not be allowed b.

From whom, and how obtained.

Appointment for, and taxation of costs on.

Remedy for recovery of costs.

Evidence of, in action for malicious arrest, &c.

The rule to discontinue is obtained from the clerk of the rules in the King's Bench, or secondaries in the Common Pleas; but in the latter court, if it be after plea pleaded, the defendant's attorney must first consent to a rule in the treasury chamber in term-time, or before a judge in vacation by else there must be a rule to shew cause. And upon a rule to discontinue, the plaintiff must get an appointment from the master in the King's Bench, or prothonotaries in the Common Pleas, to tax the costs. and serve a copy of it on the defendant's attorney; it having been holden, that the service of a rule to discontinue, without an appointment to the the tours, is not of itself a discontinuance of the action d. In the King's Bench, the master will tax the costs ex parte, if the defendant's attorney do not attend on the first appointment e: But in the Common Pleas, another copy of the rule must be made, in case of non-attendance, and a second appointment obtained thereon, and served as before, and so a third time; and if he do not attend the third appointment, the prothonotaries will tax the costs ex parte f. The costs being taxed, are to be forthwith paid; otherwise the plaintiff may be compelled to proceed in the action: for the rule being conditional, is no stay of proceedings; and it has been holden, that for the non-payment of these costs, the plaintiff is not liable to an attachment g. An averment in an action for a malicious arrest, that the suit is wholly ended and determined, is proved by evidence of the rule to discontinue upon payment of costs, and that the costs were taxed and paid, without producing the roll, with judgment of discontinuance entered upon it h. And where a rule to discontinue, on payment of costs, was obtained by the plaintiff on the 6th of February, but the costs were not taxed until the 11th of March; the court held, that when the costs were taxed, and the judgment of discontinuance entered up, it related back to the day when the rule for a discontinuance was obtained, and that the action was to be considered discontinued from that time i. So, a rule for discharging the defendant out of custody at the plaintiff's suit, in an action on a bill of exchange, and that all further proceedings in the cause should be stayed, and the bill of exchange delivered up to the defendant, has been deemed evidence of the termination of the suit a. But it seems, that a judge's order to stay proceedings on payment of costs, and proof of such payment, is not sufficient evidence that the first suit is at an end b. And where it was averred in the declaration, that the defendant voluntarily permitted his suit to be discontinued for want of prosecution, and thereupon it was considered by the court that he should take nothing by his bill, prout patet per recordum, whereby the suit was ended and determined; it was holden, that this averment was not proved by the production of a rule to discontinue; but the record having been averred, ought to have been proved c.

A nolle prosequi is an acknowledgment or agreement by the plaintiff, Nolle prosequi, that he will not further prosecute his suit, as to the whole or a part of the cause of action; or, where there are several defendants, apriling some or one of them d.

On a plea of coverture, &c. if the plaintiff cannot answer it, he may As to the whole, enter a nolle prosequi as to the whole cause of action; but the defendant in such case is entitled to costs, under the 8 Eliz. c. 2 § 2 c. So, if the defendant demur to one of several counts of a declaration, the plaintiff may enter a nolle prosequi as to that count which is demurred to, and proceed to trial upon the other counts f; or, if he join in demurrer and obtain judgment, he may enter a nolle prosequi as to the issue, and procoed to a writ of inquiry on the demurrer g: And if the plaintiff enter a nolle prosequi as to any of the counts in a declaration, he is not entitled to costs on such counts b. But, after a demurrer for mis-joinder, the plaintiff cannot cure it, by entering a nolle prosequi: And if there be a demurrer to a declaration, consisting of two counts, against two defendants, because one of them was not named in the last count, the plaintiff cannot enter a nolle prosequi on that count, and proceed on the other *.

If there be a demurrer to part, and an issue upon other part, and the plaintiff prevail on the demurrer, it was in one case holden, that without a nolle prosequi as to the issue, he cannot have a writ of inquiry on the demurrer; because, on the trial of the issue, the same jury will ascertain the damages for that part which is demurred to. But, in a subsequent case b, where the declaration consisted of four counts, to three of which there was a plea of non assumpsit, and a demurrer to the fourth; and, after judgment on the demurrer, the plaintiff took out a writ of inquiry, and executed it: this was moved to be set aside, there being no nolle prosequi on the roll; and it was insisted, that the plaintiff ought to take out a venire, as well to try the issue, as to inquire of the damages upon the demurrer: Sed per Curiam, "that is indeed the course, where the issues are carried down to trial, before the demurrer is determined, and in that case the jury give contingent damages; but here, the demurrer being determined, and the plaintiff being able to recover all he goes for upon the fourth count, there is no reason why we should force him to carry down the record to nisi prius: and as to the want of a nolle prosequi upon the roll, he may supply that, when he comes to enter the final judgment; if not, the defendant will have the advantage of it upon a writ of error: The judgment upon the inquiry must stand."

In action against several defendants.

. In treepass, or other action for a wrong, against several defendants, the plantiff may, at any time before final judgment, enter a nolle prosequi as to one defendant, and proceed against the others c: And so in assumpsit, or other action upon contract, against several defendants, one of whom pleads bankruptcy, or other matter in his personal discharge, the plaintiff may enter a nolle prosequi as to him, and proceed against the other defendants d. So, in trespass against several defendants, where the jury by mistake have assessed several damages, the plaintiff may cure it by entering a nolle prosequi as to one of the defendants, and taking judgment against the others. But a nolle prosequi cannot be entered as to one defendant, after final judgment against the others f: And it seems that in assumpsit, or other action upon contract, against several defendants, the plaintiff cannot enter a nolle prosequi as to one, unless it be for some matter operating in his personal discharge, without releasing the others g. So, where the plaintiff declares on a joint contract against two defendants, and one of them pleads infancy, the plaintiff cannot enter a nolle prosequi as to him, and proceed against the other defendant in that action; but should commence a new action against the adult defendant only h. In entering a nolle prosequi, the plaintiff need not be amerced pro fulso clamore; but it is sufficient that the defendant be put without day i.

Of a nature similar to a nolle prosequi, is the entry of a stet processus k, by which the plaintiff agrees that all further proceedings in the action shall be stayed. This entry is usually made, where the defendant becomes

In an action against an executor or administrator, if the defendant Judgment of plead plene administravit, and it cannot be proved that he has assets in hand, the plaintiff may confess the plea, and take judgments of assets in futuro; which is an interlocutory or final judgment, according to the nature of the action: and if it be only interlocutory, there must be a writ of inquiry to complete it. So, in an action against an insolvent debtor or fugitive, whose future effects remain liable to the payment of his debts, the plaintiff may take judgment for his demand, to be levied of those effects c.

Traverse, when necessary, and when not.

What, and of what it should consist.

Matters traversable, or not.

Inducement to, and rules respecting.

When there is an affirmative and negative, either in express words or by necessary implication a, or a complete confession and avoidance, a traverse is unnecessary and superfluous. But when there are two affirmatives which do not impliedly negative each other, or a confession and avoidance by argument only, it is necessary to add a traverse. A traverse is a denial of the whole, or most material point of the adversary's pleading b; or, if there be several points equally material, of one of them c: and it should consist of some matter of fact, triable by the country, either expressly alleged 4, or necessarily implied e. Matter of inducement therefore, or conveyance to the action f, a mere suggestion surmise or supposal, the time and place, or what is alleged under a scilicet, if immaterial, is not allowed to be traversed; nor matter of law g, or mere legal inference; matter of intention, which is not triable, as the sciens in an action of deceit; matter of record which is not triable by the country; or any other matter, which is not expressly alleged, or necessarily implied. But matter of inducement, &c. is traversable, if material h.

Every traverse ought to have a proper inducement; and if that be bad, the traverse is insufficient i: But the inducement to a traverse does not require much certainty; though the traverse itself should be certain k, and neither too large nor too narrow i, that is, it should deny so much as is material, and no more. The proper words for beginning a traverse, are absque hoc; but any words tantamount are sufficient, as et non: And the replication ought not to conclude to the country, unless it comprise the whole matter of the plea. There cannot be a traverse after a traverse, when the first was apt and material in: but it is otherwise, when the first traverse was not to the point of the action, or immaterial in. And the king is allowed to take a traverse after a traverse, when his title appears by office, or other matter of record.

Want of, or improper one, when aided.

The want of a necessary traverse, or a traverse that is unnecessary and superfluous, is merely form, and aided after verdict, on a general demurrer, or by pleading over. A traverse improperly taken is also aided in like manner; as where it is without an inducement, or of an immaterial point, or of one that is not the most material, or too large, or too narrow, or after a former traverse a.

If the plaintiff cannot deny the truth of the plea, he may confess and Replication, in avoid it, or conclude the defendant by matter of estoppel. Avoidance, we have seen b, is either by matter precedent, which is called an avoidance in law, or by matter subsequent, which is called an avoidance in fact c. And it is a rule, with regard to estoppels, that they should be pleaded with certainty in every particular d; and in pleading or replying, the party must rely upon them e.

In general we may observe, that the qualities of a replication are similar to those of a plea: therefore it should answer the whole matter alleged, and be single f, certain, direct and positive, triable, and capable of proof s. But though a replication must not be double, yet it may contain several distinct answers to different parts of the plea: Thus, at common law, where the defendant in assumpsit pleads infancy, to a declaration consisting of several counts, the plaintiff may reply, as to part of his demand, that it was for necessaries; to other part, that the defendant was of full age at the time of the contract; and to other part, that he confirmed it after he came of age h. So, if an executor or administrator plead several judgments outstanding, and no assets ultra, the plaintiff may reply, as to one of the judgments, nul tiel record; and to another, that it was obtained or kept on foot by fraud i. And to a plea of set off, consisting of several demands upon judgment or recognizance and simple contract, the plaintiff in his replication may give several answers; as, to the judgment or reavoidance. By matter precedent, or subseauent. Estoppels.

May contain several answers, to different parts of plea.

Assigning breaches in replication, on stat. 8 & 9 W. III. c. 11.

At common law, when an action was brought on a bond with a penalty, conditioned for the performance of covenants, the plaintiff could only have assigned one breach of the condition, by which the forfeiture was incurred; for if he had assigned several breaches, the declaration would have been bad for duplicity; and if the issue joined on the breach assigned had been found for the plaintiff, he was entitled not only to recover the penalty, that being the legal debt, but also to take out execution for the same, although it far exceeded the amount of the damages actually sustained; and the defendant could only have obtained relief in a court of equity. For preventing these inconveniences, to the plaintiff as well as to the defendant, it was enacted by the statute 8 & 9 W. III. c. 11. § 8. that "in all actions upon any bond or bonds, or on any penal sum, for " non-performance of any covenants or agreements, in any indenture, " deed or writing contained, the plaintiff or plaintiffs may assign as many · breaches as he or they shall think fit; and the jury, upon the trial of " such action or actions, shall and may assess, not only such damages and " costs of suit as have heretofore been usually done in such cases, but " also darrages for such of the said breaches, so to be assigned, as the " plaintiff, upon the trial of the issues, shall prove to have been broken; " and that the like judgment shall be entered on such verdict, as hereto-" fore hath been usually done in such like actions." This statute, we have seen b, is compulsory on the plaintiff, to proceed in the method it prescribes: and under it, the breaches may either be assigned in the declaration, or in the replication. It was not formerly usual to assign them in the declaration; but this is now commonly done, for avoiding the necessity of a suggestion after judgment on demurrer, or by confession or nil dicit, or after a plea of non cst factum, &c.: And where they are so assigned, the defendant may deny the truth of them in his plea; and, if necessary for his defence, may plead several matters. But when the breaches are not assigned in the declaration, the usual course of pleading is, for the defendant in his plea to set out the condition, and plead performance generally; upon which the plaintiff assigns the breaches in his replication c. In debt on bond, conditioned for the payment of mortgage money, when the defendant pleads that he paid the money according to the condition, the plaintiff in his replication may take issue thereon, and conclude to the country, without assigning any further breach d: And in general, the breaches are held to be sufficiently assigned, though they are not said in terms to be according to the form of the statutes. After a plea of non est factum b, or that the bond was obtained by fraud c, &c. when the breaches are not assigned in the declaration, the plaintiff, in the King's Bench, is allowed to suggest them, in making up the issue; and proceed to assess damages thereon, at the time the issue is tried. This suggestion may be entered at any time before the trial; though, where the issue has been previously made up and delivered on such plea, it is irregular to deliver a second issue with a suggestion, without a summons and judge's order d. And, in a late case e, leave was given by the court of King's Bench to the plaintiff, in debt on bond conditioned to perform an award, after judgment for him upon a plea of judgment recovered, and writ of error allowed, to execute a writ of inquiry upon the above statute, and to sign a new judgment, on the terms of paying costs, and putting the defendant in statu quo, &c. But, in the Common Pleas, on a plea of general performance, if the plaintiff, instead of assigning breaches in his replication, deny the performance and conclude to the country, and then suggest breaches of the condition, it is bad on demurrer; and if the defendant do not demur, but take issue and go to trial on the question of performance, the court will after verdict award a repleader f.

In order to avoid duplicity, when a party is to answer two matters, and Protestando. yet by law he can only plead or reply to one of them, he may protest against the one, and plead or reply to the other: as where a delivery and acceptance are stated, of money or goods, &c. he may protest against the delivery, and take issue on the acceptance; or if a defendant plead that he is seised in fee of land, and prescribe for common of pasture, &c. the plaintiff in his replication may protest against the seisin, and take issue on the prescription. This is called a protestation, or, from the gerund used in making it when the proceedings were in Latin, a protestando; and What, and its is defined to be a saving to the party who takes it, from being concluded by any matter alleged, or objected against him on the other side, upon which he cannot take issue g. A protestando is said by Lord Coke to be an exclusion of a conclusion; or a safeguard to the party, which keepeth him from being concluded by the plea he is to make, if the issue be found for him h: And where it is doubtful whether a pleading be good, it is usual for the opposite party to protest that it is insufficient in law, before he answers it. But that which is the ground of the party's suit cannot What may, or be taken by protestation; for it may be denied by answer, and issue may be joined upon it: as in delinue by the executor of A., the defendant cannot take by protestation that A. did not make the plaintiff his executor, for it is the ground of the suit, and utterly destroys the plaintiff's action; and that which is the effect of the party's suit cannot be taken by protestation. Also it is a rule, that a protestation which is repugnant to, or inconsistent with the plea, or an idle and superfluous protestation, is not good b.

Inoperative in same suit. When issue is found against party taking it. A protestation is perfectly inoperative in the pleading in which it is used, it neither admitting nor denying any thing in that suit: and where one pleads a plea, and takes another matter by protestation, and the issue is found against him, the protestation is of no service c; it being a rule, that a protestation does not avail the party that takes it, if the issue be found against him, but only prevents a conclusion where the issue is found for him, unless it be a matter that cannot be pleaded d, or on which issue cannot be joined against him it shall be saved to the party protesting, though the issue be found against him f.

Replication must be consistent with declaration.
Departure,
what.

The only additional quality required in a replication, is that to be consistent with, and do not depart from the declaration. Departure in pleading is, when a man quits or departs from the case or defence which he has first made, and has recourse to another; or, in other words, when the replication or rejoinder contains matter not pursuant to the declaration or plea, and which does not support and fortify it g. Thus, if the declaration be founded on the common law, the plaintiff in his replication cannot maintain it by a special custom, or act of parliament h. So, in an action of debt on an arbitration bond, if the defendant plead "no award made," and the plaintiff, in his replication, set out an award, and assign a breach, the defendant cannot rejoin that the award was not tendered i, or is void k, or that the defendant hath performed, or been ready to perform it 1. So, in an action of debt on bond, conditioned for the payment of an annuity, if the defendant plead "no such memorial as the statute requires," to which the plaintiff replies that there was a memorial, which contained the names of the parties, &c. and the consideration for which the annuity was granted, and the defendant rejoins that the consideration is untruly alleged in the memorial to have been paid to both obligors, for that one of them did not receive any part of it; this rejoinder is bad, as being a departure from the plea m. So, in an action of debt on bond, conditioned for the performance of covenants, if the defendant plead performance, and the plaintiff reply and assign a breach, the defendant cannot rejoin any matter in excuse of performance. But where the rejoinder discloses new matter, in explanation or fortification of the bar, it is no departure b: Thus, where the defendant, in an action of debt on an arbitration bond, pleaded "no award," and the plaintiff in his replication set out the award, and the defendant in his rejoinder stated the whole award, in which was recited the bond of submission, by which it appeared, upon the face of the award, that it was not warranted by the submission, and then demurred; the court held, that the rejoinder was not inconsistent with, nor a departure from the plea c. In scire facias against bail, they pleaded In scire facias that there was no ca. sa. against the principal, the plaintiff replied, by shewing the ca. sa. and a return of non est inventus, the defendant rejoined that the ca. sa. did not lie four days in the office; and this, on demurrer, was holden to be a departure; although, by the practice of the court, the proceedings were on that account irregular, and might have been set aside d. But where bail, sued in scire facias upon their recognizance, pleaded that no ca. sa. was duly sued out, returned and filed, against the principal, according to the custom and practice of the court, to which the plaintiff in his replication shewed a writ of ca. sa. issued into Middlesex, it was holden to be no departure for the defendant to rejoin, that the venue in the action against the principal was laid in London; for that sustains the plea e.

Time and place, when material, cannot be departed from; as, in an As to time and action upon a bond f, or promissory note g, the plaintiff in his replication cannot vary from the day laid in the declaration. So, in an action for a local trespass, he cannot reply that it was committed at a different place. But when the time laid in the declaration is immaterial, there, if it become necessary by the defendant's plea, the plaintiff in his replication may depart from it; as in trespass h, or trover i, or upon a general indebitatus assumpsit k, when the time becomes material by the defendant's plea of a release, tender, or the statute of limitations, &c. So, in an action for a transitory trespass, when the defendant pleads a local justification, the plaintiff, in his replication, may vary from the place laid in the declaration 1. The proper mode of taking advantage of a departure, is by de- How taken murrer; for if the defendant, instead of demurring, take issue upon a replication containing a departure, and it be found against him, the court will not arrest the judgment m.

New assignment, what. But though a departure be not allowable, yet in many actions, and particularly in trespass, the plaintiff, who has alleged in his declaration a general wrong, may, in his replication, after an evasive plea by the defendant, reduce that general wrong to a more particular certainty, by assigning the injury afresh, with all its specific circumstances, in such manner as clearly to ascertain and identify it, consistently with his general complaint; which is called a new or novel assignment.

As to time.

A new assignment is either as to time, place, or other circumstances. With respect to time, when the defendant justifies under a right of common, &c. at particular times, the plaintiff may new assign the trespass at other times. So, in an action of assault and battery, if the defendant plead son assault demesne, and there were in truth two assaults, one of which the defendant can justify, and the other not, the plaintiff may new assign the assault for which he brought his action b. And it seems that the defendant in such case may prove an assault on any day before the action is very bit, and the plaintiff cannot give in evidence an assault at another degree or at another time on the same day, without a new assignment c. But where the defendant, in trespass quare clausum fregit on several days, pleads leave and licence to the whole, if some of the trespasses were committed after the licence was revoked, the plaintiff need not new assign; as the defendant, by his plea, undertakes to prove a licence sufficient to cover all the acts of trespass d.

As to place.

With respect to place, it is a rule, that if the plaintiff in trespass give it a name by his writ, the defendant cannot vary from that name; but if the writ be only general, quare clausum fregit, and the plaintiff give a name in his count, this shall not bind the defendant, but he may give the place another name. And it is on all hands agreed, that when the writ and count are both general, the defendant may give the place a name in his pleaf; or he may plead liberum tenementum generally, without giving it a name. But when the place is made material by the defendant's plea, he must shew it with certainty: as in trespass, for taking and carrying away the plaintiff's goods in D., the defendant pleaded that the locus in quo was his freehold, and that he took the goods damage feasant, &c. the plaintiff demurred generally, and had judgment; for the action being transitory, there is no locus in quo supposed, D. being only alleged for a venue; therefore, if the defendant will make the place material, it must come on his part to shew the certainty of it h.

If the defendant say, that the locus in quo is six acres in D, which are his freehold, and the plaintiff say they are his freehold, and in truth the plaintiff and defendant have both six acres there, it was in one case determined, that the defendant cannot give in evidence, that he committed the trespass in his own soil, unless he give a name certain to the six acres; for otherwise, it is said, the plaintiff cannot make a new assignment. So where the plaintiff, in trespass quare clausum fregit, names the close in his declaration, and the defendant pleads liberum tenementum generally, without giving any further description of the close, the plaintiff is not driven to a new assignment; but is entitled to recover, upon proving a trespass committed in a close in his possession, bearing the name given in the declaration, although the defendant may have a close in the same parish, known by the same name b. But where the defendant, in trespass quare clausum fregit in D. pleads liberum tenementum, without giving the close a name, and issue is joined thereupon, it seems to be sufficient for him to shew any close there that is his freehold; and therefore, in that case, the better way is to make a new assignment.

As the plaintiff may new assign the trespass in a different close, so he In another part may new assign it in another part of the same close. In the latter case, he ought to allege, in what 'other part of the close the defendant committed the trespass, as in the south or north part, so that the difference may be plainly perceived d. If the defendant justify under a right of way, Extra vium. the plaintiff may either deny the existence of the right claimed by the defendant, or admitting it, he may new assign the trespass, extra viam: or, if the declaration be so framed as to include several trespasses of the In what cases same nature, he may deny the right, as well as make a new assignment, by saying that he brought his action, not only for the trespass attempted assign, and in to be justified, but also for the other trespass extra viam. And where the defendant justifies under a right of common of pasture, or turbary, &c. the plaintiff may, if the declaration will admit of it, state the trespass to have been committed on other occasions, and for other purposes, than those mentioned in the plea. But where the plaintiff complains of a single act of trespass, which is justified by the defendant, the plaintiff cannot in his replication take issue upon the facts of the justification, and also newly assign either the same or different matters; such replication and new assignment being double e. The plaintiff therefore, in such case, should either reply to the plea, or new assign the trespass, according to the facts of the case: If the plea do not contain a complete answer to the trespass, When proper then the plaintiff should reply, by denying or confessing and avoiding it f; but if the trespass be completely justified by the plea, the plaintiff should not reply thereto, but make a new assignment, if the facts of the case will warrant it g: By new assigning, however, he admits that the trespass in the declaration is answered by the plea; and therefore, unless a different trespass of the same nature can be proved, the plaintiff must fail in his action. And where the declaration consisted of two counts, to the first of which there was a justification, and the plaintiff new assigned the trespass, as having been committed at a subsequent time, but failed at the trial in proving his new assignment, the court held, that he could not have recourse to the second count; for by new assigning he admitted that he did not intend to proceed for the trespass that was justified, but to rely on his new assignment; and as there were only two trespasses, one of which was admitted to be answered, he could not avail himself of the other trespass, both on the new assignment and on the second count.

New assignment must be certain. Pleas to. A new assignment, being in nature of a new declaration c, should be equally certain; and the defendant may answer it in the same way, either by pleading the general issue of not guilty, or a special justification d. But, in answer to a new assignment at a different place, he cannot say that the places mentioned in the plea and new assignment are the same c; tor by new assigning, the plaintiff admits the truth of the plea, and is estopped from giving any evidence in the place stated therein; so that if the places are in truth the same, the defendant may take advantage of it on the general issue of not guilty. Neither can the defendant justify at a different place, and traverse the place mentioned in the new assignment f.

Conclusion of replication.

When a replication denies the whole substance of the defendant's plea, there the plaintiff ought to tender an issue, and conclude to the country s: and it matters not whether the replication in such case be with or without a traverse; for where a traverse comprises the whole matter of the plea, the replication may still conclude to the country h. But when a particular fact is selected and denied, the conclusion seems to depend on the form of the replication: If it be so framed, as simply to deny the fact, without any inducement or traverse, it ought to conclude to the country i; but the plaintiff is not always obliged to reply in that way, for in some cases he is allowed, after a proper inducement, to traverse the fact, with an absque hock; and when a particular fact is so traversed, the replication should conclude to the court, with an averment and prayer of damages, or

CHAP. XXIX.

Of DEMURRERS, and AMENDMENT.

Demurrer, what.

To whole, or part of declaration, or to plea, replication, &c. A Demurrer admits the facts, and refers the law arising thereon to the judgment of the court a: And it is either to the whole or part of a declaration; or to the plea, replication, &c. When there are several counts in a declaration, some of which are good in point of law, and the rest bad, the defendant can only demur to the latter; for if he were to demur generally to the whole declaration, the court would give judgment against him b. So, if the sum demanded by a declaration in scire facias be divisible on the record, and there be no objection to one part of it, a demurrer which goes to the whole is bad c. If a plea or replication, which is entire, be bad in part, it is in general bad for the whole d: But a plea of set off, wherein the demands are divisible, and in nature of several counts in a declaration, forms an exception to this rule e.

General, or special.

For duplicity.

Demurrers are general or special ; the former are to the substance, the latter to the form of pleading. Thus, if a defective title be alleged, it is a fault in substance, for which the party may demur generally; but if a title be defectively stated, it is only a fault in form, which must be specially assigned for cause of demurrer. Of the latter nature is duplicity: and it is not sufficient to say that the pleading is double, or contains two matters; but the party demurring must specially shew wherein the duplicity consists g.

At common law.

At common law, there were special demurrers, but they were never necessary except in cases of duplicity, and therefore were seldom used; for as the law was then taken to be, upon a special demurrer, the party could take advantage of no other defect in the pleadings, but of that which was specially assigned for cause of his demurrer: but upon a general demurrer, he might take advantage of all manner of defects, that of duplicity only excepted. And there was no inconvenience in this practice; for the pleadings being at bar vivâ voce, and the exceptions taken ore tenus, the causes of demurrer were as well known upon a general demurrer, as upon a special one a.

Afterwards, when the practice of pleading at bar was altered, this pub- By stat. 27 lic inconvenience followed from the use of general demurrers; that the parties went on to argument, without knowing what they were to argue: and this was the occasion of making the statute 27 Eliz. c. 5. by which it is enacted, that " after demurrer joined and entered in any action or " suit, in any court of record, the judges shall proceed and give judgment, " according as the very right of the cause and matter in law shall appear " to them, without regarding any imperfection, defect, or want of form, in " any writ, return, plaint, declaration, or other pleading, process, or " course of proceeding whatsoever, except those only which the party de-" murring shall specially and particularly set down and express, together " with his denurrer." This statute, by making known the causes of demurrer, was so far restorative of the common law a: and as a general demurrer before did confess all matters formally pleaded, so by this statute, whenever the right sufficiently appeared to the court, it confessed all matters, though pleaded informally b.

But there were still many defects and imperfections, which were not 4 Ann. c. 16. aided as form upon a general demurrer: to remedy which it was enacted, by the statute 4 Ann. c. 16. § 1. that "no advantage or exception shall " be taken of or for an immaterial traverse, the default of entering " pledges upon any bill or declaration, the default of alleging a profert " in curia of any bond, bill, indenture, or other deed, mentioned in the " declaration or other pleading, or of letters testamentary, or letters of ad-" ministration, the omission of vi et armis, or contra pacem, the want of " averment of hoc paratus est verificare, or hoc paratus est verificare per " recordum, or not alleging prout putet per recordum": but the court " shall give judgment, according to the very right of the cause, without " regarding any such imperfections, omissions and defects, or any other " matter of like nature, except the same shall be specially and parti-" cularly set down, and shewn for cause of demurrer, notwithstanding " the same might have heretofore been taken to be matter of substance, " and not aided by the statute of Queen Elizabeth, so as sufficient matter " appear in the pleadings, upon which the court may give judgment, ac-" cording to the very right of the cause." Since the making of these What may be statutes, the party, on a general demurrer, can only take advantage of defects in substance; and therefore, if the defects be not clearly of that nature, it is safest to demur specially, in which case he may not only take advantage of such defects, but also of any others that are specially set down d. The plaintiff, however, need never demur specially to a plea in abatement e.

All demurrers must be signed. Delivering, or filing, in K. B.

All demurrers, whether general or special, must be signed by counsel in the King's Bench , or a serjeant in the Common Pleas ; and, in the King's Bench, general demurrers to the declaration must be delivered c to the plaintiff's attorney; but special demurrers, or general demurrers after special pleas, must be filed in the office of the clerk of the papers, who makes copies of them. And a general demurrer to part of a declaration, and the general issue to the rest, or a general demurrer to a plea of nil debet, in an action of debt on bond, must, we have seen d, be delivered to the opposite attorney, and not filed with the clerk of the papers. In the Common Pleas, all demurrers, whether general or special, may either be filed in the prothonotaries' office, or delivered to the opposite attorney e. And when either party has demurred, he should obtain a rule from the master in the King's Bench, and enter it with the clerk of the rules, for the opposite party to join in demurrer f; a copy of which rule should be duly served. In the Common Pleas, a rule to join in demurrer is given with the secondaries s, in like manner as the rule to plead; and a joinder in demurrer should be demanded h, before judgment; and in that court, a joinder in demurrer must have a serjeant's hand i. The defendant, we may remember, cannot waive a general demurrer to the declaration, in the King's Bench; but a special one may be waived after the book is made up, unless the defendant has been previously ruled, and elected to abide by it k. In the Exchequer it is a rule 1, that "in all cases where the plaintiff demurs to the defendant's plea, or other subsequent pleading, and the defendant joins in demurrer, the plaintiff shall be at liberty to enter the issue in law upon the roll, and move for a concilium, without Amendments are either at common law, or by statute. At common law, there was very little room for amendments: for, according to Britton, the judges were to record the parols, or pleadings, deduced before them in judgment; but they were not to erase their records, nor amend them, nor record against their enrolment p, &c. from the return of the write: and a new right of action was considered, in this respect, as a new count b. Yet, where the plaintiffs declared as executors, on a promise to their testator, and issue was joined on a plea of the statute of limitations, the court of King's Bench, after two terms, permitted the plaintiffs to amend, by laying the promise to have been made to themselves c: But the amendment in this case was under particular circumstances; and if it had not been allowed, the action would have been lost, by the running of the statute of limitations d. It is now the practice however, in the King's Bench, to permit a new count to be added after the end of the second term, when the cause of action is substantially the same; though not for a different cause of action.

In C. P.

In the Common Pleas, the course of the court formerly was, that the plaintiff might, at any time before the end of the second term, have leave to amend his declaration, by adding new counts, but not afterwards . At present, however, it is not an invariable rule in that court, that a new count shall not be added after the second term. The principle of the rule is, that as the plaintiff would have been out of court at the end of the second term, if he had not declared at all, so the court will not suffer him to declare upon a fresh cause of action, after that time has elapsed f; but when the cause of action is substantially the same, a new count may be added: Therefore, where the plaintiff, having obtained leave to amend a count in his declaration, added new counts, which contained no new cause of action, but only varied the manner of stating that which was demurred to, the court of Common Pleas would not order them to be struck out g. So, in an action by the assignees of a bankrupt, for the rescue of goods distrained for rent due to the bankrupt, that court allowed the declaration to be amended, by adding new counts, stating the facts to have taken place in the time of the provisional assignees, though two terms had elapsed since the return of the writ, the cause of action being substantially the same h. In an action for money lost by stock-jobbing, on the statute 7 Geo. II. c. 8. the court of Common Pleas permitted the declaration to be amended, as between the plaintiff and defendant, by changing it from assumpsit to debt 1: But where the plaintiff, having sued out process in debt, declared in case, by which the bail were discharged, that court refused to amend the declaration, by changing it from case to debt k. And in an action of debt, to recover penalties against a sheriff's officer for extortion, on the statute 32 Geo. II. c. 28. § 12. that court will not allow the declaration to be amended, by adding new counts on the statute 23 Hen. VI. c. 91.

In a real action, it is not of course to amend the declaration or count, In real action. in the Common Pleas; but the demandant ought to make out a case by affidavit : And the court refused to allow the demandant in a writ of right to amend the mistake of a christian name in the count, or to discontinue the suit, though an affidavit accounting for the mistake was produced b. In a subsequent case, they refused to permit the count in a writ of right to be amended, by introducing an additional step in the descent; though it was sworn that the mistake had arisen from the demandant having been misinformed in the country, where inquiry had been made, respecting the title, and that the demandant would be barred, unless the amendment were allowed c: And amendments are so little favoured in a writ of right, that after an amendment of the count had been made under a judge's order, the court discharged the order for making it d. So, they would not allow a writ of summons to be quashed, which had been irregularly executed e. And an amendment of the disseisor's name was refused, in a writ of entry sur disseisin en le post f. But a declaration on a writ of partition, and the sheriff's return, were amended, by striking out an erroneous description of the quality of the estates conveyed to the different parties s. And the demandant was allowed to withdraw a demurrer and reply de novo, in a writ of formedon, upon shewing good ground by affidavit h.

Fines and recoveries, being considered as common assurances, the court Of fines, and of Common Pleas will amend them, when they have sufficient authority, so as to effectuate the intention of the parties. The ground upon which Ground of. the court proceeds, in making these amendments, is the statute 8 Hen. VI. c. 12. which authorizes them to amend the misprision of the clerk; and as the pracipe is the cursitor's instruction for an original writ, so a decd to lead or declare the uses is considered as his instruction for a fine or recovery i. By the above statute, a mistake in the form k, teste l, or return m Of writ of coveof a writ of covenant for levying a fine, or writ of entry for suffering a recovery n, may be amended by the court, where the mistake was occasioned by the misprision of the clerk, and there is something to amend by; but otherwise, it seems, it is not amendable o.

So, the court allowed the warranty in a fine to be amended, by altering it from a warranty by the husband and wife, and the heirs of the husband, to a warranty by the husband and wife, and the heirs of the wife. But where there was no deed to declare the uses, they would not permit an alteration to be made in the christian d or sirnames e of the parties: And if the name of a party be written on an erasure, this, being a suspicious circumstance, must be explained by affidavit, before the amendment can be made f; although the party had signed his right name at the foot of the deed g. Where the deed was general, and the intent only proved by affidavit, the court would not allow the number of acres inserted in a fine to be increased h. So, where a fine was levied, of thirty acres of land, twelve acres of meadow, and twenty five acres of pasture, and in the deed to lead the uses, the estate was described as consisting of thirty five acres in the whole, the court refused to amend the fine, by increasing the quantity of each species of land, so as to make each cover the whole quantity intended to be conveyed i. And where a mistake having been made in the concord of a fine, in the number of messuages to be conveyed, the writ of covenant was altered in conformity thereto, but was afterwards restored to its original form; the court would not amend the concord by the writ of covenant so altered, but left the party to his remedy by a new caption, or by re-acknowledging the concord k. So, if there be two practipes to a fine, and the premises be described in the one as manors tithes and tenements, and in the other as tenements only, the court will not allow the fine to pass 1. But a fine, with double operation, was amended, by striking out lands in reversion m.

When not allowed, by increasing quantity of land.

The court in one case permitted the name of a parish to be inserted in a fine, according to the deed to lead the uses, although, on account of the length of time which had clapsed since the date of the deed, no one could swear that the parcels lying in that parish were intended to pass n; and in another, the fine was amended, by inserting a parish different from that which was named in the deed to lead the uses, it being certain by the deed, which specified the quantities and occupiers, that the land was in-

In warrant of attorney.

A warrant of attorney in a recovery was amended in one case, by inserting an additional christian name of the vouchee b; and in another, by substituting the name of the attorney for that of the vouchee, which had been inserted by mistake instead of the attorney's . But it is now settled, that the court will not amend a warrant of attorney, which is the act of the party d: and therefore they refused to amend a recovery, by adding the name of one of the parties, which had been omitted in the warrant of attorney; nor would they suffer the recovery to pass with this defect. So, where the pracipe, in the vouchee's warrant of attorney in a recovery, rightly described the parties to the plea, but the body of the warrant of attorney expressed that the vouchee appointed his attorney, to gain or lose in a plea of land against the tenant, instead of the demandant, the court refused either to amend the warrant of attorney, or to suffer the recovery to pass, and construe the latter clause as repugnant and inoperative f. So, they would not direct their officer to pass a recovery, where there was a mistake in the form of the writ of entry, to which the warrant of attorney related, by making it a demand, instead of a pracipe s; nor would they permit the same mistake to be rectified, by amending the warrant of attorney h: And where a part of the premises named in the deed to lead the uses had been omitted in the copy of the pracipe, which precedes the warrant of attorney, the court refused to permit an amendment, by inserting the words omitted; saying they could not apply the warrant of attorney to premises not named in the pracipe i. The pracipe for the writ of entry however, at the head of the warrant of attorney, is not so conclusively a part of it, but that it may be amended, after execution, by the writ of entry k: And where the vouchee's warrant of attorney in a recovery omitted to express, in the body of the warrant, against whom the plea of land was, which appeared by the præcipe, the court, though they would not amend the warrant of attorney, held that the authority must refer to the plea as described by the præcipe, and permitted the recovery to pass 1. So, a recovery was permitted to pass, where the warrant of attorney did not state between whom the plea of land was; it being evident from the pracipe, for what purpose the attornies were appointed m: and also, where the warrant of attorney was " in a plea of land," omitting the words " to gain or lose "." And where, in the warrant of attorney, the words, to gain or lose

So, a recovery was allowed to pass, although the words "their attornies" were omitted in the warrant of attorney given by two vouchees b. And if a wrong sirname of the demandant be inserted by mistake in the warrant of attorney and subsequent instruments, the court will allow the recovery to pass, on the production of a new warrant of attorney, rectifying such mistake, and on depositing the other instruments with the officer in the mean time c.

A recovery may also be amended, by the deed to lead or declare the uses, In description in the description of the premises, or of the place where they are situate d. With regard to the former, it has been holden, that a recovery may be amended, by inserting other premises not mentioned therein, according to the deed to lead or declare the uses, on payment of an additional fine at the alienation office c: and it has been amended, by increasing the quantities of specific closes, described in the deed as being less than they really were f. amendment, by increasing the quantity of the latter; as the land would have passed under either description. So, the court would not permit a recovery to be amended, by increasing the quantity of land, where the deed to lead the uses contained sufficient terms to shew that it was intended to pass; nor was it deemed necessary that the exact admeasurement should be inserted in such deed b. And as meadow will pass in a recovery under the word "land," the court it seems will not now amend a recovery, by adding the word "meadow"." A recovery may be amended, by inserting a rent charge d, fee farm rent e, or tithes f, where it appears that they were intended to pass, and the words of the deed are sufficiently comprehensive to include them; or, by inserting the words "the advoveson of," before those of "the rectory of the church of Hs;" or, of "the vicarage h," &c.; or by substituting the words "advowson of the church," for the word "rectory i;" or, the words "perpetual advowsons," for those of "tithes to rectories belonging and appertaining k;" or, by describing tithes, as arising out of a borough and parish, instead of a rectory 1. But the court refused to amend a recovery, suffered many years before, by inserting an advowson, although it was omitted by mistake, and had formed part of the estate since the recovery was suffered; without an affidavit, stating how the presentations had gone in the mean time m. So, an amendment was refused, by striking out the aggregate sum of several rents, and inserting the different rents or sums of which it was composed n. And the court will not amend a recovery, by adding the tithes of the premises, under the word hereditaments, where that word does not occur in the operative part of the deed o; nor, by striking out a "portion of tithes," and substituting "all the tithes" arising from the lands conveyed p.

So, a recovery of the manor of A. and eight messuages in A. was amended, by adding the names of the parishes in which the premises were partly situate; those parishes being comprised in the manor of At. ber of acres, as well as the names of the vendor and occupier, at the time the recovery was suffered. So, where lands in two parishes were conveyed as lying in the parish of G. which was not the true name of either, nor of any parish, but was an addition equally applicable to both, the court permitted both parishes to be added to an old recovery b. And where a deed to make a tenant to the pracipe comprised tithes in two parishes, and an amendment had been improperly introduced into the recovery, which confined its operation to one parish only, the court allowed the words of such amendment to be transposed, so as to give effect to the deed, and comprise both parishes. So, a recovery may be amended, by substituting the parish of A. for B. if the deed to lead the uses comprehend all the estates of the demandant, situate in the county where such parishes lie d. So, a recovery has been amended, by altering the name of a parish misnamed in the deed making the tenant to the pracipe, as well as in the recovery, upon an affidavit that the vouchee was seised of the land in question in one parish, and that he was seised of no land whatever in the other e. And the recovery was amended in a modern case, by inserting the county of the town of S. for the county of S. the court considering it merely as a clerical misprision f. But where the situation of the premises is mistaken in the deed to lead or declare the uses, it cannot be amended by the court g: And they would not permit a recovery to be amended, by inserting a parish not named in the deed to make a tenant to the præcipe, although it appeared that the parish was named in the instructions given for preparing that deed, and that the lands were parcel of an estate which was intended to pass; for by the omission in the deed, there could be no good tenant to the pracipe h. So, the court refused to amend a recovery, by adding two parishes in unqualified terms, where the deed enumerated several manors, and a great extent of lands in many parishes, and the purpose of the amendment was only to include certain parcels of one manor, which lay in the omitted parishes 1. And they will not amend a recovery, by inserting more parishes, unless it be clear that the land in those parishes passed by the deed k; nor unless it appear to be absolutely necessary 1. So, where a recovery was suffered in the city of Litchfield, which is a county of itself, where the vouchee had lands upon which it might operate, the court would not suffer it to be amended, by striking out the city of Litchfield, and inserting the county of Stafford, with other consequential amendments, and also by in-

So, where a vouchee had, in his instructions to suffer a recovery, and in the deed to lead the uses prepared in pursuance thereof, misdescribed the parish in which certain closes were situate, though they were described in the deed with truth and certainty in other respects, the court refused to substitute the parish in which the lands lay, for the parish named in the deed and recovery d.

Of judgment.

The return of the writ of entry may be amended, by adapting it to the time of taking the acknowledgment e: And the return of a writ of summons was altered, by inserting a subsequent return day, where there were several vouchees residing in different counties, and one of them could not sign it until a day after it was made returnable. But the court would not enlarge the return of a writ of summons, so as to make a term intervene between the teste and returns. The judgment on a common recovery has been amended, by striking out the word adjudged, and inserting instead thereof, the word considered h: and amendments have been made in the award and return of the writ of seisin! But, by the statute 23 Eliz. c. 3. § 10. The court, we have seen k, will not entertain a motion on the last day of term, for the amendment of fines or recoveries, or any of the proceedings therein l, or on any subject relating thereto m. And when a fine or recovery is moved to be amended, the court will always require an affidavit to be made, that the possession has been in conformity to, and followed the deed to lead or declare the uses, since such fine or recovery was levied or suffered n: And a recovery was not permitted to be amended, on an unqualified affidavit that the possession had gone along with the title, for a period long before the deponent's knowledge, without stating the grounds of his belief o. On applying to amend a recovery, it is not necessary to shew a title to the court, further back than a seisin in tail of the vouchee P. And it is a rule, that the material part of the deed, which is to authorise the amendment, shall be read to the court by one of the serjeants at law,

In the Common Pleas, it is a rule, that before the declaration is actually entered, the plaintiff may amend it, paying costs or giving an imparlance at his own election, by order of a judge of the court, or prothonotary: and even after it is entered, if the amendment be but a small matter, that doth not deface the roll, it is amendable, before issue or demurrer entered, by rule of court, upon payment of costs, and liberty to plead with a new or further imparlance 1. But where the defendant had demurred, and given a rule to join in demurrer, the court held that the plaintiff must pay costs, on amending his declaration, and could not amend on giving an imparlance m. And where a motion was made to amend a declaration, after the plea-roll filed, it was objected that the motion ought to be to amend the roll, and not the declaration: and the amendments prayed being very long, and such as could not be made without greatly defacing the roll, the motion was denied; although it was contended that a vacatur might be marked on the roll filed, or it might be taken off the file, and a new roll of the some number filed in its place, which the court held to be an unwarrantable practice. It has been said, that when amendments are made at the trial, they are made without costs b. But this must be understood as confined to cases, where the action is meant to be defended on the merits: For where the ground of defence is some formal slip or mistake in the declaration, which would be obviated by the amendment, the plaintiff must pay all the costs subsequent to the declaration, if the defendant will thereupon pay the debt and previous costs; or, in an action for general damages, let judgment go by default c; or, in ejectment, give up the possession of the premises d; but otherwise, the plaintiff, will be allowed to amend, on payment of the costs of the application merely d.

Rule to plead, in K. B.

In C. P.

Pleading de

Amending pleas, or replications, &c

On amending the declaration in the King's Bench, after plea pleaded, the defendant is at liberty to plead de novo, if his case require it, and has two days allowed him for that purpose, after the amendment made, and payment of costs e; and if a rule to plead be entered the same term the amendment is made, though before such amendment, it is sufficient; otherwise a new rule to plead must be entered. But, in the Common Pleas, we have seen, the defendant is entitled in all cases, on amending the declaration, to a new four day rule to plead 8: And in that court, after an amendment of a declaration, the defendant is at liberty to plead de novo, that is, he may do so if he has occasion, or thinks proper, but he is not obliged to vary his first defence h: And as this liberty is not incident to every amendment, it is not always necessary to insert it in the judge's order to amend i. If the declaration, however, be amended after issue delivered, it should be re-delivered after the amendment made, and payment of costs i.

The reason for not permitting a new count to be added, or right of action alleged, after the end of the second term, is that the plaintiff is obliged to declare within two terms; and a new count or right of action is considered as a new declaration. But this reason is not applicable to pleas or replications, &c. which may be amended at any time, so long as they are in paper: Thus, where the defendant in trespass pleaded two pleas in Hilary term, and in Trinity term, after issue joined, obtained a rule to shew cause why he should not have leave to amend his two pleas, and to add a third plea, the rule was made absolute, upon payment of costs. So where, in a plea by an executor of a former judgment recovered, a less sum was stated by mistake than the judgment was really for; the court of Common Pleas permitted the defendant to amend the record, by inserting the real sum in the plea, though the application for such amendment was not made till a considerable time after the record had been made up *: and the plaintiff in such case was allowed to reply per fraudema. So where, in covenant, the defendant was not allowed to give a counter-demand in evidence at the trial, under a notice of set off delivered with the plea of non est factum, the court afterwards granted a rule to shew cause, why the defendant should not be permitted to plead a set off, on payment of the costs of the former trial b. And, in a late case c, the court of Common Pleas allowed several avowries in replevin to be amended, by altering the name and description of the locus in quo, and stating the holding to have been for a year, instead of half a year, and also by adding new avowries, varying the amount of the rent; although issue had been joined, and notice of trial given and countermanded, and more than two terms had elapsed, previously to the application for the amendment. In like manner, the plaintiff has been allowed to amend, by withdrawing his replication, and replying de novo, after a lapse of many terms d: And, in one case, the plaintiff had leave to amend his replication, where issue had been joined upon it, and the cause entered at the assizes, and made a remanet for defect of jurors. But where, to a plea of specialties outstanding, in an action on simple contract against an executrix, the plaintiffs replied assets ultra, which was found for them, but the verdict set aside, the court of King's Bench refused to give them leave to alter their replication, and reply fraud f; for besides that there had been a trial, it might have been dangerous to permit the alteration; because the defendant, on the former issue, might have paid away assets, as knowing the replication could not affect her. So, where the plaintiff had been nonsuited, upon a general replication, "that the cause of action arose within six years," the court refused to set aside the nonsuit, and to give the plaintiff leave to reply de novo, "that the writ of latitat issued within the six years g."

After a demurrer, the courts would not formerly have permitted an After demurrer, amendment to be made, without the consent of the adverse party h. But of late years, they have not observed the same strictness as formerly, with regard to amendments; and it is much better for the parties that they should not. Hence it is now settled, that after a demurrer, or joinder in demurrer, either party is at liberty to amend, as a matter of course, whilst the proceedings are in paper k: Indeed, the very intent of requiring mistakes in point of form to be shewn for cause of demurrer, was to give the party an opportunity of amending. And even where the proceedings are entered on record b, and the demurrer has been argued, the courts will give leave to amend, where the justice of the case requires it, and there is any thing to amend by, upon payment of costs d. But, in the Common Pleas, after a party has once amended on a demurrer, the court will not give him leave to amend again, on a second demurrer.

By withdrawing demurrer, after argument, and pleading or replying de novo.

. Upon similar grounds, the courts will sometimes give a party leave to withdraw his demurrer, after it has been argued, and to plead or reply de novo, in order to let in a trial of the merits! Thus, in the King's Bench, after a demurrer to the defendant's plea had been argued, and the matter stood over for the judgment of the court, a rule was made to shew cause, why the plaintiff should not have leave to withdraw his demurrer, and reply to the plea; which rule, no cause being shewn, was afterwards made absolute s: So, in the Common Pleas, where the defendant pleaded, in debt on bond, that he paid the money before the day, according to the condition, which was in the disjunctive, to pay on or before the day, and the plaintiff demurred to the plea, the court, after argument, allowed him to withdraw his demurrer, and to reply, upon payment of costs h. And the demandant, we have seen i, was allowed to withdraw a demurrer, and reply de novo, in a writ of formedon, upon shewing good ground by affidavit. The courts, however, will always take care, that if one party obtain leave to amend, or to withdraw his demurrer, the other party shall not be delayed or prejudiced thereby k.

When not allowed.

But the giving or withholding leave to withdraw demurrers, is altogether discretionary in the courts 1: Therefore where, to an action of debt upon a bail bond, the defendant pleaded there was no bill of Middlesex, and the plaintiff demurred, the court of King's Bench, after delivering their opinion in favour of the defendant, refused to give the plaintiff leave to withdraw his demurrer, and amend m: And, by Wright, Just. "It is not usual to amend, after a demurrer has been argued, and the opinion of the court is known: and it is certainly improper to give leave in the present case, it being an action against bail, whom the court are always inclined to favour." So, where the defendant rejoined to several replications in trespass, and demurred to others, and a verdict was found for him upon the issues in fact, and contingent damages assessed upon the demarrers, which were afterwards overruled; the court of King's Bench refused to let the defendant withdraw his demurrers, and plead to issue a: And, by Denison, Just. "Where the demurrer is first argued, before any trial of the issues, the court will give leave to amend; as in the case of Giddins v. Giddins b.: But this is an attempt to amend issues in law, after a verdict has been found on the issues in fact, and contingent damages assessed; of which there never was an instance. And we do not know where it would end; nor how the cause could be again carried down to trial. The court cannot help seeing that this is upon record: Here are verdicts and contingent damages found. The cases of amendment cited are, when the whole is supposed to be in paper; or clse the court could not have done it. We have no authority to do this, after it is plainly upon record." So, where judgment had been given for the defendant on demurrer to a plea, the court of Common Pleas would not, in a subsequent term, set aside that judgment, and suffer the plaintiff to reply, by confessing the matters contained in the plea, and taking judgment of assets quando acciderint .

Whilst the proceedings are in paper, the amendment is at common law; Amendments at and not within any of the statutes of amendments, which relate only to proceedings of record d. And there is no difference, as to the doctrine of amending at common law, between civil and criminal cases e: nor between penal and other actions f. Thus, in a qui tam action for usury, the plain. In penal action. tiff was permitted to amend his declaration, by altering the date of a note, after issue joined and entered on the roll, and after many terms had elapsed since the commencement of the action g. A-similar amendment was permitted, in a subsequent case, after the record had been made up for trial, and withdrawn upon discovery of the mistake h. So, where the defendant was served with the copy of a latitat in a penal action, by a wrong name, and declaration filed conditionally by the same name, to which he appeared, and pleaded a misnomer in abatement, the court of King's Bench held, that a judge's order to amend the bill and declaration, by substituting the true name, was good; and that after such amendment, the proceedings could not be set aside for irregularity i. And in general it seems, that where there has been no unnecessary delay on the part of the plaintiff, the courts will give him leave to amend his declaration in a penal action, even after the time allowed for bringing a new one is expired'k. But where the plaintiff in such an action has been guilty of any unnecessary delay in prosecuting his suit, the courts in their discretion will not permit amendments to be made in the declaration, though the pleadings are still in paper*: And in a late case, the court of Common Pleas would not, in a penal action, alter the term of which the declaration was entitled, to a previous term, without a sufficient reason being assigned by affidavit. So, in an action of debt, to recover penalties against a sheriff's officer for extortion, on the statute 32 Geo. II. c. 28. that court, we have seen c, would not allow the declaration to be amended, by adding new counts on the statute 23 Hen. VI. c. 9. And there is said to be no instance, in which the court of King's Bench have given leave to amend, as to the parties to the suit in a qui tam action, after demurrer d.

By statutes of amendments, after proceedings are entered on record.

When the proceedings are entered on record, the courts, it is said, will amend no farther than is allowable by the statutes of amendments. By the first of these statutes, (14 Edw. III. stat. 1. c. 6.) it is enacted, that " no process shall be annulled or discontinued, by misprision of the clerk, " in writing one syllable or letter too much or too little; but as soon as " the mistake is perceived, by challenge of the party, or in other manner, " it shall be amended in due form, without giving advantage to the party "that challengeth the same, because of such misprision." The judges construed this statute so favourably for suitors, that they extended it to a word f. And, by the 9 Hen. V. stat. 1. c. 4. it is declared, that the shall have the same power, as well after as before judgment, so long as the record and process are before them. This statute is confirmed, and made perpetual by 4 Hen. VI. c. 3. with a proviso, that it shall not extend to process of outlawry, &c. By the 8 Hen. VI. c. 12. the justices are further empowered to examine and amend what they shall think, in their discretion, to be the misprision of their clerks, in any record, process, word, plea, warrant of attorney, writ, panel, or return: And, by the 8 Hen. VI. c, 15. they may amend the misprisions of their clerks and other officers, as sheriffs, coroners, &c. in any record, process, or return before them, by error or otherwise, in writing a letter or syllable too much or too little. These are, properly speaking, the only statutes of amendments s: and it seems they apply to penal as well as to other actions h; but they do not extend to criminal cases i, nor, as it should seem, to process in inferior courts k.

The language, however, used by the court in this case, "that the words of the statutes of amendments do not extend to inferior courte," must, it is presumed by Mr. Durnford, be understood with this qualification, that the inferior court itself cannot amend: For, if a writ of error be brought in the King's Bench from an inferior

In order to amend upon these statutes, it is a general rule, that there When there is must be something to amend by. And in compliance with this rule, it has been determined, that the original writ a, or bill b, is amendable by the instructions given to the officer; the declaration by the bill c; the pleadings, subsequent to the declaration, by the paper-book d, or draft under counsel's hande; the nisi prius roll by the plea roll f; the verdict, whether general or special, by the plea roll s, memory h, or notes i of the judge, or notes of the associate k, or clerk of assize 1: and if special, by the notes of counsel<sup>m</sup>, or even by an affidavit of what was proved upon the trial n; the judgment by the verdict o; and the writ of execution by the judgment p, or by the award of it on the roll q, or by former process r. even after a trial has been had thereon, and the plaintiff has been nousuited, or failed in producing the record.

After error brought, in K. B.

In Exchequer Chamber.

In House of Lords.

Of mistake in transcript.

The amendment may be made in any stage of the proceedings a: and those things which are amendable before error brought, are amendable afterwards, so long as diminution may be alleged, and a certiorari awarded . After error brought in the King's Bench, on a judgment of the Common Pleas, the amendment may be made in the former court', or in the court below d. If it be made below, a certiorari may be had, on alleging diminution, to bring up the record in its amended state; or, if the clerk of the treasury of the Common Pleas attend with the record in the King's Bench, the latter court on motion will order the transcript to be amended by it. And this way of amending the transcript in the King's Bench, is the course of the court, in order to save a certiorari; for if the record be right below, the party, upon diminution alleged, may have a certiorari of common right for bringing it upf. After error brought in the Exchequer Chamber, upon a judgment of the King's Bench, it is said to be necessary to make the amendment in the latter court; us this differs from the case of a writ of error from the Common Pleas, because that court is supposed to send up the very record, but the King's Bench sends only a transcript f. But where the issues are entered informally, the court of Exchequer Chamber will adjourn the hearing of the case, to afford an opportunity for the party to apply to the court below, to amend the record, unless the counsel will consent to argue upon the supposition of such an amendment h. When the record has been amended, it is either certified into the Exchequer Chamber, upon diminution alleged i; or upon carrying it there, by the clerk of the treasury of the King's Bench, the justices and barons will order the transcript to be amended k: or the transcript may be brought back, and amended in the King's Bench, by the original record 1. So, after error brought in the House of Lords, upon a judgment of the King's Bench m, or of the Common Pleas affirmed in that court on a writ of error n, the amendment should be made in the court of King's Bench, where the record still remains. If there be any mistake in the transcript, by the negligence of the clerk, the court above, on carrying up the record, will order the transcript to be amended by ito: and though, after a writ of error, it is not usual to suffer an amendment of the record of an inferior court , yet where there Of proceedings is a mistake in the transcript, the court above will order it to be rectified b: And a certiorari has been issued to the judge of an inferior jurisdiction, to return the practice of his court c. The clerk of the errors in the Common Pleas, in transcribing the record, by mistake entitled the declaration generally, instead of specially, and error was assigned thereon; after which he amended the transcript, by inserting the special title; and the court of King's Bench would not restore the transcript, to the state in which it stood at the time when the plaintiff in error assigned his error d.
